Mystery Solved?

CARS KILL C. DILLON.

Vengeance Comes By Hand of Fate?

Woman's Slayer Done to Death Under Chicago Flier Near Evanston.

Police Say Los Angeles Murderer Committed Suicide to Escape Capture.

Descriptions Tally and New Clues Are Uncovered Almost Hourly.

CAPTAIN C. DILLON was killed by a train at Evanston, Ill., yesterday. The Chicago police believe he was the C. Dillon wanted in Los Angeles for the bungalow murder and that he committed suicide fearing arrest. The descriptions of the [illegible]

Right beside beneath the wheels of a fast flyer Northwestern railway train on the outskirts of Chicago is [illegible] by the police to have been the body of the mysterious Dillon, wanted for the murder of the woman in the Los Angeles bungalow crime.

Telegrams from the Chicago police to the Los Angeles police last night stated that the officers in Chicago are almost positive that the man wanted in the world-wide search for the murderer had deliberately ended his life by throwing himself in front of the train, because of his fear of capture.

The man who killed himself by the Northwestern Flyer was Caiphias Dillon of Evanston and he had returned from Los Angeles to Chicago only last Sunday. It is positively known from a postal card he wrote that he was in Los Angeles on the day that the woman accompanied a man to the vacant house in Arlington street and was brutally murdered.

The Chicago police wired to the police here last night that four women in Chicago asserted that they believed the dead woman to have been Mrs. Bessie Jones, whose home was formerly at No. 510 Berkeley avenue, Norfolk, Va., but who had lived in Chicago as the wife of Dillon. These women said that Dillon was a native of Norfolk and that his mother still resided there.

SAME NEIGHBORHOOD.

Advices from Chicago state that Dillon lived with Mrs. Jones only a few blocks from where his wife resided. It is stated that six weeks ago Dillon left his wife and he was often seen with Mrs. Jones.

At this juncture comes a queer, unexplained part of the story, which would seem to indicate that the Mrs. Jones was not the woman in the bungalow mystery. Dillon disappeared six weeks ago and a few days later Mrs. Jones disappeared, but friends of hers say that they received postal cards from her a few days later from Norfolk. This would dispose of the theory that she accompanied Dillon to Los Angeles or that she followed him to California.

Another important thing which bears on this is the fact that Mrs. Jones's friends say she was not a Catholic while the woman killed in Arlington street wore the badge of the Sodality of the church and from that the police here are certain she was a Catholic.

In support of the theory that the slain woman was Mrs. Jones the Chicago police say that several woman friends identified pictures printed in the East of the murdered woman as those of Mrs. Jones. However, these

District Attorney Says Johnson's Agent Got Hearsay Testimony.

I.W.W. Lawyers, Alleging Threats, Ask Citation for Contempt.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN DIEGO (Cal.) May 18.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Regarding the Weinstock charges against the District Attorney's office here and San Diego citizens generally in their conduct of the I.W.W. cases, investigated by Harris Weinstock, as a special agent of Gov. Johnson in April, Dist.-Atty. H. S. Utley was today highly indignant that Weinstock should make the statements attributed to him in the press dispatches of the report.

DIST.-ATTY. UTLEY'S STATEMENT.

He said:

"The statement that the District Attorney for San Diego county did not do his duty is absolutely and unequivocally false, and I shall hold him personally responsible for his statements. I know my duty and he evidently does not know his. The statement that the right of free speech has been trampled upon is false, and Weinstock could have found that out if he had taken the trouble to investigate. That statement renders his report useless, because it is barren of fact.

"So far as I am concerned, neither Weinstock nor any other official can say that of me which is untrue and undeserved. He misdirected from the very start that he was unfamiliar with his own duties. I considered his appointment and his mission to this city an insult to the city and county officials, who had attempted to enforce the law under intolerable conditions, which have been rendered worse by threats of assassination, and I disregarded his official status, if he had any. His unfamiliarity with the duties of the District Attorney was so patent as to cause me to smile when he inquired over the telephone whether I did not want to cross-examine men in Los Angeles who had made affidavits, so he informed me, and which I never was permitted to see. The gentleman invited me to be present at

CITIZENS STRIVE DESPERATELY TO SAVE TOWN.

Supplies by Flood from Melting Snow in Mountains, Colorado Sweeps Away Concrete Wall. Santa Fe Railroad Leads Its Aid. Lighting Plant in Jeopardy.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN BERNARDINO, May 18.—With 1000 feet of concrete wall gone and the heavy current beating violently against the outer embankment protecting the water plant, Needles tonight is gravely threatened by the Colorado River.

The Santa Fe railroad has joined forces with the struggling people of the town from the flood. All night tonight a force of 300 men headed by expert engineers, and supported by all the motive power the railroad has at Needles, will be desperately building a retaining wall out in the stream to turn the current.

If the water and lighting plant go out tonight, Needles will be in total darkness, without water, and in desperate straits.

The floods are occasioned by the sudden rise of temperature during the past week, melting the deep snows on the Green Mountains. The snows are piled to a depth of forty feet in some of the canyons, and under the burning sun veritable floods from acres of snow fields are feeding the Colorado River.

SAN DIEGO AUTHORITIES ARRAIGNED BY WEINSTOCK.

Special Commissioner of Gov. Johnson Says the Vigilantes of That City Are Worse Offenders Than the I. W.W. Whose Doctrines of Anarchy are Held Up to Contempt and Scorn—His Suggestion for a Solution.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, May 18.—Harris Weinstock, special commissioner appointed to investigate the I. W. W. situation in San Diego, has submitted his report to Gov. Johnson and it was made public today.

At the present time the Governor is counselling with the attorney-general over the advisability of interfering as recommended bby the commissioner and having the State prosecute the viligantes of San Diego as the commissioner says the District Attorney of San Diego will not do his duty.

The report, a voluminous document, indicates that while the I. W. W. constitute a lawless class, growing out of European conditions and imported from Europe, the viligantes who punished the industrial workers were guilty of greater wrongs than they; that the right of free speech has been trampled upon; and that the I. W. W. disturbances have crystallized the growing problem of anarchistic doctrine, which demands immediate and careful legislation.

Commissioner Weinstock finds from their own lips and from the literature given to him by members of the Industrial Workers of the World, that they teach and preach the following doctrines:

A—That workmen are to use any and all tactics that will get the results sought with the least possible expenditure of time and energy.

B—The question of right or wrong is not to be considered.

C—The avenging sword is to be unsheathed with all hearts resolved on victory or death.

D—The workman is to help himself when the proper time comes.

E—No agreement with an employer of labor is to be considered by the worker as sacred or inviolable.

F—The worker is to produce inferior goods and kill time in getting tools repaired and in attending to repair work; all by a silent understanding.

G—The worker is to look forward to the day when he will confiscate the factories and drive out the owners.

H—The worker is to get ready to cause natural industrial paralysis, with the view of confiscating all industries, meanwhile taking forcible possession of all things that he may need.

I—Strikers are to disobey and treat with contempt all judicial injunctions.

He finds also that the I.W.W. went to San Diego in an evident intention to try to break up the trade unions, and that they deliberately disobeyed a city ordinance concerning street speaking. That ordinance permitted street speaking only within certain sections. Subsequent to this defiance of the ordinance, although all other classes of street speakers were permitted to speak in the sections for such purposes that privilege was entirely withdrawn from the I.W.W., and Commissioner Weinstock holds that this was a violation of the right to free speech.

The commissioner finds that excessive and shameful brutality was used against the I.W.W., and he criticises very severely not only the police department, but as well the vigilante committee, the various public and business organizations and the newspapers of San Diego generally.

He narrates many acts of what he calls wanton brutality by the self-appointed vigilantes of San Diego, and declares them to be far worse lawbreakers than the men of whom they tried to rid San Diego. In one place he tells that he has been in Russia and that one time during the taking of testimony he wondered whether he were not now in Russia or in the "alleged land of the free and home of the brave." He scores very severely the vigilantes, who, he said, trampled upon the constitutional

PLANS OF ASTORS DO NOT INCLUDE FORCE FAMILY.

BY MARGARET W. DE PEYSTER.

[THE TIMES WIRELESS, CABLE, EASTERN AND OVERLAND NEWS SERVICE.]

NEW YORK, May 18.—A few minutes before they left New York today on the steamer Oceanic for Europe, Mrs. Ava Willing and her daughter, Muriel, explained their future plans. The youthful heiress was the first to break the silence which mother and daughter maintained throughout the weeks spent in this city since their arrival to attend the colonel's funeral.

"We will be back soon," said Miss Willing with a wan smile. "Mother is going to live here with Vincent, and I shall go to school afterwards."

Mrs. Astor confirmed this. With her arm around her winsome daughter's waist she added:

"It has never been my custom to give out my plans for the future, but the managers of the estate have felt that the best way to avoid public attention is to forestall it by making known in a general way what our intentions are.

"My son Vincent is too busy here at present to accompany me to Europe. I hope he may follow me later, perhaps within a month. We are anxious to be together—all of us. He will stay with me as long as he may. We hope we may be able to stay until I am able to settle matters which I left in confusion, hurrying to this country. It may be that he will be obliged to return before us. At any rate we shall live here together when I return in three months."

Mrs. Ava Willing Astor, who was divorced from John Jacob Astor, did not discuss her reported engagement to Maurice Rostand, second son of Edmond Rostand, poet and author of "Chantecler" and "Cyrano de Bergerac." Young Rostand, who as a child play, "Le Bon Petit Diable," gained distinction by his writing. He and his mother won favor with a child play, "Le Bon Petit Diable." The young man made an English translation of "Chantecler." He got into the prints for making love to a blonde young woman behind the scenes during one of the rehearsals. Mrs. Astor has refused to deny the report. Mrs. Astor is about forty years old, and Maurice Postand at least twenty years younger.

Orders have been given for the renovation for the great Astor place at Newport, and its preparation for occupancy in the fall by Mrs. Astor, her children and a full retinue of servants.

"Is it your intention to give up your home on the other side?" Mrs. Astor was asked.

"Not at present," she replied. "I think my son will always be glad to retain a house of his own there."

Nothing is plainer to the intimate friends of the Astors, and even to those who have close business relations with members of the family, than that while there is no lack of affection for Madeline, the girl widow of Col. Astor, the affairs and plans of the Force family other than herself are not being considered in such plans as Vincent Astor and his mother are making.

Vincent Astor accompanied his mother and sister from their hotel to the boat. He verified Mrs. Astor's statement, saying:

"As soon as the affairs of the estate will permit, I shall join my mother and sister abroad, and we shall make an automobile tour of the continent. We expect to be back in about three months.

"My mother will make her home with me, of course. Just now we have not decided where we shall live. Probably we shall go to Newport for a time."

"Will your mother re-enter society here?" he was asked.

"When the proper respect has been paid to my father's memory by the period of formal mourning, my mother will, of course, take up her social duties. It will be expected of her, and I shall need her help."

Thus the son indicated that the full prestige of the heir to the Astor millions will be placed in the balance, assuring his mother absolute leadership in the circles which have ever revolved around the Astor family as the pivotal center of American society.

Southern Pacific Loses Its Prayer to Hold Up Decision in the Pre-cooling Case.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—A preliminary injunction sought by the Southern Pacific railroad against the latest decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission in the long litigation growing out of the pre-cooling and pre-icing cases brought by California citrus fruit interests has been denied by Judge Garland of the Commerce Court. It is estimated that Judge Garland's decision will save California growers and shippers $600,000 a year.

RUEF WILL BE FREED.

Plans for a Parole Under Way.

Judge Dunne Dismisses All Eighty-four Indictments Against Convict.

Grand Jury Charges Against Glass, Brown, Halsey and Others Dropped.

Prominent San Franciscans Already Working to Liberate Arch-Grafter.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, May 18.—In obedience to the mandate of the State Appellate Court, Superior Judge Frank H. Dunne dismissed today the eighty-four indictments remaining against Abraham Ruef, former political boss of San Francisco, now serving a sentence of fourteen years in San Quentin Penitentiary for complicity in the corruption in municipal affairs which was uncovered in 1906.

Judge Dunne included in his order of dismissal all of the indictments remaining from the days of the graft prosecution except twenty-four against former Mayor Eugene E. Schmitz and ten against Louis Glass of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company, which will be passed upon by Superior Judge William H. Lawlor in the near future.

The indictments dismissed by Judge Dunne were as follows:

Eighty-four indictments against Ruef; several indictments against Louis Glass; against E. Parker Brown, attorney indicted for having bribed Supervisor Oldenburg; against Percy V. Brown, private detective for Pacific Call, head of the Employers' Association, for subornation of perjury; against Walter McGowan, juror in the prosecution; for bribery; against James M. Coffroth, prize ring promoter, for bribery; against Eugene E. Schmitz for bribery; against Theodore Halsey of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company, for bribery, and against Jeremiah Dinan, Chief of Police under Schmitz, for conspiracy and perjury.

MOTION FOR DISMISSAL.

Asst. Dist.-Atty. Maxwell McCall made a motion before Judge Dunne February 20 for the dismissal of the cases of those who had been charged with crime under indictment of the grand jury in connection with the graft cases in San Francisco. A motion in writing was made setting forth that there was not evidence sufficient upon which to hope for a conviction in any of the cases. The attorneys for the defendant acquiesced.

Judge Dunne took the matter under consideration. While the decision was pending, the attorneys for Abraham Ruef, who is now serving a fourteen-year sentance in San Quentin for bribery, petitioned the District Court of Appeal of the First District for a writ of mandamus to compel Judge Dunne to dismiss the Ruef cases. The petition was resisted by Judge Dunne and the District Attorney, who declared the Ruef attorney had erroneously stated in that petition that Ruef has been deprived of his constitutional right to trial within sixty days under the indictment. The matter was heard and the Court of Appeal decided several days ago that Ruef was entitled to an immediate trial or an order from the court on the District Attorney's motion to dismiss the cases.

After hearing all of the arguments the Court of Appeal issued a peremptory writ of mandate compelling Judge Dunne to dismiss the Ruef cases at the next calling of the cases.

The eighty-four indictments were called regularly on the calendar this morning along with all of the other graft cases. Judge Dunne without comment issued a sweeping order granting the motion of the District Attorney for dismissal in all cases.

Judge Dunne's action removed the last legal obstacle to the filing of a petition for Ruef's parole, the California statutes providing that no prisoner may be paroled while indictments are outstanding against him.

Men prominent in local affairs have fathered a movement for Ruef's parole on the ground that Ruef alone should not suffer.

Ruef and Eugene E. Schmitz, Mayor of San Francisco at the time of the fire, were indicted in May, 1907, and convicted of having accepted bribes of $50,000 each in what was known as the trolley and gas franchise cases. The State Supreme Court freed Schmitz on a technicality, but Ruef was sent to prison. A recent attempt to bring Schmitz to trial on other indictments was abandoned because of lack of evidence. Ruef was brought from San Quentin by the prosecution while it was preparing its evidence against Schmitz, but was said to have refused to testify against Schmitz unless indictments outstanding against him were dismissed, so was returned to San Quentin.

Ruef then began to write a history of his career, promising to give full details of the events which led up to graft disclosures and prosecutions. A San Francisco paper published the first installment, which began with Ruef's story of his college days and his later rise to power in San Francisco politics after practicing law for several years.

At the close of this chapter, the newspaper printed the announcement that the remainder of the story would be withheld until Judge Dunne had dismissed the remaining indictments

KING'S DEATH ALTERS PLANS.

Prince of Wales Will Omit Trip to Mediterranean.

His Schedule Will Also Abbreviate American Tour.

Plan to Bring Czarovitch I• Vetoed by Russian Czar.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TOULON (France) May 18.—On account of the mourning in the British court for Frederick of Denmark, the Prince of Wales will not take part in the evolutions of the French fleet on the Mediterranean next week.

SHORTENS AMERICAN TOUR.

[The Times Wireless, Cable, Eastern and Overland News Service.]

LONDON, May 18.—The numerous engagements scheduled for the Prince of Wales as well as his attendance at Magdalen College, Oxford, will shorten his proposed tour in the United States and Canada, but it is now practically certain that the heir apparent to the throne will follow up his first fleeting glimpse of the new world by a prolonged tour a few years later.

The young prince was anxious to have his cousin, the Czarovitch of Russia, accompany him on the coming visit to America, but the Czar vetoed this plan. The Czarovitch is the Czar's only son and he is as careful of him as only an autocratic ruler can be of his heir. But the prince still hopes that his royal playmate will be allowed to be his companion on the world-tour.

Already Americans here are discussing who will have the pleasure of welcoming the boy prince and entertaining him while he is on American soil, and it goes without saying that Ambassador and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid have an exceedingly delicate situation to meet through the pleasant rivalry the prospective social opportunities arouse. Both Mr. and Mrs. Reid enjoy the personal confidence of King George and Queen Mary and they will naturally be consulted in the filling of his royal highness' United States dates. It is very fortunate that we have now in London at the American embassy as tactful an Ambassador and social leader as Whitelaw Reid and Mrs. Reid. In this, as in other matters they have shown themselves equal to any emergency.

Heirs to British and Russian Thrones.

Mounted is the Czarovitch of Russia, whom the Prince of Wales is anxious to have as a companion on his world-tour, to which the Russian ruler will not assent. The picture shows the Czar's hope in his uniform as "Hetman" of all the Cossacks. He was born in July, 1904.

DISAGREE ON SUFFRAGE.

Mme. Nordica and Mary Garden Sail on Same Steamer, But Are Not in Accord in Ideas.

[The Times Wireless, Cable, Eastern and Overland News Service.]

NEW YORK, May 18.—In the same boat, and not yet in the "same boat," Mme. Nordica and Miss Mary Garden sailed for Europe today. They left on the George Washington with Alexander Bonis and Mrs. Collis P. Huntington and 430 other people of more or less note. Mme. Nordica tossed a passing suffragist speech over the rail as they loosed the hawsers and slipped the gangways. Miss Garden tossed her head and said:

"Suffragette, nothing. That is one boat in which Mme. Nordica and I don't sail together. She can talk her head off—beg pardon—talk herself hoarse I mean, but she will never convert me. I am going to shoot pheasants in a place which I am buying for myself in Scotland."

George Young, Mme. Nordica's husband, accompanied the singer for votes to the ship's side. He is just as vigorous a champion of the equal suffrage government as the suffragette soprano. "We are both going on the stump in the fall," he said, "to swing the East into the suffrage column."

Mme. Nordica was full of enthusiasm over the reception which she was given when she sang for suffrage in San Francisco:

"Oh, you women," she said, "if you were only like the women of California. But you could not be. There's only one California."

Miss Inanda Dragna, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Frank Cass was best man.

The ushers were Burton Granville, Lewis Cass, Quincy Cass and Percy Lyon of Los Angeles. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Dragna of this city. She is a graduate in medicine of the University of Pittsburgh.

The groom is a young attorney of Los Angeles, his parents are Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Cass, prominent in business and social affairs of Los Angeles. After a honeymoon tour, the couple will live in Los Angeles.

NEW QUEEN A DELIGHT.

Dane Expect a Season of Gaiety in Copenhagen When Period of Mourning Is Over.

[The Times Wireless, Cable, Eastern and Overland News Service.]

COPENHAGEN, May 18.—Alexandrina, the new Queen of Denmark, promises to delight her subjects. Queen Louise lived austerely despite her great wealth (more than $15,000,000) and the French blood in her veins that came from the Bernadotte line to which she belonged. Queen Alexandrina is far more pleasing and loving, and the court when the period of mourning has passed, may be expected to take on a gaiety it has not shown for some years.

The new King and Queen follow the example of Frederick, whose admiration for the United States was so great that he read American newspapers daily and was a close student of American literature.

The new King is both soldier and scholar. He served as a private in the Danish army and some years ago attained a major-general's rank through promotion, as was often attested by the character of the papers he read before the Society of War Science. He took a university degree when he was 18 and less than a year ago added D.S.C., his thesis for it being a discussion of political science.

TWO-MILLION-DOLLAR ISSUE.

PORTERVILLE, May 18.—Plans are now being considered by the commercial bodies of this city whereby there can be placed before the voters of this county a proposal to issue $2,000,000 in bonds for the construction of a system of good roads to cover all portions of this county. J. W. Martin, a former supervisor, and a good roads enthusiast, has proposed the plan of work to the Chamber and through the local organization it is hoped to bring it to the attention of all the voters.

During the past year there was spent in temporary road work the sum of $100,000. This went for work which will have to be done all over again in two years at the outside. As the county has no bonded indebtedness it is believed money can be had at 4 per cent. At this rate the annual interest charge would be $40,000, which would be paid from the road fund, and still leave $60,000 for the repair and emergency work.

Rough estimates which have been made indicate that the $2,000,000 would be ample for the purpose, in spite of the fact that there is a heavy mileage to be built into the hills.

An attempt was made to raise a bond issue of this size four years ago but the plan failed by reason of a lack of organization.

his alleged investigation, which was crowded with men whom I was then and still am engaged in prosecuting and which was conducted without any oath being administered and at which Weinstock received statements which my investigation and knowledge of the matters referred to showed were without basis.

"To my mind, the whole movement was an attempt to create political capital in favor of the Governor of the State, who was and is very much interested in advancing the candidacy of Theodore Roosevelt. I do not criticise him for this, if he believes the interests of the nation demand the re-election of Roosevelt, but the attempt to create political influence by means of an alleged investigation for which there never was any legal or moral justification, is something that should not be sanctioned by the great State of California and which should be condemned by every citizen of this country.

"I have lived in San Diego for twenty-five years and it has always been a peaceful community until the I.W.W. began preaching anarchistic doctrines here and the citizens in defense of the flag protested after standing it for more than a year. The City Council, in pursuance of the Constitution of the State, passed an ordinance which has been held legal by the Appellate Court and as a pretext for strife the I.W.W. alleged that their rights of speech were violated.

"If there has been wanton brutality by vigilantes, or others, why is it that no complaint has been made to the grand jury, which has been in session for more than four months, or to me, personally?"

Commissioner Weinstock is expected in San Diego tomorrow morning on the steamer Sonoma, which is returning with an excursion party from the Canal Zone.

I.W.W. LAWYERS COMPLAIN TO COURT.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN DIEGO, May 18.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] On a showing in an affidavit sworn to and filed by Attorney Fred Moore that John M. Porter and fifteen others whose names are unknown, by causing the arrest and detention of Moore and his stenographer, W. R. Rawlings, from 5 to 10:20 o'clock this morning, interfered with the duties and officers of the Superior court, Judges W. R. Guy and W. A. Sloane, sitting jointly in Department One, this afternoon said that citations for contempt for Porter and the others would be issued Monday morning.

Moore, who admitted to the court that he and his associate, Marcus W. Robbins, are general counsel for the I. W. W., the American Federation of Labor and the Socialist party, informed Judge Guy he would endeavor to furnish the court with the names of Porter's companions. Porter is a local real estate man and it is alleged he is one of the leaders of the citizens committee which the I. W. W. styles "vigilantes."

Moore and his associate, Marcus Robbins, had asked the court to issue the citation today, but before Judge Guy would agree to consider the request he demanded a written affidavit. Moore and Robbins failed to have the affidavit filed until after 12 o'clock. After considering the sworn statement of Moore, Judge Guy and Judge Sloane agreed that on account of Saturday afternoon being a court half holiday warrants for citation could not be legally issued today. However Judge Guy said that on the showing made he was willing to issue the citations Monday.

Judge Sloane said that from what was shown in the affidavit he was satisfied officers of his court had been interfered with from the fact that Moore had cases pending in his department this morning and that because Moore was unable to be present the business of the court was interrupted.

In reply to Judge Guy's statement that the citation could not be issued until Monday morning, Moore said: "That suits us Your Honor. If we cannot get it sooner Monday will do."

Moore's affidavit was issued following a statement to the effect that station Moore said he was told to drop all connection with the I. W. W. cases and that in case he failed to comply with the order Moore said he was warned to expect the same treatment that was awarded Reitman.

Moore said Porter used vile language toward him and that he was threatened with hanging.

The opening statement in behalf of Moore was made by Robbins.

Moore asked Judge Guy that he be given protection and that an order be issued directing the Sheriff to allow him to establish his office in the County Jail. He said it was impossible for him to perform his duties as counsel for his clients without protection. He said that if the protection of the court is not accorded he would be compelled to sever his connection with the cases now pending.

Moore then related that he was in his office preparing affidavits charging the kidnaping of Rawlings when Detective Shepherd came in and interfered with the work. According to Moore, Rawlings was kidnaped Thursday and taken to Del Mar, where he was kept until late last night. Finding that Judge Guy would not consider a criminal warrant for kidnaping, Moore asked that those who interfered with him this morning be cited for contempt. Soon after the beginning of Moore's complaint, Judge Guy asked the counsel and advice of Judge Sloane, as Moore has charges pending in both courts. Judge Sloane agreed to act with Judge Guy. During the recess, while Moore was preparing his affidavits, Judge Lewis entered into consultation with Judges Guy and Sloane. Later Judge Lewis left the courtroom.

J. M. Porter, named in Moore's affidavits, said tonight that in the main the allegations are false.

"We made no threats," said Porter. "Moore and Robbins were met and asked that they sever their connection with the defense of the I. W. W.'s: that it would be to the best interests of the city if they would withdraw from the cases. No harm was done them, nor was it intended to harm them."

Moore and Robbins said this afternoon they so feared the wrath of the vigilantes that they would go into hiding to remain until the court acted on their appeal Monday morning.

SEARCH THE CITY.

SEEK TWO LAWYERS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN DIEGO, May 18.—Fred H. Moore and Marcus W. Robbins, attorneys for members of the Industrial Workers of the World and others now awaiting trial here, together with William S. Rawlins their office stenographer cannot be found in San Diego tonight, though it is reported that members of a citizens committee have been searching the city since dark in an effort to find them.

The two attorneys sent out signed statements tonight in which they charge that mob violence has invaded the rights of individuals to life, person and property in San Diego and saying that they have been threatened with death if they appear further as counsel for those now awaiting trial. They claim further that the police and sheriff have refused to act to afford them protection until they can get into court Monday.

At that time Judges W. A. Sloane and W. R. Guy, sitting jointly, will hear the affidavit of Moore and take action on the application to have J. M. Porter and fifteen others not named cited to show cause why they should not be punished for contempt of court. It is said that Moore hopes to establish that Porter and the [illegible] unnamed persons are members of the so-called vigilantes committee. Moore is a wealthy resident of San Diego and it is said that those who are accused with him are equally prominent socially and financially. Porter's name is the first to be mentioned in connection with the crusade against the lawless element which has invaded the city.

If any overt acts have been committed by the so-called vigilantes tonight the fact cannot be learned. Chief of Police Wilson has every officer at his command on duty and reports that he has not heard of any violence.

Seventeen arrests have been made since last night as a result of the thirty-three indictments brought by the grand jury yesterday. Sheriff Jennings is now searching for the remaining sixteen, though it is believed most of them are now in Los Angeles.

Much interest attaches to the expected arrival of Col. Harris Weinstock, Gov. Johnson's special commissioner, tomorrow. He is returning on the excursion steamer Sonoma from the Canal Zone, and, it is believed, will stop here. There is said to be ill-feeling against him here on account of the report he made in Sacramento, but Dist.-Atty. Utley says this is not true.

Washington.

SOLUTION IS NOT IN SIGHT.

Control of Democratic Convention Still in Doubt.

Winning Candidate for Nomination Not in Sight.

Clark and Wilson Both Fall far Short of Control.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, May 18.—With more than two-thirds of the delegates to the Democratic national convention elected, control of the Baltimore gathering remains as much in doubt as it did several weeks ago. Claims made today by the managers of the different candidates at the headquarters in Washington made it clear that none of them expects to control the convention through instructions on the first ballot, even though great strides are made for their respective candidates in the conventions and primaries still to be held.

The Democratic convention will consist of 1094 delegates. Under the two-thirds rule applying to Presidential nominations, 729 votes will be necessary for any candidate who secures the nomination.

With about 320 delegates still to be elected, the strength of the respective candidates was given by their headquarters today as follows:

Conceded to Wilson, 80 (not including South Carolina's 18, where the convention indorsed Wilson;) conceded to Underwood, 84; to Harmon, 3; to Baldwin, 14; to Marshall, 26; to Burke, 10. (Considered doubtful, 127.)

Wilson claimed instructed, 243; Kansas 20 (Clark,) and North Dakota, 10 (Burke) claimed as favorable to Wilson (30.) Total of Wilson's claimed strength, 273. Conceded to Clark, 236; to Underwood, 82; to Harmon, 4; to Foss, 26; to Baldwin, 14; to Marshall, 30; to Burke, 10. Considered uninstructed and doubtful, 126.

Underwood claimed as instructed total delegations of Alabama, Florida, Georgia and Mississippi, and six from Tennessee, total ninety; no other claims made.

At the Harmon headquarters today it was said a statement would be made later.

RELATIONS THREATENED.

English Are Wrought Up by Action of Russian Government in Sentencing Woman Disturber.

[The Times Wireless, Cable, Eastern and Overland News Service.]

LONDON, May 18.—Developments in Parliament indicate that the Anglo-Russian entente is seriously threatened by the action just taken by the Russian government in sentencing Kate Malecka to four years at hard labor, followed by perpetual exile in Siberia.

Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Minister, is being strongly pressed by radicals in the House of Commons to get the British representative at St. Petersburg to urge the Czar to release the woman. A petition to the same effect is to be sent by parliamentary radicals direct to the Czar. Miss Malecka was arrested July 14, 1911, in Warsaw, charged with complicity in Polish revolutionary plots.

She is the daughter of a man who was a Polish exile. Miss Malecka was born in England.

The prison sentence condemns Miss Malecka to life among the worst types of criminals. She will work side by side with the human sweepings of the empire. Her work will be of the roughest nature, her food will mostly consist of thin soup, black bread and water, and her bed will be a wooden shelf.

American Eagle Is Screaming Because Moslem Cannon Sank the Steamer Texas.

[The Times Wireless, Cable, Eastern and Overland News Service.]

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 18.—Telegraphing from the Dardanelles, a correspondent reports:

"The work of clearing the straits of mines proceeds languidly, owing to the reluctance of the officials. Two American vessels have been turned back. It is said, however, that by June 1 steamers may pass safely."

Another correspondent telegraphs from Smyrna that difficulties between America and Turkey are threatened, owing to proof having been obtained that the steamer Texas was really sunk by shots from the forts and not by the explosion of a mine. It has also been shown that the vessel is not owned in Greece, but in New York. The arrest of the captain of the lost steamer is adding to the ill-feeling.

THE LOT OF THE CADDIES.

Northern Presbyterian Church Finds that Golf Keeps Them from Sunday-school.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LOUISVILLE (Ky.) May 18.—One hundred thousand caddies are kept from Sunday-school by golf, according to the report prepared by the committee on Sabbath observance for presentation to the 124th general assembly of the Northern Presbyterian Church today.

"Sunday sports blight character," continues the report. "Nine-tenths of those who enter prison started that way by Sabbath breaking, largely due to Sunday sports."

Recommendation of the committee of which James Yearance of New York is chairman, provide that the assembly reiterate its "strong and emphatic disapproval of all secular uses of the Sabbath, all games and sports, in civic life, as well as the army and navy; all unnecessary traveling and all excursions, and urge upon employers of labor and captains of industry to recognize the laboring man's need of his weekly rest day and thereby insure his greater efficiency and happiness and the greater prosperity of both capital and labor."

The Sunday newspaper is condemned.

WOULD EMPLOY EX-PRESIDENTS.

Jobs Found for Them by Chinese Constitutionalist.

Makes Them Life Members of the Upper House.

United States and France Afford Him Models.

[The Times Wireless, Cable, Eastern and Overland News Service.]

PEKING, May 18.—Li Fang Ahlo, who drafted the Constitution of the Chinese republic which will be submitted to the National Assembly, gave out a copy of the document today. It follows practically the Federal law of America and part of that of France.

It provides for a National Assembly to consist of two houses, called the Council of the People and the Council of the Province. The Representatives in the upper house (the Council of the Province) will serve six years and those in the lower house four years. One-third of the upper house is to be chosen every three years and one-half of the lower house every two years. Ex-Presidents become life members of the upper house, the "First Citizen" being thus retained in the government. Members of the lower house are to be chosen by the people, as are those of the upper house by the provincial assemblies. All measures including revenue bills originate in either house. The President and Vice-President are to be elected for terms of six years. They are ineligible for consecutive terms, but are eligible for alternate terms.

As drafted, the Constitution provides that the candidate receiving two-thirds of the votes in the National Assembly becomes President, while the one receiving the second largest number becomes Vice-President. The President's responsibility will be shared by a Premier and a Cabinet. Members of the Cabinet may attend and address either house and will sign all bills with the President. Yet the Cabinet cannot encroach upon the powers of the President, who may dismiss the Ministers without the consent of the Assembly.

Should a bill fail to pass both houses the Cabinet resigns and the President appoints a new one.

Besides having a Cabinet, the President will be assisted by a board of experts having specialized knowledge. Their functions are of a purely advisory nature. The restrictions on the provinces are similar to those on the States in the American Constitution. Mr. Li was born in Honolulu and was graduated from Oahu University. Later he was graduated in law from Cambridge University, England, and it was on account of his profound legal knowledge that President Yuan Shi Kai selected him to draft the Constitution.

Convincing Testimony for Our Alveolar Teeth

However eloquently we may sing our own praises of the wonderful results of the Alveolar Method of teeth restoration, our skill is but as sounding brass when considered with the simple statements of those who have spent their money with us, and are now enjoying Alveolar Teeth.

The strongest argument is the one which is backed by results.

By way of illustration, read this letter—the original being on file in our office:

Dear Sir: I feel it a duty as well as a pleasure to offer you a token of my appreciation for the Alveolar Dental work you placed in my mouth four years ago. Those seventeen teeth are imbedded so firmly that there is positively no perceptible movement of any of them or any uncomfortable feeling. In fact, they feel as if they had grown there.

My articulation and mastication both have been fully restored to normal again and I consider the work a clever and skillful masterpiece of the Dental Art.

Respectfully yours,

no implantation, no surgery, no cutting or boring into the gums, with the attendant pain and risk.

All that we require is two or more teeth in either jaw to work from.

The method differs from ordinary bridge work and is infinitely superior—the system of plates in the mouth is so great a blessing that it needs no argument.

We don't treat all cases alike—we diagnose carefully and then give the patient the proper treatment for his individual case—every man in our office is an expert.

No case too complicated, none too simple for us.

We invite you to come in for a free examination of your teeth.

OUR CHARGES ARE REASONABLE.

We do not ask fancy prices for our work. Just a fair fee—a reasonable sum—for what anyone will gladly and willingly pay for high-grade work such as we invariably execute. Remember that you can always consult us free of charge regarding your teeth troubles, and there is no obligation incurred on your part in so doing.

rights of other men and "proved themselves to be the bitterest enemies of law and order."

Although in nowise countenancing and on the contrary very severely denouncing the I.W.W. for what they did in San Diego, the commissioner finds that up to the conclusion of his investigation they had used only peaceful methods toward their extraordinary end; that, although 350 of them were arrested, there was not a pistol or weapon of any kind found on any one. And he goes on to say that the representative citizens "who have committed these lawless acts against the law and the Constitution and against the right of free speech and against the liberty of the citizen has 'in the eyes of the law, made himself a criminal—a far greater criminal than those whom he brands as 'anarchists, revolutionists' and the 'scum of the earth.'"

Contrasting the offenses, to call attention to the fact that the severest penalty for the crimes committed by "by these alleged outcasts" is not to exceed $500 fine, or thirty days in the City Jail, or both; whereas, the crimes committed by the members of the vigilantes committee are punishable by a fine of $5000 and possible imprisonment for ten years; and most conspicuous of such offense under the law is to be declared unfit and ineligible to hold any office or place of honor or trust created by the Constitution or laws of the United State.

In summing up, Commissioner Weinstock says:

"In view of the strained condition existating at this time in the county of San Diego, and in view of the part or lack of confidence on the part of the so-called vigilantes committee in being able to obtain justice and redress at the hands of Dist.-Atty. Utley of San Diego county, because of his pronounced hostility to them and to their causes of complaint, the commissioner would suggest that due consideration to the advisability of instructing the Attorney-General of the State of California to consider such evidence as may be submitted to him by the attorneys of the victims of these outrages, with a view of taking an active part in the trial of such criminal proceedings in San Diego county."

SESSION ENDS WITH JOYFEST.

Arizona Legislature Closes Its Regular Term.

Gov. Hunt Says He Will Call Extra Session at Once.

Large Volume of Work Still Remains to Be Done.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) May 18.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Just two days late of the date of adjournment time fixed by the Constitution, the first State Legislature of Arizona quit work this afternoon at 8:43 o'clock.

The closing was in the nature of a love feast, despite the evident acrimony that had marked the whole session. The House declined to do any more work after 3 o'clock, while the Senate worked over the half-million-dollar appropriation bill. The remaining hours were spent in a sort of joyfest, in which members of the Senate joined. The two bodies continued the informal joint session till adjournment.

There were the usual peace offerings to the presiding officers, and in the speeches attempts were made to wipe out a number of very pretty quarrels which had been started among the members. Finally "Auld Lang Syne" was sung and adjournment was taken.

But this Legislature is by no means over. Much of the work outlined by the constitutional convention remains undone. So Gov. Hunt today announced his intention of convening the Legislature next week, probably on Thursday, in extraordinary session.

This session will last about two weeks. While a number of members took the opportunity to run home and see their families, the majority are staying in the city.

Almost as important as the appropriation bill in the day's affairs was the passage of a bill which places most of the business of the State under the State Corporation Commission, which is given the broadest of powers, especially with public service corporations, in the fixing of rates and the adjustment of what may be termed legitimate profits.

Still unsettled is the question whether there shall be a State election this fall for other than national electors and for Congressmen. Representative Lewis in the closing hours introduced a resolution calling a general election of State and county officers in November. But the House played with the measure for a while, and then rejected it by almost a unanimous vote, thus apparently settling itself in favor of a three-year term, together with all county officers.

But it is felt that this arbitrary assumption of office will hardly prove popular with the people at large, and there is little doubt that one of the acts of the special session will be along the lines suggested by Mr. Lewis.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ASTORIA (Or.) May 18.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Swept to sea on the bottom of their over-turned boat, which had capsized in the river near the bar, Reynold Thompson and Hans Hansen, fishing for the Sanborn Cutting Packing Company, had a narrow escape from a watery grave at the mouth of the Columbia River Thursday morning and then suffered severely for several hours from exposure and hunger until they were rescued by a passing vessel.

With a strip cut from the sail and a boom for a pole, the men on the overturned craft first tried to signal to the steamer Breaker, which passed but without success. After several hours afloat beyond the breakers they succeeded in attracting the attention of the steam schooner Doris, bound from San Francisco to South Bend, and were picked up seven miles off shore, along with their boat and net. They were provided with dry clothing by the captain. They were taken to South Bend, from which place Jensen returned last night. Thompson remained behind to bring the boat around. The men had been missed here and search for them had been made since their disappearance.

ROOSEVELT'S DAY.

CLEVELAND, May 18.—For one hour tonight Col. Theodore Roosevelt addressed a large crowd in the central armory and struck blow after blow at President Taft. He declared the President's Ballinger case was such that had he taken a similar course as president of a bank, he "would have been in imminent danger of having the matter laid before the district attorney."

"I am against Mr. Taft because Mr. Taft proved faithless to the cause of the American people," he said at the end of his speech.

Col. Roosevelt spent the day in speaking through Central Ohio, and during a dozen speeches. In Cleveland tonight he spoke first in the central armory and then in the steel mill district in the south end of the city. Mr. Roosevelt asserted that if Mr. Taft would read the current numbers of a weekly magazine he would find his name after name of men among the southern delegates and supporters who have been indicted and have served terms of imprisonment.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND, (Or.) May 18.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] When William Davis, official representative of Al Kader Temple at the Imperial Council in Los Angeles last week, started for the Southland he wasn't going to limit his adoration and devotion to Mecca's shrine exclusively. He had it all arranged beforehand to spread his prayer rug before the fane of Hymen for a lifetime worship. In other words it leaked out today that Davis is married.

Davis has boasted in season and out that there were no wedding bells for him. But it became known today that he is a principal in a real romance. The bride is, or was, Miss Lillian Dyer, for a number of years employed as stenographer and confidential clerk in the offices of the Howe-Davis Company, of which firm the bridegroom is a partner.

The couple had been planning the matrimonial venture for some time, so when Davis went to Los Angeles two weeks ago it was arranged that the bride-elect was to follow in a few days, just long enough to allay any suspicion of what was in the wind.

They met by arrangement at Los Angeles and the nuptial knot was tied there last Wednesday. The bridal couple will spend their honeymoon of two or three weeks in Southern California.

Monrovia Marshal Disarms Alleged "Bad Man," Who Was Later Fined One Hundred Dollars.

MONROVIA, May 18.—The new city marshal had his valor tested last night when Henry Murray, a colored man, strated trouble on Myrtle avenue. The alleged bad man was seen with a loaded Colt's automatic protruding from his pocket and was in the act of pushing the merry-makers right and left with his elbows when the marshal arrived on the scene. On being asked what he was doing, he made an ugly reply and reached for the pistol. The marshal was too quick for him, however, and he soon had handcuffs on. Murray is known to be a dangerous man when intoxicated. He was fined $100, with the option of fifty days in jail, by Judge West.

A hobo was arrested last night on Orange avenue for peeping in the windows of homes in the neighborhood of the Orange avenue school. When searched a 5-cent piece was found to be his entire capital. He negotiated a loan of 25 cents from the colored man and when he received his suspended sentence this morning went on his way rejoicing.

ANOTHER FINE.

Ellory Pulliam of the firm of Pulliam Brothers, owners of the Fashion Stables, was arrested for disturbing the peace last night. He met a man named Tibbetts, whom Pulliam claims owe shim some money and which he alleges has refused to pay the debt. Words to the effect that he had the money, but that Pulliam couldn't get any of it caused the latter's temper to so far get away from him that he gave Mr. Tibbetts a drubbing. Pulliam pleaded guilty this morning and was fined $50, with the opaion of twenty-five days. He isn't inclined to pay the money and may try to upset the sentence.

ECHO OF ACCIDENT.

An echo of an accident more than a year old came today when subpoenas were served in the case of John Previsich et al. vs. the Pacific Electric Company. The plaintiff is one of the two Greeks who were driving the four horse team hauling sewer pipe when the electric car crashed into it at Olive and Mayflower avenue.

Cod Fishers Reach Seattle After Terrible Ordeal.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SEATTLE, May 18.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Bringing Capt. Charles Foos and the crew of the cod-fishing schooner Joseph Russ, wrecked on Chirikof Island April 21, the steamship Bertha of the Alaska Coast Company, arrived in Seattle this afternoon.

Giving a graphic description of the terrific storm which resulted in the loss of the schooner and the death of John Jorgensen, the vessel's first mate, members of the crew of the Russ declared that only for the heroism of A. E. Reeve ("Scotty,") the second mate, and five sailors, who went to Chignik in two open boats for assistance, all would have perished.

In a terrific gale, with heavy seas breaking over her, the Russ was driven ashore at 6 o'clock in the evening.

Grounding on the sand, she held her own for several hours, but finally as the heavy seas continued to pound her, the vessel's hatches gave way and she quickly filled with water. Capt. Foos and thirty-four members of the crew had climbed high in the masts and lashed themselves to the rigging to prevent being carried away by the giant waves. Here they hung until 6 a.m., when the storm subsided and the tide left the Russ high and dry.

First Mate Jorgensen had started for the main mast to take refuge when a wave hurled him against the side of the vessel. His skull was crushed.

Capt. Foos and his crew built a hut of pine boards, and in this they stored the small amount of provisions saved and established sleeping quarters. It was when the provisions began to run low and they realized that Chirikof Island is uninhabited, that Second Mate A. P. Reeves and five men of the crew volunteered to put out in two open boats for Chignik, 110 miles distant, for assistance.

They were fortunate enough to arrive at that port before the departure of the mail steamer Dora, which immediately proceeded to the rescue. When the Dora arrived on the beach, warmed by a driftwood fire, but scantily sheltered, were the thirty men who for eleven days, with tortured minds, had discussed the remote possibility of "Scotty" and his brave companions ever being able to reach civilization.

The rescue work was accomplished under great difficulties, as the lifeboats had to be driven through a treacherous surf while fierce blasts of icy wind swept seaward.

Had the two boats which put out on what looked like a hopeless errand been three hours later in arriving at Chignik the thirty men certainly must have perished.

Watts.

The school tournament of the Watts grammar school terminated today in a baseball game between the Willowbrook and Watts teams, on the latter's grounds. The fielding was very poor, but a few chance double plays made the game interesting. The boys only played seven innings so as to make room for The Times track meet; the score was 5 to 1 in favor of the home team. Following is the line-up: For Watts—Lester, Noel, June, Verne, Freth, Marust, Eugene, Lawrence and John. For the Willowbrook team—Glenn, Clark, Max, Albert, Edge, Chick, Harold, George, Gerl.

OPPOSING FORCES ALMOST WITHIN FIRING DISTANCE.

Gen. Huerta, Leading Federal Army, Reaches Ceballos, Five Miles from Rebel Position—Orozco on Defensive and Awaiting Attack—Three Government Columns Are Converging on Ciudad Juarez.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

EL PASO, May 18.—Gen. Huerta, the Federal commander, telegraphed the Mexican consul here from Ceballos, five miles south of Escalon, tonight. He declared that he would engage the rebels tomorrow. During the advance today the Federals discovered scores of electrical mines, and sighted the enemy just before sundown near Escalon. The arrival of the Federals in Ceballos brings them almost within firing range of the rebels.

Spread over the territory between the American border and points four and five hundred miles south, the Mexican revolution tonight, as a week ago, has the aspect of decisive military operations.

REBELS ON DEFENSIVE.

The main army of the rebels tonight was at Rellano and Escalon, 408 and 419 miles south of here, on the Mexican Central railroad. Along the same road, fourteen miles away, Federal columns are stretched. Hourly the two armies are creeping toward one another, with the rebels apparently on the defensive and awaiting the attack. Estimates of the forces of both sides, range from 10,000 to 15,000 men.

Separated from the two main bodies are disturbing forces operating in all directions. Admittedly the crisis in the campaign has been reached and a big engagement is likely tomorrow.

In anticipation of a possible attack on Juarez by the Federal column advancing from San Ignacio, the entire body of American troops at Ft. Bliss was held under arms for several hours tonight. It finally was determined that no maneuvers near here were likely for at least two days.

The Mexican Federal government, by a series of maneuvers, which are expected to come to a climax in the next three days, hopes to deal so crushing a blow to the insurrecto movement in the north as to crush the rebel army. While Gen. Orozco, with 5000 rebels, is holding strategic positions between Rellano and Jimenez, 450 miles south of here, along the Mexican Central Railroad, and with Gen. Huerta, having an equally strong force of Federals, but fifteen miles away today, pressing northward to attack the insurrectos, sharp fighting is now looked for all the way to the American border. Juarez likely will fall into the hands of the Federal government again.

Communication by wire and rail south of Juarez will be severed within two days by advancing columns of Federals.

Chihuahua, where there are hundreds of American residents, will be cut off from both the north and south, and the Federals plan to drive Orozco back into that city and force him from all directions to surrender or take to the hills. Chihuahua is likely to be the last stand of the rebels. The main column of both armies for the last three days have been expected to meet near Rellano, nearly 200 miles south of Chihuahua, but the slow advance of the Federals because of burned bridges has delayed the engagement.

The arrival of a Federal column at San Ignacio, forty-five miles east of Juarez, yesterday, was the first warning of a well-organized campaign in the rear of the main rebel army.

It is planned to cut all railroad and wire connections with Chihuahua, surround Juarez and destroy the connecting link of the insurgent forces with the United States. No fighting is expected near the border, as the garrison in Juarez is small and likely to offer little resistance.

CONVERGING ON JUAREZ.

Three columns of Federal volunteers are converging on Juarez, with the purpose of forcing the surrender of the city and of bottling up the forces of Orozco in Chihuahua. One is the column that marched up the Rio Grande for 250 miles from Ojinaga, and is now at San Ignacio. Another Federal force, numbering 600 men, is approaching the city from the west, and a third detachment is marching from the south. While Orozco still is facing the Federal army near Jimenez, in what is expected to be the deciding battle of the revolution, it is believed he will be crippled by the unexpected appearance of government troops.

The capture of Juarez or the interruption of railroad traffic between the border city and Chihuahua is expected to put a stop to the smuggling of munitions of war and provisions.

An Associated Press correspondent accompanied the Federal forces from Ojinaga to San Ignacio. The column numbers 250 men and is commanded by Majs. Sanchez and Pina.

Detachments from Ojinaga are operating between the city of Chihuahua and the rebel front, and have destroyed several bridges and seriously hampered the movement of the rebel forces.

REBELS AWAIT ATTACK.

FEDERALS ADVANCING.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

AT THE REBEL FRONT (ESCALON, Mex.) May 18.—Spread over the arroyos and hills in which this region abounds, the front of the insurrecto army is awaiting tonight the attack of the government forces.

Gen. Salazar is in command of the troops just south of Rellano, while Gens. Campos and Fernandez and Col. Alatorre are directing the movements of the 2000 men stationed here behind the advance guard. South of this place, the insurrectos have many scouting parties operating as far as Yermo, and the front of the Federal army is less than ten miles away.

At Zavalza, only nine miles south of Escalon, the Federals have detachments exploring the rebel positions.

To Attack Torreon.

AT OROZCO'S HEADQUARTERS, JIMENEZ (Mex.) May 18.—The occupation of Nazas and the surrounding region southwest of Torreon by the force of rebels under Col Canales has provided the government with a new problem, in the opinion of Gen. Orozco. With Canales are Gens. Campa and Arzumedo and it is said to be the intention of the trio and their men to besiege Torreon or even attack it as soon as the main body of Federals becomes absorbed in a big engagement in this vicinity.

NATURE STORIES.

Soap Bubbles and Monkeys.

[London Chronicle:] Prof. C. V. Boys, F.R.S., has been trying the affect of soap bubbles on the orangotangs, chimpanzees and monkeys at the London Zoo. When the first bubble soared into the cage where an orangotang was confined an inquisitive amazement could be seen in its attitude. But as soon as it noticed that these flying bombs exploded without any disaster it gained courage.

Carefully, nervously, when a bubble entered it stretched its hand nearer and nearer, and suddenly caught it. Then, tremendously pleased at the novel game, it put its muzzle through the bars, and the professor blew a bubble so that it settled on its nose. Thereupon the tongue was curled up and the bubble was licked in with a real smacking of the lips.

Two of the chimpanzees, meanwhile, who were watching the exhibition, huddled in terror, but intensely curious, in a corner of the cage. One chimpanzee displayed just the same eagerness as the orangotang.

When the lower tribes of monkeys were tested the response to science was less gratifying. They would not take any particular notice, but continued their usual antics after some cursory glances.

The Awakening.

GIRL SLAYER READY TO DIE.

Minister Who Took a Life Resigned to Fate.

Richeson Breaks Fast in the Boston Jail.

Will Probably Be Executed Tuesday Morning.

[The Times Wireless, Cable, Eastern and Overland News Service.]

BOSTON, May 18.—"I am ready to die. I'm resigned to my fate," said Clarence V. T. Richeson today.

This was part of his conversation with his spiritual adviser, the Rev. Herbert S. Johnson, after awakening from a fourteen-hour sleep, induced by drugs given him last night when he became delirious and thought strange persons were watching him. Richeson awakened at 1:35 o'clock, but went back to sleep again. The condemned man was very weak. He had not eaten anything for thirty hours.

Dr. Elmer E. Southard of Harvard Medical School said today he might ask for the brain of Richeson in order to examine it to determine whether or not it is abnormal.

Dr. McLaughlin, the prison physician, visited Richeson with Deputy Warden Allen this afternoon. Dr. McLaughlin said:

"This is not a case of collapse. This man was buoyed up with hope and was living on his nerves. The reaction came and knocked him completely out. He has touched no food since yesterday, and naturally he is very weak."

Before Richeson's attack of hysteria Henry Merrill of Somerville, for twenty-five years an officer at the State Prison, was ordered to be on duty all night Monday. As Merrill shaves prisoners before they sit in the electric chair, it is thought Warden Bridges had picked early Tuesday morning as the time for Richeson's execution. Whether the collapse will affect that plan is not known.

The Rev. Mr. Johnson was in the death chamber three hours with Richeson. Mr. Johnson said:

"Richeson was half dazed, and I had hard work to convince him that it was day time. He is not broken down. He has been under a severe strain and the reaction from his anxiety has entirely worn him out."

"Richeson suffered from an attack of hysteria last night," said Dr. Lyons today. "He was delirious. He will probably have more attacks. One attack is like another. There is no degree in them. If he has more attacks they will be like the one he had last night."

ITALY STALEMATED.

"Daily Telegraph" Hears of a Definite Turn for the Worse in European Situation.

[The Times Wireless, Cable, Eastern and Overland News Service.]

LONDON, May 18.—The Daily Telegraph says there has been a definite turn for the worse in the European situation within the last two days, owing to international developments which for complication and delicacy have not been equaled within the recollection of any but the oldest statesmen. Briefly Italy in the desire to extricate herself from hopeless military stalemate in Tripoli has deliberately drawn the powers into the struggle by the recent bombardment of the Dardanelles forts.

Russia, according to the Telegraph, is availing herself of the opportunity to press her demands for opening the Dardanelles to her ships and for furthering her interests in Asia Minor. Germany also desires to strengthen her position in the latter region and the Telegraph declares the two powers are co-operating to put into effect their designs.

It is said the recent change in the Russian and German embassies in Constantinople will do as the Russians request for the withdrawal of the present French Ambassador from St. Petersburg are part of this policy. The complaint against the French Ambassador is that he is not sufficiently friendly to the Russian aims.

In conclusion the Telegraph says it is difficult even for twenty-four hours to foretell the course of the difficulty which is fast becoming a crisis.

BRIGHT SUNSHINE COSTUMES.

The Westlake branch of the National Sunshine Society gave a fancy costume ball last night in the Gamut Clubhouse, which was attended by a goodly number.

The costumes worn were unusually spectacular and historic. One of the most unique and interesting was a dress that had been worn at the inaugural ball of Abraham Lincoln. It was worn last night by Mrs. N. W. Civille. Another spectacular costume was the Indian outfit worn by Miss Phyllis Kirschner as Minnehaha. The affair was given as a benefit for the convalescent cottage maintained by the Sunshine Society at the County Hospital.

Cut-glass and silver trophies were awarded the best-costumed person on the dancing floor, and Mrs. E. D. Crowder, president of the Sunshine Society, won first lady's prize. She wore a Holland costume, including the wooden shoes. The second lady's prize was awarded Miss Kirschner as Minnehaha; and the gentleman's prize was awarded T. R. Brown as Buster Brown.

The judges of the costumes were Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Wollcutt, Mr. and Mrs. Charles McCulloch and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Sautter.

A BIRD WITH HANDS.

Peculiar Native of British Guiana That Has Claws on the Tips of the Wings While Young.

[London Globe:] The hoatzin, a native of British Guiana, is described as a bird with hands. And the peculiarity of its structure which leads to this description is the possession of two free claws on the wing of the young.

The nest of the hoatzin is placed in a tree overhanging the water and the young, unlike most birds hatched in such a position, are active from the first, and the claws at the ends of the wings are used to assist it in climbing the trees, which it does with great dexterity in its early days.

The growth of the outermost quill feathers of the wing, which might hamper the free use of the claws, is retarded till the rest of the wing is developed sufficiently to render climbing less necessary. Then they grow, and the claws are absorbed and disappear. The adult bird does not require them. Should a young hoatzin fall into the water it makes for the shore and seizes a branch, up which it quickly climbs.

It has been pointed out that the young of game birds show evidence of having formerly possessed similar structures on the wings. It is therefore inferred that they had a similar habit, and that in former times they built and reared their young in trees.

In this group—including the barn door fowl—the quill feathers of the wing are still developed in the same order as in the hoatzin, that is, the outer ones are delayed until the others have reached a certain stage. Traces of the free claws, moreover, can still be found in the embryo. And occasionall builds its nest and hatches its young in a tree.

ADMIRAL DEWEY'S IDEAL.

Admires the Intrepid Farragut and Thought of Him in the Battle of Manila Bay.

[National Magazine:] Sitting in his office recently, and looking upon the old sea chest which contains the records of that fateful day at Manila, I asked Admiral Dewey what was uppermost in his mind the night before the battle of Manila, when he contemplated entering a harbor mined with torpedoes. His eyes sparkled as he replied:

"All night and all morning my mind had reverted to one picture—that of Flag Officer Farragut, whom I first met at New Orleans in 1861. There were no admirals in those days, the captains being the highest ranking officers; and our commander was the flag officer. We young cadets grew instinctively to admire the intrepid Farragut, and that night at Mobile will never be forgotten when his voice rang out loud and clear: 'Damn the torpedoes—full speed ahead.' Somehow that command would ring in my ears every time danger confronted us. One does not instinctively think of himself in such moments, but of some hero whose life had impressed him."

Then I ventured to ask the admiral why he did not give his command at Manila in some dramatic and stentorian way like Farragut. With that modesty known only to Dewey, he replied: "I was not thinking of myself; I was thinking of Farragut."

Dewey's command to begin one of the greatest battles in all history was given in an ordinary tone, as if he were simply ordering a cup of coffee. History records it that he calmly said to the commander: "Gridley, when you are ready, fire."

FIND BODY IN VACANT HOUSE.

San Francisco Tailor Is Killed by a Woman.

Police Think Man Assisted Her in the Crime.

Pearl Gloves and Strand of Hair Are the Clues.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, May 18.—Isaac Cohen, a tailor of this city, was murdered by a woman in a vacant house some time between Monday night and today noon, when the body was found. That the woman was assisted by a man and that robbery was the motive is the opinion expressed tonight by the police detectives.

Cohen, who was about 45 years old, was worth approximately $50,000 and was in the habit of carrying between $500 and $1000 on his person. The police theory is that the woman became aware of this and made an engagement with the man, who was induced to enter the house, where he was attacked.

Cohen's skull was fractured and he had been shot. Attached to his coat by dried blood were several strands of hair from a woman's head. A woman's pearl gray glove was found near the body and the mate was found in another room. A blood-stained handkerchief, evidently that of a woman's, and a piece of a fur neckpiece also were found in the house.

Cohen did not appear for work Tuesday morning, and the police searched for him all week.

EXPECTS TO CLEAR DORR.

Stockton Man's Lawyer in Boston Says He Has New Clew to the Marsh Murder.

BOSTON, May 18.—William A. Dorr, the young Californian arrested in Stockton and who has been in the Essex County Jail, will be arraigned Monday morning in Essex County Criminal Court in Salem on the charge of murdering George E. Marsh, the rich soap manufacturer of Lynn. It was planned to arraign Dorr last Monday, but his physician said his physical condition would not permit of his appearance in court.

Charles Neal Barney, attorney for Dorr, has announced that he has a perfect defense for his client and that he will prove that he was far away from the scene of the Marsh murder on the day the crime was committed. Barney also said he had discovered several clews which he is now working upon and that he feels sure he will be able to spring a sensation at the trial of his client.

At the same time Chief Burkes of the Lynn police, and Inspector Kane, who worked on the case from the beginning, declare they have evidence enough to send Dorr to the electric chair.

LETTER IN EVIDENCE.

DORR'S NAME SIGNED.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

STOCKTON (Cal.) May 18.—Chief of Police Briare has a letter written to Miss Orpha Marsh of this city and signed with the name of William A. Dorr, now incarcerated in the Lynn (Mass.) jail, accused of the murder of George E. Marsh, a wealthy soap manufacturer of that city. In the letter is a statement to the effect that Dorr paid a negro $1000 to kill the "old man" and that the job had been done. Dorr left Stockton with $2300. The sum of $1300 was taken from him when arrested here upon his return. It is known that he spent about $350 for an automobile; $105 for a round-trip ticket to the East, and all of $150 for maintenance while away. These sums disprove the story of the $1000, said to have been paid the negro.

The letter was written in the form of a diary and notes of his movements since leaving Stockton up to his departure from Boston were made.

WEALTHY RANCHER ARRESTED.

Oakland Police Want to Know if Child Found on His Place Was Buried Alive.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

OAKLAND, May 18.—Charles Bomberg, a wealthy rancher of San Leandro, is held in the City Prison while the police are investigating the circumstances of the death of the infant child of Minnie Silva. The body was found buried in the orchard on the Bomberg ranch. Bomberg admits he is the father, but does not admit he buried the body.

Suspicion first attached to Bomberg by an admission made by the woman, who is critically ill.

She was employed as a cook by Bomberg, who is unmarried.

An autopsy will be held tomorrow to determine whether or not the child was alive when buried.

NEW STADIUM OPENED.

Cincinnati Celebrates in Grand Style and Make the Fans Proud by Defeating Giants.

[The Times Wireless, Cable, Eastern and Overland News Service.]

CINCINNATI, May 18.—This was the proudest day in the history of baseball in Cincinnati. There have been days of the past in which Cincinnati was wont to arise upon its dignity and celebrate far and wide the achievements of its heroes upon the diamond.

For even if the Reds have not won the same number of championships that have been won by other baseball clubs, the fans of Cincinnati have not permitted any good opportunity to escape them which would afford ground for fitness of "Cutenspiel."

The new stadium was dedicated today and a victory over the all-conquering Giants, with the great Matty in the box, marked the opening. Games have been played in front of the new stadium this spring, but it was not until the advent of champions of the National League that "Garry" Herman would think of consecrating the magnificent edifice to the purposes of battle.

Though everything which should go with a first-call ball club, including a banquet in the evening in which jubilee water quenched the thirst of those who are not partial to the native beer.

There were daylight fireworks and a parade, and there was the largest attendance that has seen a ball game since Cincinnati was established upon the baseball map.

INDIANAPOLIS "LADY COPS."

[The Times Wireless, Cable, Eastern and Overland News Service.]

INDIANAPOLIS, May 18.—"Lady Cops." That's what we are going to have and just a fun proposition on the part of the Mayor, Samuel L. Shank, caused it. He told members of the Women's Clubs Committee that he believed a few feminine faces on the police force would help some. The women have been after him since. After a conference today he ordered Superintendent Hyland to issue police powers to as many women as the committee wanted. The women offer to serve the city in this capacity without cost.

Plans were under way, it is said, to remove the bishop as presiding officer, when he learned of it and his assertion put an end to the efforts.

Growing Like Smoke

NEW TROLLEY LINE TO TOWN OF OWENSMOUTH

Pacific Electric to Extend Its Van Nuys Valley and Farther—Car Barns and Dumps for Shipment of the Great Crops to Be Grown Later On.

DUE to the unexpected volume of passenger traffic which the Pacific Electric has done on its new Van Nuys extension, since the completion of that line last December, it was decided yesterday by that company to extend the Van Nuys road through to the new town of Owensmouth.

The road will be constructed of new, extra heavy steel seventy-five-pound modern electric railroad rails and the road-bed will be rock-ballasted for the entire distance. The overhead construction will be modern in every way and known as the cantenary system, which permits of maximum speed.

The Los Angeles Suburban Homes Company has agreed to deed to the Pacific Electric Company grounds for stations, sidings and other shipping facilities at Van Nuys, Marian and Owensmouth. The Pacific Electric will at once build a mission or Moorish style depot building at each of the three places above named. Sidetracks at convenient points will be put in and be ready to facilitate the crops grown on the lands planted by the Land Company. It is understood that the company has contracted for the delivery of the great crops of intense cultivation which will be grown on the lands adjoining the new road. The construction and equipment of the new road will be completed, and the road in operation before the coming crops will require to push the crops to market.

The officials of the company are also considering the completion of the new road, and the road will be the property of the Pacific Electric Company on or near Van Nuys. The construction force will be put to work at once, the coming season, and the road will be completed in time

Growing Like Smoke.

NEW TROLLEY LINE NOW TO TOWN OF OWENSMOUTH

Pacific Electric to Extend Its Van Nuys Line Up the Valley and Farther—Car Barns at Van Nuys. Dumps for Shipment of the Great Beet Crop Sure to Be Grown Later On.

Due to the unexpected volume of passenger traffic which the Pacific Electric has done on its new Van Nuys extension, since the completion of that line last December, it was decided yesterday by that company to extend the Van Nuys road through to the new town of Owensmouth.

The road will be constructed of new, extra heavy steel seventy-five-pound modern electric railroad rails and the road-bed will be rock-ballasted for the entire distance. The overhead construction will be modern in every way and known as the catenary system, which permits of maximum speed.

The Los Angeles Suburban Homes Company has agreed to deed to the Pacific Electric Company grounds for station, sidings and other shipping facilities at Van Nuys, Marian and Owensmouth. The Pacific Electric will at once build a mission or Moorish style depot building at each of the three places above named. Sidetracks at convenient points will be put in and beet dumps erected in order to facilitate the shipment of the beets grown on the near-by 8000 acres planted by the American Beet Sugar Company. These side-tracks will afford convenient shipping facilities for the great crops which will follow the intense cultivation of the lands along and adjoining the entire length of the new road. A new concrete sub-station and car barns will be located at or near Van Nuys. A large construction force will be on the ground early the coming week with men and teams to push the road to early completion.

The officials of the Pacific Electric company assert that this road, when completed, will be the best-equipped, and the road-bed and construction will be the best on the entire Pacific Electric system, and will be the equal in point of excellence, of any electric railroad in the world. It is evident from the seventy-five-pound rails, extra-ballasted road-bed and the character of the overhead construction that it is not the intention of the builders that the terminus of this road will for a very long time remain within the San Fernando Valley.

Disturbing.

PORTUGAL HAS REVOLTS IN EASTERN POSSESSIONS.

[A. P. CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LISBON (Portugal) May 1.—The government is greatly disturbed over revolts which have broken out at Timor (Malay Archipelago,) Macao (China,) Goa (Portuguese India) and Bibe (Africa.) The most important outbreaks are at Timor and Macao. According to official telegrams all the natives of Timor are in complete revolution against constituted authority. They number several thousand, and being of the Malay family, are described as very fierce and warlike. Many of them, however, are armed and both read and write Portuguese.

They are well armed with rifles and modern field guns which were captured from the Portuguese troops. Their chief stronghold is at Manufae, situated in the heart of the mountains, some of which range as high as 5000 feet in altitude. They have, however, extended towards the coast and appointed near to the capital, Dilly, which at last accounts they were attacking. The Portuguese have already lost a considerable number of men and a number of civilians who were joining the regular troops were also killed. The government has ordered the dispatch of an expedition of about 500 men with fourteen field guns.

The Dutch government has sent cavalry to Portugal, protesting at its march on the ground that it is extending to Dutch territory. The Portuguese are inclined to blame the Portuguese for the outbreak which they say arises from the fact that the authorities have doubled the taxes which the natives are unable to pay. It is understood that Holland has made another attempt to purchase the Portuguese part of Timor, but it is entirely probable that Portugal will refuse the offer.

The situation at Goa in India is hardly any better. The natives of Satary have carried their rebellion to practically all the Portuguese territory. They have seized several Portuguese forts. As the troops were unable to cope with the rebels the natives had an opportunity to pillage and murder. Entire villages are described as smoking ruins. Hundreds of people have been killed or have disappeared. Women and girls have been taken in the villages taken to the mountains and turned into domestics and slaves. The richest are held for ransom. The government is sending a strong expedition of 300 men with machine guns, pointing out at the same time that it is impossible to send more because of the necessity of keeping the soldiers in the way of sending expeditions in the long run upon the treasury of the republic whose condition does not permit of any considerable expenditure.

With the colonial situation unsatisfactory, the internal political situation here is rapidly giving rise to many fears and people are openly talking of the possibility of a "coup d'etat." The Conservative party, under the leadership of Dr. Antonia Jose d'Almeida has declared open war on the government, which is controlled and supported by the Democratic party headed by Dr. Alphonso Costa. This struggle of parties is so acute that the government is continuing with great difficulty and by the constitution Parliament cannot be dissolved. The "coup d'etat" is being arranged by leaders of the Democratic party. Their idea is, with the assistance of the government, to enter Parliament by force and expel Dr. Almeida and his followers, replacing them by Democrats who shall be loyal to the government. The Democrats believe that this could be accomplished with little if any bloodshed. Should this move be carried out, it is recognised that Dr. Costa would be practically the dictator of Portugal, as it is likely that the President of the republic, Dr. Manuel d'Arriaga, who is an intimate friend of Dr. Almeida, would be immediately deposed and Dr. Costa or some representative of Costa chosen President.

The question of the treatment of political prisoners is being heatedly discussed in the newspapers. This is due to the disclosure that the inmates of Limeiro fortress, the central prison of Lisbon, have been often placed in dungeons with little air or light, as a means of forcing them to reveal their supposed secrets. Although these dungeons are wet and damp, prisoners are only allowed to wear a light shirt and trousers. Their food was bread and water. It is charged, moreover, that when they refused to disclose their secrets, they were beaten with sticks made from rawhide which leave terrible wounds. These revelations, which came out through newspaper interviews with some of the prisoners, have caused a great sensation and have induced the government to promise to begin an inquiry and to put an end to any cruel treatment.

The British and Portuguese governments are now in negotiations for the protection of the port of Lisbon. The idea is to make it a strong basis for naval operations. The old fort of Almada, situated across the Tagus in front of Lisbon, will be demolished and reconstructed with the latest improvements and armed with heavy artillery. The forts of Bom Sucesso and Sao Juliao de Barra will be likewise improved and fitted out with new artillery. These improvements form a part of the defense of the Portuguese coast and the strategic triangle of Madeira, Lagos and Cape Vert, which has been included in the provisions of the Anglo-Portuguese alliance.

Humane Work.

OFFERING RELIEF TO THE CHINESE FAMINE VICTIMS.

[A. P. CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PEKING (China) April 17.—Foreign missionaries are now engaged in furnishing relief to the victims of the famine. Two men have been sent to every center where relief is being distributed.

Those in charge of the work say that the need is still very great as the amount has thus far been able to relieve about 10 per cent. to 20 per cent. of the total distress. The subscriptions to date have amounted to $36,000.

Ten times that amount is required to relieve the distress. It is the opinion that each famine victim is entitled to receive 5 cents per day. If a man has a family of 5 persons to support in his family they are entitled to earn a total of 6 cents per day, or if there are four in the family they may earn 5 cents. Many people willingly even to the point of starvation refuse to accept relief, as they are ashamed to be numbered among the beggars. The country in question has been visited several times until it is one of the most absolute wrecks. The people have lost all they had and have sold everything down to the roofs from their houses and have used the money to buy a little food. This bean cake is one of the few articles left in the country. The oil and is generally distributed among the fields. Many Chinese are very fortunate to get even the famine lists, for relief is given only to those who are in absolute destitution.

There is the probability of other famines in the not distant future, unless the government will undertake at once to provide money, even though at a comparatively small scale, for reclamation works. Many will be entirely without relief even when the wheat crop is harvested, and only by the government furnishing work can this state of destitution be brought to an end. It is difficult to say how soon the government will undertake this matter, but the committee is in touch with many of the men who are in high authority, and will do everything in its power by means of the local press and by such influences as it may command to induce the government to undertake the work which only it can do.

REVISIONS BRING DISMAY.

Resolution of Canterbury Convocation Revising Burial Ritual Brings Out Criticism.

[The Times Wireless, Cable, Eastern and Overland News Service.]

LONDON, May 18.—The hard and fast line drawn by the lower house of convocation of Canterbury between saints and sinners in the revised rubric of the burial service is causing a very great deal of unfriendly criticism. In fairness of the Anglican church it must be stated that the stand taken by the Canterbury church parliament does not represent the general belief of British Protestant Episcopal communicants. By far the larger part of Protestant laymen express qualifiedly their belief that the resolution of the convocation is in open defiance of Christ's merciful message to sinners, in His words to the penitent thief, "This day shalt thou be with Me in Paradise."

It is worthy of note that the Rev. Dr. Leighton Parks, of St. Bartholomews Church, in New York, is quoted in the London papers as being indignantly hostile to the revised rules. It was in St. Bartholomews, London, that the embers of the anti-ritualist movement first burst into flame, and the present wave of rubric revision is an aftermath of that movement.

TWO PIANOS EVERY DAY.

Salyer Company Building Factory at Glendale Which Will Have Capacity of Sixty Instruments Monthly.

GLENDALE, May 18.—The Salyer Piano Company of Los Angeles has started work on its $12,000 piano factory at the southwestern limits of this city. The building will be a two-story reinforced concrete structure, 200 feet long and forty feet in width. It will be a factory and storeroom combined and will be ornamental throughout.

On the first floor will be a recital hall 84x50 feet, ladies' rest room, stock and sounding-board room, construction room, cabinet work and veneer rooms. The second floor will contain varnish, finishing and bridge-making rooms. The basement will be a storage room. At the rear of the main building will be a smaller structure containing departments where will be made cases, backs and pin blocks, with room for machinery and engines. Here will also be a lumber building. The grounds surrounding this building will be beautified by a landscape gardener.

Some time ago the Salyer company purchased nine acres on the San Fernando road extending from this road to the Southern Pacific tracks. This property has been subdivided into forty-five building lots 50x150 feet each. Three streets will at once be cut through the land. One will run along the extreme north end of the land from east to west; another, running through the land north and south, will be known as Hinckley drive, while the third will cut through the southern end of the land and will be known as Salyer avenue. Each of the streets will be sixty feet in width and will be graded, oiled, sidewalked and curbed, and will be otherwise beautified. None of this land as yet has been offered to the public.

The company has been in the retail piano business in Los Angeles for the last twenty-four years and has been manufacturing pianos in that city for the past six years. The officers of the company are: President, A. M. Salyer; vice-president, M. Salyer; secretary, C. A. Salyer; treasurer, A. A. Millard; superintendent, W. F. Dietemeler, and W. D. Hinckley. C. A. Salyer is overseeing the construction of the local factory. He stated this week that the piano factory will be capable of turning out sixty pianos a month. This factory will furnish employment for a number of local residents. Officers of this company will erect homes ranging from $2500 to $4000 on the tract as soon as the streets have been cut through.

SOCIAL STRAIN IS FATAL.

Death of Mrs. Frank J. Mackey, American Leader in London Society, Caused by Activity.

[The Times Wireless, Cable, Eastern and Overland News Service.]

LONDON, May 18.—The cause of the death of Mrs. Frank Jay Mackey, one of the American leaders in London society, was the nervous and physical strain of her extensive entertainments last season.

Mrs. Mackey who, with her husband, had gained the favor of the late King Edward VII, was one of the most prominent American hostesses during the coronation festivities in honor of the new King. Her efforts to make her entertainments perfect resulted in a breakdown. She went to America, but returned in still weaker condition. In March she became so ill that a nurse was in constant attendance, but she was believed to be on the road to recovery when she was stricken with pneumonia. From that time she sank until a heart attack ended her life.

The breakdown came two months ago while her husband was in California. He returned immediately on hearing of his wife's illness. The body will be cremated and the husband will take the ashes to America.

Mrs. Mackey, who had often been confused with Mrs. John W. Mackay, was an ardent follower of the hunt five days of the week during the season. She was always interested in the best packs. Mr. Mackey is one of the greatest polo enthusiasts in England. He is a member of the Hurlingham and other clubs and took a team to California in 1911.

BIOGRAPHIES EXPENSIVE.

SACRAMENTO, May 18.—It has been announced by Assemblyman Young of Berkeley, author of the Presidential preference primary law, that he has decided to use his best efforts at the next session of the Legislature to have that section providing for biographical sketches of the candidates repealed. It has been determined, according to computation by the Secretary of State's office, that the sketches are more of a nuisance than a benefit and that the State has lost money in printing them.

OHIO PRIMARIES NEXT TUESDAY.

Eyes of the Nation Are Now on the Buckeye State.

Fate of Four Candidates May Hinge on Result.

Will Have Moral Effect on Both Conventions.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CINCINNATI (O.) May 18.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Upon the result of the primary election in Ohio next Tuesday probably hangs the fate of William H. Taft, and, by the same token, that of Theodore Roosevelt. The Democrats, through a preferential primary, also will determine whether or not they prefer Gov. Judson Harmon to Gov. Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey. District delegates to the Chicago and Baltimore conventions will be elected throughout the State.

While the votes of the State of Ohio are not absolutely necessary to renominate President Taft, their loss, it is asserted, would have a tremendous moral effect upon those States and delegates already selected for Taft and upon the result in States where delegates are yet to be chosen. The administration paid little attention to Ohio until the electoral eruptions in Illinois and Pennsylvania suddenly aroused it to the fact that influences were at work in Ohio that might produce similar results. It was learned that an insidious propaganda had been at work influencing the minds of the rural voters against the President and his administration, because of the advocacy of Canadian reciprocity. Within a few short weeks a widespread resentment had been created in the minds of the farmers. Insidiously also another movement had been started to corral the negro vote for Roosevelt and still another to poison the minds of conservationists against President Taft because of the Ballinger-Glavis-Pinchot controversy.

President Taft has undoubtedly strengthened his position in Ohio during the past ten days, and will probably continue to do so until the end of the campaign. The demonstration to the public that he can and will fight has brought back to his banner many deserters and has won for him thousands of waverers who were halting between Ohio's favorite son and Roosevelt.

ROOT MAY GET IT.

Chicago Hotel Lobbies Hear He May Be Temporary Chairman of the Republican Convention.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, May 18.—Elihu Root, United States Senator from New York, seems to be the most likely man for the temporary chairmanship of the Republican National Convention, judging from the gossip heard in the hotels this morning before the members of the Committee on Arrangements went into session.

Members of the committee said it was likely that the selection would be left entirely to Chairman Harry S. New of the committee. It has always been the prerogative of that official, although the head of the committee consults the other members before making his decision. Mr. Root's name was the only one mentioned today. He is a warm supporter of President Taft and at the same time a personal friend of Mr. Roosevelt. He is considered by many to be one of the ablest public men in the Republican party and is given rank as one of the greatest secretaries of state.

NEW ON THE SITUATION.

Denies that Elihu Root Has Refused to Act as Temporary Chairman of Chicago Convention.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, May 18.—Harry S. New, chairman of the subcommittee, to whom has been left the matter of selecting the temporary chairman of the Republican convention, said tonight he would not name the temporary chairman within the next twenty-four hours and the selection may not be made for several days. He denied that the action of the committee was caused by refusal of United States Senator Elihu Root of New York to accept.

"The temporary chairmanship was not offered to any one and therefore was not declined by anyone," said Mr. New.

The postponement of the selection of a temporary chairman came as a surprise, as earlier in the day members of the subcommittee had let it be known they expected to name the temporary chairman before the subcommittee adjourned.

A number of possible reasons for delay in the chairmanship matter were advanced by interested politicians. Roosevelt leaders declared the postponement indicated they had won in their contention that the temporary chairman should not be selected until the result of the Presidential preference in Ohio Tuesday. The question of a basis for the apportionment of seats in the convention was left unsettled.

The demand for seats in the convention exceeds any previous national Republican convention.

SACRAMENTO ELECTION.

LEAGUE TICKET WINS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, May 18.—At the final election today for City Commissioners under the new charter, a heavy vote was cast. The entire Municipal Voters' League ticket won. For the five-year term, Trustee M. J. Burke, one of the striking Southern Pacific shop men, led by a margin of more than 1200 votes over his nearest competitor. This was the chief surprise of the day. J. A. Fliehar, for many years secretary and latterly manager of exhibits of the State Agricultural Society, gets the four-year term. Assemblyman Charles A. Bliss is the three-year man, Wr. E. M. Wilder two years, while Mrs. Luella B. Johnson, widow of a former State Printer, gets the one-year commissionership, defeating Trustee Carraghan by about 200 votes. Mayor Beard, three times the chief executive of Sacramento, ran 300 behind Carraghar, with Supervisor Callahan, Trustee Hicks and P. A. Fitzgerald as the tail-enders in that order. The election means a complete upsetting of the present city government. The new Commissioners will take office July 1.

TEACHER GOES SLUMMING.

Mills College Woman Visits Dance Halls, Skating Rinks and Other Places and Finds Conditions Good.

Following a line of investigation in sociology and psychology, Miss Kate Brousseau, professor of these two branches of science in Mills College, OaOkland, was the principal guest of a slumming party that visited a number of places of amusement last night in order to obtain data regarding conditions in this city.

Miss Brousseau was accompanied by Hugh C. Gibson, chief county probation officer, and his first assistant, Mrs. F. H. Byram.

The party was escorted through the various parts of the city by Leo Marden, chief police juvenile officer, who was informed on the different dance halls and skating rinks and who was able to throw considerable light on the subject.

At the conclusion of the trip Miss Brousseau declared that conditions in Los Angeles were unusually favorable and that open vice seemingly had been eradicated so far as was possible to determine by a visit of this kind.

CLAREMONT.

CLAREMONT, May 18.—The death of Glenn Fleming occurred today. He was the 15-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Fleming of San Diego. Mrs. Fleming has made her home here for the past five years, with her sons, while they attended Pomona College.

The death was Mr. Fleming is the result of an injury to the cervical vertebra, which occurred as the result of an accident, two years ago while in swimming in a near-by reservoir. Complete paralysis has resulted through eminent surgeons from Los Angeles and Pomona, used every means known to science to relieve the pressure on the spinal cord and nerves. It has been considered very remarkable to medical science that the boy has lived so long.

At Holmes Hall tonight was given a minstrel show, for the benefit of the Associated Students' athletic fund of Pomona College. The stars were Howard Becker and Tral Roller, who are past masters in the burnt-cork art. Heyward Richards was the business manager.

Mrs. H. Willis Jones, Mrs. J. Ralph Shoemaker and Mrs. Howard Burnett of Los Angeles gave the first of a series of card parties tonight at the home of Mrs. Jones, on Cucamonga avenue. About forty guests were present from Pomona and Claremont.

AZUSA.

AZUSA, May 18.—At 12:30 o'clock this morning Mrs. R. B. Walker died at the Pottenger Sanatorium in Monrovia. Her home was in Danapolis, Ala., but five months ago she came to Azusa for her health, making her home with her sister, Mrs. George Meyer. For two months she had been in the sanatorium. Mr. Walker arrived from Alabama yesterday. Her mother and two sister were also with her at the time of her death. She leaves three little children. The funeral services will be at the residence of George Meyer on Dalton avenue, Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, conducted by Rev. James R. McIntire, pastor of the Christian Church. The funeral arrangements are in charge of Fred S. Clark. The enterment will be in Oakdale Cemetery.

At a recent contest in physics, in which 4425 high school pupils of Los Angeles county took part, Miss Clara Randall of Azusa took third prize.

Work a Watch Does.

[London Answers:] It is a matter of everyday occurrence for a person to say to his watchmaker:

"Here is a watch which you sold me some ten years ago. It has always gone well until just lately, when it has taken to stopping without any apparent cause."

The people who speak in this way little think of the amount of work a watch has performed in this space of time and might be astonished at the following figures:

In ten years, which includes two leap years, and consequently a total of 3652 days, the hour hand has made 7304 and the minute hand 87,648 revolutions. The end of an average minute hand travels more than 30,820 yards—more than six miles. The second hand has made 5,258,880 revolutions, and its extremity has traversed on the dial a distance of upwards of 123 miles. The escape wheel has made 52,588,800 revolutions, and as it has fifteen teeth, it has come 788,832,000 times in contact with each pallet. The balance has made 1,577,644,000 vibrations, and any point on the outside of the rim has covered a distance of about 50,000 miles, and that is equal to twice the circumference of the earth.

NO MATTER.

There Is Nothing Solid, Everything Is In Motion, Say the Scientists, Though You May Not See It.

[Ohio State Journal:] Science is knocking the materialists end for end, as the boys say. It is absolutely proven that there is no such thing as solid, substantive matter. It is only motion. This stone, this table, this hammer is only motion. Some new-fangled idiotic idea, eh? Well, it is known that matter is composed of atoms. For a long time the atom was thought to be the final analysis of matter.

But such is not the case. A few years ago radium was discovered, and that has broken the atom into small bits, 2000 times smaller than the hydrogen atom, the smallest of all. These particles of the atom are called electrons, and now it has been found that these electrons are mere points of electrical energy. "These electrons," says a magazine article "are entirely free from anything that can be properly called matter."

Trillions and trillions of these electrons make up this piece of iron, and they are always in motion, flitting about at the rate of 50,000 miles a second. Now you know there is a lie out—how can a man calculate the speed of an invisible motion inside of an invisible atom? Oh, dear reader, you have no idea how big and deep this world is, or how powerful human genius is, or how small a space you occupy in the world.

Campaign.

DAY OF REST FOR MR. TAFT.

Will Spend Sunday in His Home in Cincinnati.

Ten Speeches Are on His Monday Programme.

And Next Day the People of Ohio Will Decide.

[The Times Wireless, Cable, Eastern and Overland News Service.]

CINCINNATI, May 18.—President Taft will keep his Sunday here out of politics. The President would rather lose votes than sacrifice the time which has been his from boyhood to spend Sunday with the quietude and reverence in keeping with the one day in the week set apart for higher things than chasing a battered campaign hat.

Today he followed up his brilliant campaign in and around Toledo by making stirring speeches on the way to the city, where he will wind up his fight for fair play for a President of the United States tomorrow night. He will deliver ten speeches Monday before leaving Tuesday's decision to the voters who will express their preferences at the primary.

Wauseon was his first stop today and he was welcomed by an immense crowd. Briefly and tellingly the President told of his progressive records, and cheers which rounded out his speech showed that Wauseon had been pried loose from the Roosevelt machine. Taft was given three ringing cheers and a Buckeye "tiger" as his car trailed out of the city.

President Taft in the week just closed has covered fifteen of Ohio's twenty-one Congressional districts. On his trip to Ohio about two weeks ago he spoke in three districts, so that only three districts remain to be covered in Monday's tour.

The tour made by Mr. Taft has been extraordinary not only in the fact that a President of the United States has been obliged to resort to a campaign of the soap-box character, but in the thoroughness of the President's personal canvass. It is seldom that a candidate for Governor stumps his State more thoroughly than has President Taft on his present tour.

But what has been the effect of the Taft tour? That is the question now being asked on all sides. The answer is that Mr. Taft has greatly strengthened himself in his native State. Of this there can be no doubt. Even Roosevelt's supporters acknowledge it.

President Taft in his trip through the State has aroused the issue of State pride. The fact, however, that Mr. Taft has refrained from speaking directly on the ground of his being an Ohio man has added to the sentiment in his favor. The President has asked simply for justice and a square deal from the voters of Ohio for an Ohio President.

Sentiment is crystallizing rapidly now and the campaign managers will be able to judge better of the effects of the Taft and Roosevelt tours in the next two days. If the size of the crowds are any indication of what the voters are going to do the President has the advantage of Roosevelt. Mr. Taft has been greeted by flattering turn-outs in the section of the State that was regarded as Roosevelt strongholds and in those places he has found his audiences unusually responsive.

THE ROOSEVELT DEFICIT, AND THE TAFT SURPLUS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NAPOLEON (O.) May 18.—The President addressed a large crowd, consisting mostly of farmers here, defending his reciprocity treaty and declaring he had redeemed all platform pledges. "Mr. Roosevelt says that I lack imagination and sympathy and am puzzle-witted," continued the President. "I am not so puzzle-witted but that I can perceive the difference between the $50,000,000 treasury deficit at the end of Theodore Roosevelt's two terms, and the $40,000,000 surplus at the end of my first year as President."

LARGE CROWD IN WAUSEON.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WAUSEON (O.) May 18.—President Taft addressed a large crowd here today. He asked if the achievements of his administration had not stamped him as a progressive. In answer to a question as to schedule K, the President said that matter had been referred to the Tariff Commission, which had so recommended as not to injure the wool trade and make the consumer pay too high prices.

APPEAL TO PRIDE, LAST SPEECH IN DAYTON.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SPRINGFIELD (O.) May 18.—Confident that his appeals to the pride of Ohio in an Ohio President have been of some avail and that his chances for capturing this State's delegation to the Republican national convention has improved greatly since he crossed the Ohio River last Monday, President Taft closed the week's campaigning with a speech here today.

When the President makes his last speech at Dayton Monday night he will have traveled almost 3000 miles in Ohio, will have spoken in every Congress district in the State and have visited seventy-three of its eighty-eight counties.

To the farmers today the President declared Mr. Roosevelt had changed his opinion in regard to reciprocity to get votes.

The President's opinion of Mr. Roosevelt's tariff reform ideas was concisely set forth at Paulding. He said:

ENDS AT ONCE ALL STOMACH DISTRESS

A Little Diapepsin Cures Indigestion, Gas, Heartburn or Dyspepsia in Five Minutes.

If you had some Diapepsin handy and would take a little now your stomach distress or Indigestion would vanish in five minutes and you would feel fine.

This harmful preparation will digest anything you eat and overcome a sour, out-of-order stomach before you realize it.

If your meals don't tempt you, or what little you do eat seems to fill you, or lays like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of indigestion.

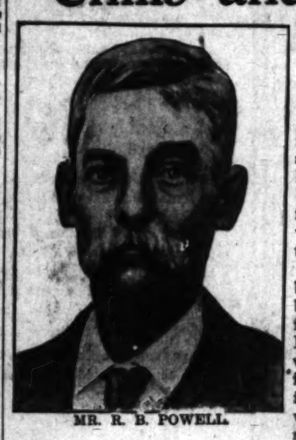
Ask your Pharmacist for a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a little just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach, Nausea, Debilitating Headaches, Dizziness or Intestinal griping. This will all go, and, besides, there will be no undigested food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odors.

Pape's Diapepsin is a certain cure for out-of-order stomach, because it prevents fermentation and takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is at any drug store waiting for you.

These large 50-cent cases of Pape's Diapepsin contain more than sufficient to thoroughly cure almost any case of Dyspepsia, Indigestion or any other stomach disturbance.

Chills and Malaria



MR. R. B. POWELL.

Mississippi's Malaria Regions Held No Terrors for Mr. R. B. Powell, So Long As He Used Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey As Directed.

It is hard to conceive of a man improving in health and appearance where so many had malaria. Read the experience of R. B. Powell, who kept himself free from malaria, chills and fever while in the most infected sections of the United States.

"Twelve years ago my business brought me to the Mississippi bottoms. I had just recovered from a long spell of sickness and I feared I would not be able to withstand another attack. I found much chills and malaria fever among the people and it was impressed upon me that I must take something to keep my system in such good condition that disease would not be able to gain a foothold, or I could not stay in the bottoms. I purchased a case of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey and began using it as directed. I soon found it so thoroughly agreed with me and so assisted in digesting everything I ate that I never had any use for any other medicines. I improved so much in the malaria district that when I came home my best friends scarcely knew me. I have kept Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey in my home since and though I am now 58 years of age, can do as much hard work as any man. I sincerely recommend it to all my friends." R. B. Powell, 923 East 9th st., Little Rock, Ark.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

STANDARD OF PURITY AND EXCELLENCE SINCE 1860

aids and improves digestion. Therein lies one of the most important reasons why it is so valuable. All the nourishment in the food eaten is assimilated and taken into the blood and the whole system, in consequence, becomes stronger and more able to ward off disease. Insead of the body being an easy victim to sickness, it gains in strength and vigor.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is the only whiskey that was taxed by the Government as a medicine during the Spanish-American War.

Sold IN SEALED BOTTLES ONLY—never in bulk, by druggists, grocers and dealers, or direct. $1.00 a large bottle. If your dealer cannot supply you, write us, and we will tell you where it can be bought. Medical booklet and doctor's advice free on application.

LOZIER 1913 Automatic Level Oiling System

Another 1913 Lozier innovation—one of the many valuable new features you can get only in the Lozier. High oil level at high speeds—low oil level at low speeds—a smokeless exhaust at all speeds.

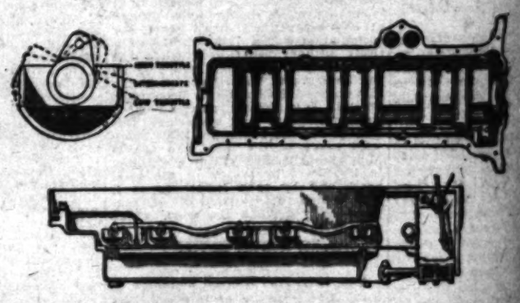
Aside from the many mechanical advantages of this unique system, consider the desirability of a motor that cannot smoke. No worry about city ordinances against smoking exhausts, no offensive odor, no greasy smoke, no carbonized valves or sooty spark plugs.

Mechanically this new system is a marked step forward in motor car design—one of the greatest achievements of Lozier engineers in recent years.

Note the illustration showing top and sectional views of the lower part of the crank case and a sectional view of one of the tilting oil troughs. As the throttle is opened or closed, these troughs automatically raise or lower the oil level, so that the motor is getting just the proper amount of lubrication under all conditions.

In addition to eliminating the offensive smoking exhaust and providing perfect lubrication, this novel oiling system is also extremely economical—300 to 400 miles to a gallon of oil under ordinary road conditions.

You may not think you are interested in mechanical details, but one thorough demonstration in a Type 72, 1913 Lozier, will prove what Left-Hand Drive, Center Control, Automatic-Level Oiling System, Triple Ignition, and other Lozier features mean to you in comfort, safety, convenience and good investment.



The 1913 Lozier has advanced features of design you will not find in any other car. Make an appointment for a demonstration of this remarkable car. It's well worth your time. 32-page catalog on request.

CHILDREN STAR IN MAY FETE.

Their Pageant Feature of Brownson Benefit.

Workman Grounds Present Fairyland Spectacle.

Society Women Lend Aid to Charity Festival.

The May fete given yesterday afternoon in the beautiful grounds of the W. H. Workman residence, No. 257 South Boyle avenue, for the benefit of Brownson House was one of the notable social events of the spring season. Fully 2000 handsomely gowned members of Los Angeles social set attended the fete, which lasted from 2 until 6 o'clock in the evening.

The grounds, with their old trees towering high in the air, were a beautiful spectacle. The tennis court at one corner was screened off by huge palm leaves and in the center of the court the folk dances were held. Next to the tennis court a bevy of charming young ladies led by Miss Pauline Vollmer and Miss Hazel Ball were dispensing fruits from a pretty decorated booth.

A little farther along were the flower booths where beautiful cut flowers were distributed. Then came the fish pond where the little ones tried their luck. At the other end of the tennis court was a big wheel of fortune which could be revolved at so much per revolution, the numbers calling for prizes.

In the barn at the lower end of the grounds a marionette theater had been equipped and the little tots were spellbound as the manikins acted and moved about.

Then there were a half dozen Shetland ponies which were used to carry the little ones on trips around the beautiful grounds. In fact the entire stretch of lawn under the big trees was a scene of animation and beauty.

It was the first attempt of the Brownson House Association to give a garden party as their annual benefit. Heretofore the young ladies who are actively connected with the association have always given vaudeville performances—the proceeds of which were donated to the Brownson House. This year it was determined to give a garden party and yesterday's beautiful scene was the result.

It was impossible to bring all of the little tots who are benefited by the establishment and maintenance of the Brownson House to the fete, but a number from the various schools were present and participated in the cunningly executed folk dances and parades.

Promptly at 2:30 o'clock the pageant which had been forming in the rear of the Workman residence began its stately march across the big lawn and under the old tall trees. There were colonial dames in white powdered hair, black beauty spots and wide ruffes. They were followed by a group of kiddies wearing brown smock costumes with pointed cowls. Then followed a bewildering array of little ones dressed as butterflies with big yellow wings fastened to their shoulders. In the center of them was their queen with her escort and the little tot ruled it over her subjects in a royal manner. There were little Dutch girls with white peaked caps, red blouses and wooden shoes. Afterwards came a host of fluffy ruffled, the young ladies all togged out in garden dresses and wide garden hats, making a fairyland scene.

The pageant marched across the lawn to the tennis court where a piano was stationed and formed in a solid bank back of this instrument. There were folk dances, May Day dances, a parasol dance, Dutch song and dance, a sailors hornpipe, an old fashioned minuet and beautiful solos both vocal and instrumental.

The gaily dressed guests kept coming and going throughout the entire afternoon and it is estimated that fully 2000 attended the beautiful May fete.

The exact financial result of the affair is not known. A number of tickets are still out and have not been accounted for. It is freely stated, however, that the returns will exceed that of former years by a wide margin.

Workman Grounds Present Fairyland Spectacle.

Society Women Lend Aid to Charity Festival.

The May fete given yesterday afternoon in the beautiful grounds of the W. H. Workman residence, No. 257 South Boyle avenue, for the benefit of Brownson House was one of the notable social events of the spring season. Fully 2000 handsomely gowned members of Los Angeles social set attended the fete, which lasted from 2 until 6 o'clock in the evening.

The grounds, with their old trees towering high in the air, were a beautiful spectacle. The tennis court at one corner was screened off by huge palm leaves and in the center of the court the folk dances were held. Next to the tennis court a bevy of charming young ladies led by Miss Pauline Vollmer and Miss Hazel Ball were dispensing fruits from a pretty decorated booth.

A little farther along were the flower booths where beautiful cut flowers were distributed. Then came the fish pond where the little ones tried their luck. At the other end of the tennis court was a big wheel of fortune which could be revolved at so much per revolution, the numbers calling for prizes.

In the barn at the lower end of the grounds a marionette theater had been equipped and the little tots were gathered as the manikins acted and danced about.

Then there were a half dozen Shetland ponies which were used to carry the little ones on trips around the beautiful grounds. In fact the entire stretch of lawn under the big trees was a scene of animation and beauty.

It was the first attempt of the Brownson House Association to give a garden party as their annual benefit. Heretofore the young ladies who are actively connected with the association have always given vaudeville entertainments—the proceeds of which were donated to the Brownson House. This year it was determined to give a garden party and yesterday's beautiful scene was the result.

It was impossible to bring all of the little tots who are benefited by the establishment and maintenance of the Brownson House to the fete, but a number from the various wards were present and participated in the cunningly executed folk dances and parades.

Promptly at 2:30 o'clock the parade which had been forming in the rear of the Workman residence began its stately march across the big lawn and under the old tall trees. Dozen colonial dames in white powdered hair, black beauty spots and ruffles. They were followed by a group of kiddies wearing brown dress costumes with pointed cowls. These followed a bewildering array of fairies dressed as butterflies with yellow wings fastened to their shoulders. In the center of them all their queen with her escort and train of tots ruled it over her subjects in a royal manner. There were Dutch girls with white peaked caps, red blouses and wooden shoes. Then came a host of fluffy ruffled dresses and wide garden hats, making a fairyland scene.

The pageant marched across the lawn to the tennis court where a platform was stationed and formed in a circle back of this instrument there were folk dances, May Day dances, a parasol dance, Dutch song dances, a sailors hornpipe, an old fashioned minuet and beautiful solos by vocal and instrumental.

The gaily dressed guests kept company going throughout the entire afternoon and it is estimated that fully 2000 attended the beautiful May fete.

The exact financial result of the affair is not known. A number of tickets are still out and have not been accounted for. It is freely predicted, however, that the returns will be somewhat in excess of former years by a wide margin.

SONOMA'S COMING AND ALL ARE WELL.

A telegram from Dr. Walter Lindley to President H. Z. Osborne of the Chamber of Commerce last night, stated that the steamer Sonoma will reach the outer dock at San Pedro at 3 o'clock this afternoon and asks that the customs officers be present to inspect the baggage. Dr. Lindley in his message said all aboard were well.

The Sonoma has been to Panama with delegations of San Francisco and Los Angeles civic representatives to inspect the canal work and get a line on changed trade conditions when the project is completed.

NORWEGIANS CELEBRATE.

Their National Holiday Observed With Patriotic Speeches, Folk Songs and Dances.

Norway's Independence Day, the Seventeenth of May, was observed last night by 500 Norwegian Americans who gathered in McKinley Hall as the guests of Pyr Gynt Lodge No. 22, Sons of Norway. This is the day which all patriotic Norwegians celebrate for it is the anniversary of the declaration of independence made by Norway in 1804 and which resulted in freedom from Danish rule.

Dr. F. V. Mohn was chairman of the evening. A patriotic and historical address was delivered by R. O. Belland who spoke of the birth of Norway's freedom and of the achievements of famous Norsemen including Amundsen the explorer. Miss Signe Dahl, who has a sweet, well trained soprano voice, sang Norwegian folk songs, among them folk songs by Kjerulf and Margaret's oradle songs by Gregg. There were also violin solos by M. Clemendson and Miss Sadie Stanton, baritone solos by John Jurgens and a piano solo by Miss Hazel Peterson. All the addresses and songs were in the Norse tongue.

Following the programme the floor was cleared for dancing and imported Norwegian delicacies were served including anchovies, sardines, salmon, fishballs and cheese. Many of the ladies wore the picturesque peasant costumes of northern Norway.

The size of last night's gathering is not to be wondered at in view of the fact that there are nearly 5000 Norwegian Americans now in this city. This number will probably be doubled within two years as Norwegians are coming here in increasing numbers, not only from their homeland, but from eastern States. It was stated last night that a movement is on foot to organize a Scandinavian-American bank in this city to be controlled by prominent Scandinavians here. Among the prominent men present were Hans Jevne, D. A. Didricksen, Dr. Albert Soiland, Ole J. Wigdal, vice-president of the Home Savings bank, and Charles A. Knagenhelm.

FRESNO'S MAYOR ILL HERE.

Dr. Chester Rowell Brought to This City in Hopes Change of Climate Will Aid Cure.

Mayor Chester Rowell of Fresno is seriously ill at the home of W. J. Washburn, No. 220 Harvard avenue. Mayor Rowell had been ill in Fresno for several weeks and as soon as he was able to be moved he was brought here by his physician, Dr. W. T. Barr and two trained nurses. Chester H. Rowell, nephew of the Mayor, accompanied Dr. Rowell, but has returned home. The Mayor is in a serious condition, having suffered several sinking spells, but last night was somewhat improved.

Dr. Rowell's physician deemed it best to move him from Fresno because the Mayor underwent several relapses following the first spell of hot weather. During the Mayor's illness Trustee Alva Snow is acting Mayor. Dr. Rowell's administration ends in April.

GRAY HAIRS QUICKLY VANISH IF YOU USE SAGE AND SULPHUR

A feeling of sadness accompanies the discovery of the first gray hairs which unfortunately are looked upon as heralds of advancing age. Gray hair, however handsome it may be, makes a person look old. We all know the advantages of being young. Aside from the good impression a youthful appearance makes on others, simply knowing that you are "looking fit" gives one courage to undertake and accomplish things. So why suffer the handicap of looking old on account of gray hairs, when a simple remedy will give your hair youthful color and beauty in a few days' time.

Most people know that common garden sage acts as a color restorer and scalp tonic as well. Our grandmothers used a "Sage Tea" for keeping their hair dark, soft and luxuriant. In Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy we have an ideal preparation of Sage, combined with Sulphur and other valuable remedies for dandruff, itching scalp and thin, weak hair that is split at the ends or constantly coming out. A few applications of this valuable remedy will bring back the color, and in a short time it will remove every trace of dandruff and greatly improve the growth and appearance of the hair.

Get a fifty-cent bottle from your druggist today, and notice the difference in your hair after a few days' treatment. All druggists sell it, under guarantee that the money will be refunded if the remedy is not exactly as represented. Special Agent, Sun Drug Company.

McDuff Lays On.

BULLET TEARS THROUGH BODY.

Negro Patrolman Shoots Man Accused of Robbery.

Fugitive, Partially Cuffed, Pursued by Crowds.

Police Find Loot Concealed in Victim's Room.

As he was running down an alley near East Fourth street and Central avenue with a pair of handcuffs swinging from his right wrist, in an endeavor to escape from a pursuing officer, a young man suspected of burglary, and giving the name of Harry Stockton of Louisville, Ky., was shot and perhaps fatally wounded about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon by Patrolman Littleton McDuff, a negro, on special duty as recording clerk in Capt. Flammer's office.

Although fully advised before he was placed under ether that he might never regain consciousness, Stockton refused to give his right name or tell where friends or relatives might be located. He said:

PROTECTS FAMILY.

"What's the use of bringing disgrace upon my people? I'm the black sheep of the family. Since mother died four years ago, I've been wandering about the country."

Later Stockton said his grandfather is Dr. E. A. Sheldon of Graysville, Tenn.

Stockton was seen endeavoring to sell to the Central Loan and Pawn Brokers of No. 401 Central avenue fountain pens and other articles alleged to have been stolen Friday night from A. A. Appell's store, No. 635 West Eighth street. Capt. Flammer ordered McDuff to investigate.

Arriving at the pawnshop, and satisfying himself that the young man was trying to dispose of stolen goods, the officer placed him under arrest. While the officer was in the act of placing the second cuff upon Stockton's left wrist, the latter jerked away and ran out the front door. Rushing around the corner he ran to an alley and down that narrow thoroughfare. He was closely followed by McDuff and a small-sized crowd of men and boys, attracted by the unusual sight of a partially shackled man running away.

McDuff reported to Capt. Flammer that he called upon the fleeing man to stop, and when he didn't he fired his revolver at him. The report was followed by a cry of pain from the young man as he pitched headlong into the dust of the alley. Keeping his man fully covered, not knowing whether he was armed and might shoot in return, McDuff ran up to him, removed the handcuff and then summoned the auto which had brought him to the pawnshop.

BLAMES ANOTHER.

In a half-fainting condition Stockton was taken to the Receiving Hospital. While being prepared for the operation he was closely questioned by detectives. He said he had been in the city but a month, coming here from Dallas. He denied stoutly that he had stolen the goods he was trying to pawn, declaring that a man named "Jimmy" had given them to him to sell, he to receive half what he could get for them.

Finally Stockton told the officers his room was near Temple and Figueroa streets. There a quantity of loot of several robberies was recovered. Among the effects identified yesterday afternoon was a portion of the loot stolen the night of the 12th inst. from Miss Townsend, daughter of Dr. E. L. Townsend of No. 1610 West Eleventh street.

Under the name of Harry Perry, and giving his address as the Gray Hotel, Stockton had pawned considerable stuff. The detectives are now investigating where these articles were secured.

"I was caught stealing a ride on a freight train," he said. "I was sent to the mines in Alaska; that is where I got these few gray hairs. It was a living hell in that place. That was the only time I was ever arrested."

McDuff will probably not be suspended, as his superior officers consider that he shot in the full performance of his legal duty in apprehending a fugitive.

ALLEGED ACCOMPLICE.

At a late hour last night Joe Armstrong, believed to be the accomplice of Stockton, was arrested by the police on the charge of committing several burglaries in connection with a gang of professional thieves who are now being rounded up by the officers.

Among other members of the gang who have fallen into the hands of the police are Harry Waters and George Riley, both of whom are said to have been engaged in crime under the leadership of Stockton.

A large quantity of stolen property also was captured by the officers, including articles taken from the homes of Dr. E. L. Townsend, No. 1610 West Eleventh street; B. Ingveldsen, No. 367 East Thirty-third street, and A. A. Appell, No. 635 West Eighth street. All of this property later was identified as part of the loot stolen by the gang.

Plainclothes Officers Stevens, Watson and Glenn were detailed at an early hour this morning to bring in another member of the band, who is said to have been with Stockton a few minutes before he was shot.

SULPHURRO'S MANY CURES MAKE ALL TACOMA MARVEL

SAVES LIFE FOR MAN WHO SAW NO HOPE FOR LIVING

E. J. Rose Given Up as Case Beyond Reach, but Now He's Well.

SOCIETY WOMAN ONE GRATEFUL TO REMEDY.

Correspondent Relates Story of Remarkable Cures in City of Destiny — Professional Nurse Admirer of New Medicine.

By F. W. STRANG.

(Special to Post-Intelligencer.)

TACOMA, May 18.—Sulphurro is conquering the ills and sufferings of Tacoma as Caesar conquered Rome.

Some of the most wonderful cures that have ever come under my notice in a lifetime of observation I have seen here in Tacoma. Sulphurro has completely captured this city and its vicinity, and the people here show a supreme faith in its powers, because they have had visual demonstration of the new medicine's works.

In traveling up and down the Pacific Coast as a newspaper correspondent I have made a particular study of Sulphurro's accomplishments, and I desire to outline some of the more remarkable cases that I have investigated right here in this city.

E. J. Rose is one of the most widely known business men of Western Washington. He was afflicted with what is known to medical men as an exophthalmic goitre, and so large had the growth become that it was almost cutting off the air passage leading to the lungs. A little more and it would have put a stop to all his activities.

Tacoma Man Facing Death.

Mr. Rose had consulted specialists from far and near without result. He was compelled to give up his business, though he had led a particularly active life. He seldom left his home. Naturally enough, life seemed to hold out for him no further charms. He was awaiting the one possible outcome.

Through a friend he heard of Sulphurro before the medicine was put upon the market by Mr. C. M. C. Stewart. Direct from Mr. Stewart he obtained some of the new Sulphur remedy, believing that if the blood was put in proper condition the poison of the goitre would be held in check, if not completely eliminated. Other sufferers from goitre had found relief in Sulphurro.

From the first, improvement began, and today Mr. Rose is completely cured. He is back attending to business, and is one of the happiest men in Tacoma. He is a living demonstration of what Sulphurro will do when it is used according to directions. Mr. Rose is past 60 years old.

"I feel like a youth of 20," he said to me, with a smile that mingled joy, gratitude and many other emotions. The light of life was upon Mr. Rose's face; not the shadow of the Reaper. Hundreds of people have since become friends of Sulphurro through Mr. Rose's efforts.

Yet this man had been given up as incurable by some of the leading specialists of the time. What may we not expect of a medicine that makes such a wonderful demonstration of its power?

A prominent society woman of Tacoma was afflicted with an exophthalmic goitre, similar to that of Mr. Rose, and in addition for years had suffered with a fibroid tumor. Her case, too, had been given up as hopeless. Today this woman is strong and well—the picture of health, I may say. Both her afflictions have disappeared. The agent? Sulphurro.

Woman Celebrates Recovery.

These two cases have attracted wide attention in Tacoma, but there are scores of others. There is a woman living just to the southward of the city, in the direction of Olympia. She had been bedridden for years with what seemed like a hopeless case of rheumatism. Sulphurro was recommended to her by some one who had been cured of rheumatism, and she began taking the new medicine.

The other day she celebrated her recovery to perfect health by cooking a dinner for a number of her friends who drove nine miles out from the city to spend the day at her home.

One of the higher officers of the Tacoma police department was completely cured of a particularly severe case of rheumatism by Sulphurro — and very quickly cured, too.

A well-known professional nurse who has traveled extensively through this territory, tells of the case of the wife of a hotel proprietor in Aberdeen, who was cured likewise, her suffering also being caused by Rheumatism. This nurse aided the patient in taking the Sulphurro baths, and in other features of the treatment, and, it was a revelation to this professional woman to see how Sulphurro effected its cures. She is a great Sulphurro "booster," and will always remain so.

MAN NEAR DEATH FRO RHEUMATISM CUR QUICKLY BY SULPHURR

A prominent Seattle business m hearing from his friend, Willia Foster, president of the General proofing Company, in Youngs Ohio, that the foreman of the proofing plant was near death rheumatism, obtained a bottle of phurro from Mr. C. M. C. Stewa the C. M. C. Stewart Sulphur pany, and sent it to the Ohio accompanied with directions fo use. The Seattle man believed phurro would effect a cure.

Here is an extract from a letter ceived a few days ago by Mr. Ste from Mr. Foster, telling the histo the case:

"The facts are that we sent man (the foreman) to Mt. Cle Mich., and to sanitariums in the cinity, but notwithstanding this continued to grow more feeble, the rheumatism gathered around heart until he was confined to his and we feared he was going to die

"We gave him Sulphurro, and wit in four weeks thereafter he was tending to his duties in the shop, he has been at work steadily ever since. This was about six or eight months ago."

Woman a Sulphurro Philanthropist.

One other instance I want to mention relates to a pioneer woman living Tacoma, who performs great good in world by relieving the sufferings of neighbors and friends through the distribution of Sulphurro. This woman is devoting her best energies and ef to this service in aid of the afflic She buys bottles of Sulphurro, sa at a time, and gives them out w they do the most good. She directs patients in the proper use of the me cine, aids them in taking it, and presses upon them the necessity for lowing closely the directions in booklet.

This woman is as much of a ph thropist in her way and in greater portion to her means, perhaps, than gives of millions. She is alleviating man suffering, and bringing life, he and sunshine into many homes. One the cases this woman is treating is pecially worthy of note. She had been giving Sulphurro to a woman who suffering from kidney trouble. This cured, but the Sulphurro also is prod ing marked improvement in the tub cular condition of the patient. The per fication of the blood is apparently do ing out the tubercular bacilli.

For Rheumatism, skin and blood d orders Sulphurro, I find, is working wo ders from British Columbia to Mexi I am advising all sufferers I meet eith to buy a 50-cent or $1 bottle of Sulphurro at any drug store, or to send di rect to the C. M. C. Stewart Sulphu Company's office, 71 Columbia street, a free booklet that tells all about Mr. Stewart's discovery, and how and why it brings back health and strength.

JAPANESE TRIES FINANCE.

Covina Laborer Steals Checks and Soon Comes to Grief After Cashing One of Them.

COVINA, May 18.—A frenzied financier in the person of a flat-nosed Japanese laborer, who, instead of laboring, has been loafing around the Japanese camp on Citrus avenue, caused a small flurry in Covina when he stole a check belonging to the Covina Citrus Association, signed by B. F. Edwards and calling for $216. He didn't get the money on this check, but he cashed a Southern Pacific pay check for $44, belonging to a fellow-countryman, and had several other checks on his person when found by Constable Saunders in a Los Angeles poolroom.

Complaint was sworn to by Ward A. Hays of the Hays Clothing Company, where one of the checks was cashed in payment for a suit of clothes. Saunders brought the Jap to Covina and he is now awaiting examination on the charge of grand larceny.

BURNED TO DEATH IN CELD.

Redlands Man Locked Up for Being Drunk Ignites Bed Clothing and Death Follows.

REDLANDS, May 18.—C. W. Henry, who was placed in the City Jail early last evening by Officers Larmore and Jones for being drunk on the street, was found burned to death early this morning.

It is supposed that he attempted to light a cigarette and the bedclothing was ignited. As the room is small, he was unable to get away from it, and his body was burned to a crisp.

The young man was 29 years of age, having celebrated his birthday anniversary yesterday with a spree. Coroner Fuller held an inquest over the remains at noon today, the verdict being that he came to his death from burns, the origin of the fire being unknown. There was no other person in the jail and it is not known when the accident happened, the fire being practically out when the officers discovered the smoke issuing from the building.

NEWS BRIEFS.

Horace Ferguson, who was seriously injured in an auto accident a week ago, died early this morning. Coroner Fuller held an inquest over his remains, the verdict being that death was due to an accident.

Coroner Fuller also held an inquest over the remains of Sylvester F. Brown, who committed suicide yesterday morning, the verdict of suicide by shooting being returned.

BIG ADVERTISING STUNTS.

Jim Flynn Makes a Noise Like a Great Man in Las Vegas, Where He Opens ball Games and a Dance.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LAS VEGAS (N. M.) May 18.—"So Jack Johnson does not think that the high altitude is going to make any difference to him when we clash on the Fourth of July. Well, all I can say is that a smoke belongs in the swamps and that Jack had best become acclimated, or this 6000 feet above the sea level stuff will get his goat. I'll lick him sure."

Thus did Sunny Jim Flynn, the Pueblo fireman, declare himself in his camp at Montezuma Springs today when informed Lil' Arthur did not take any stock in the recent crack of Jack Curley's, that one of Fynnn's aces in the hills was the Las Vegas atmosphere and high altitude.

That the stranger to these parts is up against it, if he cuts loose at too fast a clip, before becoming acclimated, was stated at the boxing show given Friday night. Wednesday John Demel, from Ellingwood, Kan., arrived in town and reported to Jack Curley. He was booked to work with Flynn, and his sponsor is a man who ought to know a good pugilistic performer when he sees one. Demel is only 19 years old. He is a welterweight at best, and that is the reason Flynn and Curley cannot find employment for him, though the man who is vouching for him considers him the best 148-pound ringman in the world.

Flynn made his first appearance in town last night since camp was pitched at Montezuma Springs. He is coming in to umpire the baseball matinee between the Las Vegas and Dawson teams. He will also pitch the first ball. Tonight he is to lead the grand march at the firemen's ball, and since the big fellow consented to attend, tickets have been going like hot cakes.

ANGELS SHUT OUT SENATORS.

LEVERENZ RETURNS TO FORM AND WINS EASILY.

Hits Out Double That Sends Over Second Run in Second Inning—Dillon's Men Put Up Errorless Ball—Ten of the Victims Are Left on Bases.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, May 18.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Nobody ever charged Pop Dillon's Angels with playing in cahoots with Kid Mohler's much abused aggregation of Seals, but there was plenty of circumstantial evidence that supports such a charge in this afternoon's game at Buffalo Park. For just when the local fans were living in the hope that the Senators might share the occupancy of fourth place more than twenty-four hours with those Seals, the Angels came through with their usual stunt and put the game on ice in the first two innings for a 2 to 0 victory over Sacramento. A walk, stolen base, infield out and Cheek's passed ball tell the tale of the first inning run. The second was like unto the first, in that it was of the gift variety, O'Rourke's error giving Lober a life, and Bole's sacrifice and a double by Leverens chased in the tally.

Southpaw Leverenz was entitled to revenge for the disgrace which hung over him when he was chased to the clubhouse in the first inning of Friday's game.

The local fans were hoping that he would wait and take out his spite on Vernon next week, but Leverenz could not see things that way and asked Pop Dillon for a chance to redeem himself. He got the chance and he made good, thanks to the perfect support which was given him and the loose-jointed support which was given Honolulu John Williams, Patsy's choice for a slabster.

The defeat today put the rollers under the Senators and they slipped back into fifth berth when the Mohlerites took a brace and pulled through with a real victory over the Oaks at the bay. It also killed all chance of the Senators getting away with the series from the Dillonites. The locals had gamely evened up matters after Los Angeles took the first two of the series, but O'Rourke's boys did not have it in them to win three in a row and the Southerners are now out in front on the games of the week, 4 to 2. Just to rub in his revenge on a few more sore spots, Leverenz himself contributed the timely hit which chased across the second Los Angeles run. After O'Rourke had booted Lober's grounder, Boles dumped one to Williams for a sacrifice which sent Lober safely to second. Then it was that Leverenz went to bat with fire in his eyes as he thought of that eventful first inning of Friday. Leverenz leaned on one of the Honolulu boy's offerings and when the ball landed it was out far in left center, safely away from the reach of Van Buren and Lewis, and Leverenz pulled up on second and Lober scored before the ball was played back to the infield.

Safely out in front with a lead of two runs, the Angels proceeded to come through with their second errorless game of the week and put the crusher on everything that served to raise the hopes of the local fans. The Senators put ten men on the bags during the game. But try as they would they could not send one of these ten beyond second base.

NATIONALS HIT WELD.

NEW YORK, May 18.—The National League is still outbatting the Americana, but the junior organization is catching up, according to the batting averages published today. There are four Nationals hitting above .400, Meyers leading with .429, and nineteen hitting between .300 and .400. In the American League there are two men batting above .400, McInnes of the Athletics, .424, and Speaker of Boston, with .400. Eleven men are hitting between .300 and .400.

EASY FOR HARVARD.

CAMBRIDGE (Mass.) May 18.—The Harvard track team today overwhelmed the Yale athletes in their dual games, winning by 71 to 38, and mainly because of the Crimson's ability to win first places, of which Withington's team took ten out of the thirteen events.

Ludicrous Contest Pulled Off Before Large Crowd in Philadelphia Game Counts in Club Standing. Naps Down New York — Chicago Wins and Washington Loses.

[The Times Wireless, Cable, Eastern and Overland News Service.]

PHILADELPHIA, May 18.—For the first time since baseball has been played on its present high plane an entire team rebelled against league authority and went on a strike, today.

Detroit players made good their threat not to play if the suspension of Ty Cobb was not lifted, so today's patrons of Shibe Park had the novelty of seeing the champions of the world meet a team of raw amateurs in a game counted in the American League standing. The score:

Philadelphia, 24; hits 25; errors, 1.
Detroit, 2; hits, 4; errors, 6.

Batteries—Coombs, Brown, Penneck and Lapp; Travers and McGuire.

THREE RUNS IN TENTH.

NAPS WIN FROM YANKEES.

[The Times Wireless, Cable, Eastern and Overland News Service.]

NEW YORK, May 18.—Hal Chase was back in today's game, but he only went to bat for Sweeney, in a vain effort to overcome a three-run lead the Naps had accumulated in the first part of the session.

Probably the most remarkable exhibition of fruitless hitting in the history of baseball was given by the Yankees in the eighth inning, when four singles were made in succession, and not a score made against the Naps.

It happened like this:

Wolter and Hartzell both hit safely. Cree then smashed a line drive that was headed for left field, but it struck Wolter as he was going to third. Wolter was out and under the rules, Cree was credited with a hit. Simmons then hit safely and filled the bases, but Dolan and Martin died on easy flies and there was nothing doing.

The score:

Cleveland, 10; hits 13; errors, 1.
New York, 7; hits 16; errors, 3.

WHITE SOX WIN AGAIN.

BOSTON MAKES MOST HITS.

[The Times Wireless, Cable, Eastern and Overland News Service.]

BOSTON, May 18.—ThTe White Sox took another game from Boston, today. They made fewer hits off Bedent, but they were better placed and produced runs. The score:

Boston, 1; hits 8; errors, 1.
Chicago, 3; hits, 7; errors, 3.

Batteries—Bedient and Carrigan; Benz and Kuhn.

SENATORS EASY PICKING.

TAIL-ENDERS ARE WINNERS.

[The Times Wireless, Cable, Eastern and Overland News Service.].

WASHINGTON, May 18.—The Senators were the easiest kind of picking for the St. Louis Browns here this afternoon. The score was 8 to 2. Five runs in the sixth session cinched the contest for the western aggregation. Lake kept the locals' hits scattered. The score:

St. Louis, 8; hits, 11; errors, 1.
Washington, 2; hits, 4; errors, 2.

Batteries—Lake and Stephen; Hughes, Groom, Akers, Becker and Henry.

The last horse-drawn cab has disappeared from the streets of Berlin, Germany.

Pomona Wins.

HUNS MAKE CLEAN RUN FOR SOUTHERN PENNANT.

POMONA finished up the season with a perfect percentage by decisively beating the Poets in a game of rather one-sided ball yesterday afternoon at Whittier. The playing was full of errors, and was not much of a contest. Score—Pomona, 6; Whittier, 1.

The Huns started out in the first inning by bunching hits and with the help of a little poor playing on the part of Whittier. Wight singled to right, was put on second by Edwards's single through the infield, and came home when Elliott fumbled Shutt's grounder. Edwards scored when Kingman knocked the ball far out in center field for two bases.

In the third, Shutt got on by Renaecker's error, went to third on an out and scored on the next out. The seventh brought two more runs for Pomona, by hitting the ball on the nose and a couple of costly errors by Whittier.

In the ninth, Shutt scored again by gaining on base through errors and hit the ball.

Whittier's lone run came in the eighth, through an error by Edwards and a hit over right field fence by Commack.

Oliver was wilder than usual throughout the game and was touched for hits whenever they were needed. Becker broke the spell of a no-hit season and got two bingles off Oliver.

Becker pitched in his usual form till the eighth inning, when he became suddenly wild and was taken out. Daniels, who took his place, fanned two of the men who faced him in the ninth and sent the other to the bench when he fielded a hard grounder perfectly.

This game gives Pomona the third season with 1.000 percentage and the fourth that any southern college has ever captured.

The score:

Pomona, 6; hits, 9; errors, 3.
Whittier, 1; hits, 6; errors, 5.

Batteries — Becker, Daniels and Shutt; Oliver and Donaghu.

Ah! So Fair.

BIG DAY OF SPORT AT SAN GABRIEL GOLF CLUB.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

THE San Gabriel Country Club simply effervesced from 9 a.m. until midnight yesterday, when a large tennis tournament was in progress lasting all day. A golf match occupied the links all the afternoon, and society flocked in its battalions and its prettiest clothes to do honor to the occasion.

Several interesting tennis stars, present and future, were invited to take part in the tournament, over which Miss Fanny Shoemaker presided, and there was a most attractive entry. Ladies doubles occupied the courts in the morning, when young Mrs. Stickrod and Miss Lily Kincaid defeated all comers in the round robin with a score of 20 games.

Miss Kincaid is the new champion of the S. C. U. She is a most delightful young lady, and Mrs. Stickrod, who gladdened our vision with a most stunning red sports coat with an emerald green collar, was looking prettier than ever. They have been practicing together a great deal lately and consequently were playing a strong team game, far and away superior to any of the others.

The next best team was that of the two Palmer sisters, who scored sixteen games. Miss Elsa Palmer only returned from a two years' tour in Europe last Tuesday, where she was the proud winner of the famous winter tournament at Cannes on the French Riviera, and she has lost no time in resuming her Californian interests. She was wearing a most becoming blue gown and played a very good game.

Miss Miriam Palmer, who is always so graceful on the courts, was in excellent form, and later in the mixed doubles with Mr. Clark, she and her partner made the excellent score of 25 games.

MIXED DOUBLES WINNERS.

Miss Rowland and Miss Markham, 12 games, Miss Fanny Rowan and Mrs. Hillman with 11 games, Miss Fanny Shoemaker and Mrs. Leffingwell with all games, and dainty little Mrs. Hayes and Miss Penton with 5 games, were the other players who took part in the ladies doubles.

Miss Fanny Rowan and Mr. McFarlane were the winners of the mixed doubles with 32 games and Miss Kincaid and Mr. Renick came second with 31. Then came Miss Miriam Palmer and Mr. Clark with 29, and Mrs. Stickrod and Mr. Hastings with 26. Will Bacon and Miss Constance Colwill, who looks quite as charming as an athlete as she does as a Parisian fashion plate, won 23 games which is no mean score considering Miss Colwill is one of the newest of novices. That she, is a potential tennis star was evident for her play showed quite remarkable improvement as she gained experience during the afternoon and she several times won plaudits from the encouraging onlookers.

Miss Elsa Palmer and Mr. Jacobs won 16 games, and Miss Penton and Mr. Williams 11, which completes the series. Miss May Sutton appeared on the scene to lend the day the glamor of her presence, but she did not play on this occasion—at least not tennis, but she played at dancing in the evening alright.

COON WINS HANDICAP.

P. A. Coon was the winner of the cup for the handicap match play against par, with a gross score of 54. His handicap of 8 made him 2 down to par, the best he has shown for some time and a most praiseworthy score.

Three players tied for second place with 4 down—T. W. Smith, Ross Hiekox, and C. D. Bricker, the first two with 12 handicap and the last with 18. Six down proved to be the next best, with four eligibles in the persons of R. L. Tatum, 1 handicap; A. Howard 10 handicap; J. G. Smith, 12 handicap, and S. N. Salisbury, 16 handicap.

WOODCOCK ALSO RAN.

The captain, H. N. H. Woodcock, who has put up a handsome cup for the best eclectic score made by any member of or substitute for the team during yesterday and today's play, was alas, amongst the also-rans with 9 down. Other participants were Percy Bronson, J. K. Urmston, G. M. Purcell, L. W. Farmer, C. D. Bricker, L. J. Stephens, C. J. Wade, Dr. A. Gardner, S. R. Burns, W. E. Orr, F. O. Wood, W. R. Wharton, J. L. Boyle, H. A. Cole, J. A. Parker, J. A. Bell, and George Cline.

Today they are to play the four ball foursomes against par for which there are also first and second prizes.

THE SOCIAL SIDE.

And society in its new summer finery, was very much in evidence. The tea tables were set on the porches, the large table presided over by Mrs. Phelps Reed and Mrs. Frank Ainsworth being a picture of loveliness, weighed down with wonderful shower baskets of roses and glittering silver—the latter brought from Mrs. Reed's home for the occasion. Mrs. Reed, in a picture hat of Gainsboro design, a pink gown and one of the new chic black silk coatees—to say nothing of the beauty patch, and Mrs. Frank Ainsworth in a soft grey gown, with cleverly jewelled lace, were captivating hostesses, and everything went merrily.

MANY CHARMING WOMEN.

Among the many charming women to be seen, were Mrs. Stanley Wood, who still retains her preference for a smart carriage and pair rather than an auto, her daughter Miss Imogen, in a most effective dark green velvet suit and picture hat, Mrs. F. O. Wood, Mrs. Douglas, Mrs. W. E. Orr, Mrs. S. R. Burns, and Miss Shirley in a dainty mauve creation, Mrs. S. B. Bootes, her sister, Mrs. Blanchard, Miss Constance Clark, Mrs. Colwill, just arrived from New York to stay with her daughter, Mrs. Phelps Reed, Miss Constance Colwill, the Misses Elsa and Miriam Palmer, Mrs. Eckhardt, Mrs. Tate, Mrs. Cline, mother to the only George of that ilk, Miss Charlotte Schrupp of Chicago, who stays here from January to June each year, and Mrs. Masters.

MAY SUTTON HAS FRIENDS.

Miss May Sutton, in mischievous mood, brought a friend down, and Mrs. Gervaise Purcell, Dr. Reed and his daughter Mrs. Hogle, were also to be seen, Mrs. Roberts and Miss Lulu came in from golf, Mrs. S. M. Salisbury, Mrs. Brookhurst, Mrs. Lowe, Miss Randall were all of the party. A number of husbands were dancing attendance in the persons of Mr. Phelps Reed, Mr. Hogle, Mr. Geoffrey Purcell, Mr. Douglas, Mr. F. O. Wood, Mr. S. A. Perley, and any number more were out playing golf. All the tennis men however, did their social duty with their usual grace, Mr. Bacon and Mr. Hastings coming in for special commendation in this respect.

The company was greatly augmented for dinner and the dance afterwards, when the little clubhouse was taxed to its uttermost. Those giving dinner parties were Mr. and Mrs. Salisbury, Mrs. Cecil Frankel, Mrs. Gilbert, Mr. Renick, Mr. Jacobs and Mr. Hastings, the last three the tennis hosts, and Dr. Waller. The clubhouse was happily decorated and the whole affair was a complete success in every department.

Merry Matches.

MACBETH IS STAR IN GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP TOURNEY.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

NORMAN MACBETH made the best score of the day, with 76 in his golf match against Mr. Brown yesterday, defeating him by 6 up and 4. And it was a 76 that should by all the gods have been a 74. But six mingy feet of green lay between our hero and a 74, which shows that even a seasoned "leading man" can suffer from stage fright. For it took him three—yes, three—more strokes to get that pesky ball into the hole.

Another fine score was made by Arthur Braly, with 78 in his match against Walter Cosby, whom he defeated by 3 up and 2. It would appear that Prince Arthur has discovered the something that was lacking, for 78 is par figures and par is understood to constitute perfect golf. Very well, then.

Frank Edwards, with a brilliant 77, defeated Mr. Seaver by 2 up, a very good match, in which Mr. Seaver maintained his recent good form, but Dashing Frank proved just a shade too dashing for him. George Schneider with a 78, defeated L. D. Sale by 7 up and 6, and J. J. Mellus defaulted to Mr. Walton. J. W. Wilson accounted for Dr. Guy Cochrane by 2 up, which completes the first round matches for the championship, Armstrong having won from Jevne and Frederickson from Tufts earlier in the week.

HANDICAP MATCHES CLOSE.

In the spring handicap, too, there were any number of close matches, the most remarkable being that between C. H. Knappe and Goodwin, who seemed incapable of deciding the issue. After tieing at 18 and 27, they went home to rest and then continued the foot by foot and inch by inch contest next day. Not until the fifty-fourth hole were they able to call the match settled, when C. H. Knappe defeated Goodwin by 2 up and 1.

W. J. Chick won his match from L. L. Elliott at the twenty-seventh hole, and S. C. Dunlap defeated John North by 3 and 2. Mr. Bicksler won his match from E. H. Bagby by 3 and 1, Nevin beat Mackeigan 3 and 1, Kitchen beat Williams 4 and 3, Ginn beat Ball 1 up, Smith beat Steckel 5 and 4, Coffin beat Willard 1 up, Scherer beat Leeds 5 and 3, Crutcher beat Pendleton 6 and 4, Eichelberger beat Hudson 6 and 5, Lyon beat Dr. A. M. Smith 1 up, Hunt beat Douglas 2 up, Waters defeated Griffith 5 and 3 and Parsons defeated Burkhardt by 5 and 3.

EDWARDS WINS SWEEPSTAKE.

Play will continue in both events today and Macbeth and Frederickson will probably play off their tie for the qualifying cup.

The sweepstake was won by Edwards with 3 up on Bogey, playing from scratch, and Schneider and Seaver came second with 2 up, the former from scratch and the latter from 2 handicap, and E. B. Tufts third, with 1 up on 2 handicap.

Three players finished even: S. C. Dunlap with 7 handicap, Norman Macbeth with plus 2 and J. E. Smith with 11 handicap. The field included a long list of great names, others taking part being E. S. Armstrong, Judge Frederickson, Jack Jevne, J. W. Wilson, George H. Schneider and so on.

Some of the near-greats or may-be greats were C. H. Knappe, S. C. Ward, S. R. Barry, M. P. Gilbert, David Barry, L. L. Elliott, George Steckel, C. W. Pendleton, L. D. Sale, J. E. Cook, E. B. Tufts, R. H. Ingram, Alex Mackeigan, J. A. Brown, M. E. Ginn, J. Ball, A. L. Schwarz and W. R. Leeds.

Taro for Breakfast Food.

[Consular Reports:] An American breakfast food manufacturer is in Hawaii investigating the taro plant with the view of putting on the market a new food product made therefrom. Taro is a popular name for Colocasia antiquorum, and especially for its variety esculenta, a tropical plant, grown in the islands of the Pacific, where it forms a principal food. Its starchy, stimulating tuberous root is now boiled or baked, made into bread or into poi, a fermented product. The young leaves and tender leaf stalks are used, respectively, like spinach and asparagus. Cassava, or mandioc, another starchy tuber, which grows abundantly in tropical America, might also prove valuable for conversion into breakfast foods. Cassava has long been sold in flaked form in India. Bananas and plantains are also now flaked and crisped, samples of toasted plantain flakes from the Dominican Republic being among the exhibits at the Bureau of Manufactures in Washington; they will also be loaned to interested firms.

The Youngest Town Clerk.

[London Chronicle:] Australia has established a new record—the youngest town clerk in the world, and a great one. Her name is Emily McSheehy, and she is just 17. A place called Byron, in New South Wales, has done this gallant thing through its municipal council. Miss McSheehy's father was the last town clerk, and she had acted as his assistant for a year or two, doing the work so well that the councillors unanimously certified to her ability and assiduity.

NEW YORK, May 18.—That Dr. William S. Rainsford is going into the Congo jungles to search for two missing scientific explorers, Herbert Lang and James Chapin, and not for specimens of the black rhinoceros for the American Museum of Natural History, was stated tonight by student friends of one of the two men whose movements in the tusk trails of the African wilds have been stated by distance since they left their supply base, twenty-three days' trail from Stanleyville, towards the latter part of last year. Chapin is a graduate of Columbia and has friends in New York who are anxious about him. One of those friends received a letter indirectly, telling that all was well and good progress being done in the work by this party under the joint auspices of the American Museum of Natural History and the Belgian government. Confirmation of this reported relief expedition could not be secured tonight from the museum officials.

George H. Sherwood, assistant secretary, said:

"I do not think there is any cause for alarm and I have not heard of any intention on Dr. Rainsford's part to search for Lang and Chapin. As the Belgian government is paying part of the cost of their work in the field and co-operating with the American Museum of Natural History in the Lang-Chapin expedition, it is certain the Belgian officials in the Congo would have informed us promptly if anything had happened to them."

That Dr. Rainsford is not going to confine himself to a search for rhinoceros exhibits, white or black, was admitted by Sherwood. The museum expects to get additions to their African collection which will make it as complete as possible, "but," said Mr. Sherwood, "as Lang and Chapin went into the Congo from the west and planned Coast, and a intends to st East Coast, exploration; he has a rel

Dr. Rainsford of New York to Take the Trail in Africa for Lang and Chapin Reported Lost in the Wilds of the Congo— J. P. Morgan Financing the Relief Expedition for the Natural History Museum.

[BY TIMES WIRELESS, CABLE, EASTERN AND OVERLAND NEWS SERVICE.]

NEW YORK, May 18.—That Dr. William S. Rainsford is going into the Congo jungles to search for the missing scientific explorers, Herbert Lang and James Chapin, and not for specimens of the black rhinoceros for the American Museum of Natural History, was stated tonight by student friends of one of the two men whose movements in the tusk trails of the African wilds have been stated by reports since they left their supply camp, twenty-three days' trail from Nairobiville, towards the latter part of last year. Chapin is a graduate of Columbia and has friends in New York who are anxious about him. One of his friends received a letter indirectly stating that all was well and good progress being done in the work by the party under the joint auspices of the American Museum of Natural History and the Belgian government. Information of this reported relief expedition could not be secured today from the museum officials.

George H. Sherwood, assistant secretary, said:

"I do not think there is any cause for alarm and I have not heard of any action on Dr. Rainsford's part to search for Lang and Chapin. As the Belgian government is paying part of the cost of their work in the field and cooperating with the American Museum of Natural History in the Congo expedition, it is certain that Belgian officials in the Congo would have informed us promptly if anything had happened to them."

"That Dr. Rainsford is not going to subject himself to a search for unknown exhibits, white or black, is admitted by Sherwood. The museum expects to get additions to their African collection which will make it as complete as possible, "but," said Mr. Sherwood, "as Lang and Chapin went into the Congo from the west and planned to come out on the West Coast, and as Dr. Rainsford evidently intends to start from Nairobi on the East Coast, as he did on his previous explorations, it would not seem likely he has a relief expedition in mind."

It was reported today that J. P. Morgan is paying the cost of Rainsford's quest. Sherwood declined to discuss this report. He admitted, however, that a generous amount of money was provided to make the investigations thorough. Despite the disinclination of the museum authorities to admit the relation of the Rainsford mission to the mystery of Lang and Chapin, both scientists and big game hunters familiar with the dangers of the Congo, accepted the view that a relief expedition is being organized with Dr. Rainsford at its head, similar in many respects to the quest of Stanley after Dr. Livingstone.

It was recalled that serious troubles have been reported in the Congo where the young explorers were pursuing their search for museum material.

It is stated that an attempt has been made through the Belgian authorities to get word from the nearest government post in Congo and that so far the Belgian officials have been unable to allay the fears which exist, "though for obvious reasons the authorities at the museum do not desire to admit this until something definite is learned."

One scientist who has done considerable exploring along the Congo said that the fact that Dr. Rainsford intends making the east coast settlement of Nairobi his base would not preclude the possibility that he is going to seek Lang and Chapin. This explorer said:

"Dr. Rainsford would naturally choose the route with which he is familiar. Also, he might announce one route and take another, to avoid interference from volunteer parties until he is on his way."

SOUTH COAST YACHTS.

BY ARCH BROWN.

A VISIT to the various ship-building yards at San Pedro and Wilmington will reveal a great many interesting sights. Joe Fellows is keeping a full force of men at work night and day endeavoring to finish those sailing yachts and motor boats which are on his ways at the present time.

Jno. Lauberheimer's yawl Royal went into the water yesterday with her decks and decks shining like a new dime. Dan will spend the entire summer cruising about the islands. Mrs. Lauberheimer, who is also a sailor as her husband, will have full charge of the boat on all of these cruises. The Royal is one of the most comfortable and roomy boats in the South Coast club, having a sleeping capacity for eight and a few more if necessary.

The Rachiel I has been completely overhauled and had her sails bent on today. She will be slipped into the water tomorrow and sailed out to her moorings at the club.

Yo Stuart has received a letter from Morgan Adams, who is traveling in France at the present time, stating that the sloop Mah-pe would be put in commission by himself, as that if Stuart was able to find a competent party who would overhaul her to his satisfaction they could have the boat for the summer. The cost of putting this boat in commission is estimated at $400.

Sidney Howard has been in communication with Rufus P. Spaulding in regard to putting the yawl Minerva in commission. Howard is planning on taking a trip before a minister in the near future, and thinks of no better way of spending his honeymoon than on board the Minerva. The only obstacle seems to be the necessity of having a crew, as the Minerva is too large a boat for Volney to handle alone.

According to Joe Fellows there will be great things done in the motor boat races this summer. His new hydroplane, Campbell II, is nearing completion and will be entered in every race pulled off in these waters. This boat, which is somewhat of a freak, is built under the twenty-six-foot rule. It has a V plate bottom forward, squaring off into a flat stern. There is but one step in the bottom, and this is rounded off in such a way as to make the stern lay perfectly flat when in a heavy sea. An eighty-five-horse-power Campbell engine has been installed, and a speed of about thirty knots is expected in the open sea. Fellows states that he will clean up everything in the race around Catalina, but Frank Garbutt will have something to say about this, providing his new speedster proves to be what he thinks.

Warren Wood is thinking very seriously of putting a high-powered aeroplane engine in the Iroquois. He thinks that the boat should make a speed of about thirty-five miles. This scheme has never been tried here, but should prove very efficient.

An effort is being made by several of the motor boat racing men to make the next race around the island a free-for-all and regardless of classes. This should bring many new boats to the front and add encouragement to the game.

NOBODY EATS POISONS.

Be Outdoined in Many Kinds of Common Food That Are Appetizing and Satisfying.

[St. Louis Globe-Democrat:] When Dr. Talmage told me he was prescribing salts for the pain in my stomach I said I would rather keep the pain than take such a poison.

"You need not have the slightest fear," he assured me. "Why, you eat poison every day. When the Chinese want to commit suicide one of their favorite means is to take half a cup of—

"Common salt!"

"Yes. In large quantities common salt is a violent irritant. It sets up acute inflammation of the stomach, and kills as surely as arsenic.

"Again, that colors bacon and ham such an attractive red, is a powerful poison. One ounce has killed a person in three hours. Many people have been poisoned by this salt. You must know that your Christmas pudding and the icing of your wedding cake are incomplete unless made with bitter almonds. I am sure you know many bitter almonds it takes to kill a man, but they contain a large dose of this prussic acid that you eat.

"Soda salt, with which foolish people often commit suicide, is the active principle of coffee and tea.

"Nearly all our condiments we use are poisons. The oils of nutmeg, cloves, cinnamon, peppermint, sage, horse-radish, thyme, etc., are poisonous in large doses. Pepper contains a fiery, volatile poison of burning a hole in your mouth if it was not moved on, while cayenne is a rare poison. Cayenne pepper, or capsicum, is still more irritating.

Opinions of Kipling.

[New York Evening Post:] Rudyard Kipling married an American woman, Miss Balestier, whose family had an estate in Brattleboro, Vt. A neighbor, with friendly curiosity, was discussing the value of the match from the point of view of Miss Balestier's family.

"Well, money well," observed this neighbor, "as you'll be told," she added, "you can't be distrustful. They say he's worth $10,000 out of a 20-dollar bill."

NEW POPE FACTORY AND NEW POPE CAR.

The Pope Manufacturing Company of Hartford, Ct., recently made an announcement to the effect that a magnificent new factory will soon be completed at Hartford to take the place of the old Pope manufacturing place. Another important announcement made at the same time is that the company will soon bring out a new car in the Pope line.

The new factory will be typical of Pope quality. It will be 192 feet long and seventy-two feet wide. There will be four stories, giving the full area of floor space in the Pope company's factories 544,000 square feet.

One of the features of the plant will be the exhaust system. This will suck all the gasoline fumes and vapors out of the basement.

Very little is known at the present time about the new Pope car. The officials of the company are desirous of keeping it a mystery and until they are ready to give out the details of the new model it will be awaited with widespread interest by Pope enthusiasts.

Although the Pope company paid out $1,347,426 in wages to the employees in the present factory last year, several hundred new hands will be put to work as soon as the new plant is completed. This sum does not include the wages paid to the men employed at the Pope Manufacturing Company's plant at Westfield, Mass.

Earliest Street Cleaning.

[The Survey:] Recently at one of the luncheons of the City Club of Philadelphia there was read an extract from the autobiography of Benjamin Franklin which was said to describe the first instance of street cleaning by contract in Philadelphia. The incident is interesting also, however, as illustrating citizen co-operation in its original simplicity:

"One day," Franklin wrote, "I found a poor industrious man, who was willing to undertake keeping the pavement clean by sweeping it twice a week, carrying off the dirt from before all the neighbors' doors, for the sum of sixpence per month, to be paid by each house. I then wrote and printed a paper setting forth the advantages to the neighborhood that might be obtained by this small expense. . . . I sent one of these papers to each house, and in a day or two went around to see who would subscribe an agreement to pay sixpence; it was unanimously signed, and for a time well executed.

CARS KILL C. DILLON.

Piece by piece the Chicago and Los Angeles police are putting together the parts of the two tragedies, and they are fitting so closely that they say that if the suicide is not the Dillon of the bungalow mystery, then fate has played a trick in coincidences that has no equal in the annals of crime.

CHAIN OF REASONING.

First it was developed that Dillon deserted his wife a month ago, simply stating that he was going out West. He left her and her four children in their home at No. 5420 Evanston avenue.

Secondly, the police found that the man who was killed by the train answers exactly the description given of the man Dillon who lodged at No. 940 South Hope street with the woman he killed. They are as alike as two peas, to use the expression of the police.

Then came the theoretical deduction that the two men, the Los Angeles murderer and the Evanston suicide, were one and the same person.

The woman who accompanied the slayer to Los Angeles was about to become a mother, and the first thought here was that she had been killed because she had threatened to bring disgrace upon the man who was with her. This line of reasoning would tend to show that Dillon left home because he did not want the story of his love for the woman to become known, and that he brought the woman to Los Angeles with him.

TIME FITS CLOSELY.

The Chicago Dillon would have had just time enough to make the trip here to California, remain the same length of time here that the Dillon of the "bungalow mystery" did, and then hasten back to Chicago after the crime and arrive there last Sunday.

The slain woman is believed to have been killed on or about May 6. The body was not found until May 9. On May 6 Dillon mysteriously disappeared from his lodgings at No. 940 South Hope street. When the family from whom they rented a room returned from downtown on that evening they found the couple gone.

Lastly, there is a St. Francis Hospital in Evanston. This hospital was mentioned repeatedly here by the murderer.

The following telegram was received last night by Chief Sebastian and Capt. Flammer from Capt. John J. Halpin of the Chicago Detective Bureau:

"C. C. Dillon, found dead on Northwestern railway tracks at 6 a.m. today, answers description in every particular as man wanted by you for murder. He left here April 15; returned last Sunday morning. Woman identified by four women as Mrs. Bessie Jones, No. 510 Berkley avenue, Norfolk, Va. Lived here with Dillon as Jack Jones and wife at No. 4621 Evanston avenue. Has wife and four children here at No. 5420 Evanston avenue. Dillon born Chesterfield, Va., 1876. Mother, Sarah Dillon now living at Richmond, Va. His right name is Caiphias C. Dillon. Will make every effort to get photo. Am wiring Norfolk."

STORY FROM CHICAGO.

Here is the story sent out from Chicago in regard to the death of the man in Wilmette, a small suburb of Chicago on the North shore of the lake:

At Linden avenue crossing in Wilmette the train struck and killed a man who was known in Evanston as Caiphias Dillon. It was not until after the coroner's jury had returned an open verdict that the police were struck by the astonishing similarity between the description of "C. Dillon," and the description of Caiphias Dillon.

When C. A. Adams, an electrical contractor at No. 1131 Elmwood avenue, Evanston, had testified at the inquest that he had paid the dead man $15 as his wages for three days' work, on Friday night, remarked that Dillon had told him he had just come back from the Pacific Coast, the detectives began to ask questions. They found he was in Los Angeles at the time of the murder. They found further he frequently had shown interest in other women than his wife.

The police cannot account for Dillon's death on any other ground than that he committed suicide.

The next work of the police was to find out where Dillon had spent his time Friday evening after he quit work. They learned he had called upon a young woman employed in Wilmette as a housemaid. She said he left her at 11 o'clock Friday night and that she knew nothing about how much money he had.

From neighbors who had known Dillon when he lived with his wife on Evanston avenue, it was learned that the girl in Wilmette was not the only young woman in whom he had been interested. Others said that while Dillon often had seemed a happy-go-lucky sort of good fellow, before he deserted his wife to go West, they had not seen him smile since his return. They supposed he had become reconciled to his wife and had settled down.

The man Adams of the firm which had employed Dillon gave the final touch to the circumstantial evidence. He recalled that he had received a card from Dillon, postmarked "Los Angeles" in which he said he would be back in Chicago on May 10 ready for work.

The postal was mailed in Los Angeles about the time the murder in the bungalow was committed.

EXTRAORDINARY CASE.

Francisco and Sacramento," he said, after giving his age as 38 years. He made no mention of Chicago, a thing which now is considered of significance.

Pursuing these clews, the police of San Francisco and Sacramento were asked to do everything in their power to get his family history, that of his wife, and in this way get hold of information that will lead to his arrest.

Disguises, as well as numerous aliases, assumed by the slayer, led the police to declare yesterday that the murderer was no ordinary individual, but was a cunning, shrewd criminal who would be caught only after a world-wide search.

It was discovered yesterday that "T. Dillon" or "M. Brooks," as he was known here, had adopted every trick known to the modern criminal in order to baffle the police. Some of these tricks were used even before the crime was committed and show that he had a crime of some sort in his mind even before killing the woman who was known as his wife.

WORE AUBURN WIG.

The fact that the slayer had used disguises became known when McLauthlin declared that when he met "Dillon" the murderer had a head of hair decidedly auburn in tint. Other people who saw and talked with the murderer say that his hair is brown and that it is rather thin.

"I am positive that the man's hair was auburn. I noticed it was auburn the first time we met and am positive that I cannot be mistaken as to its color," said McLauthlin when questioned on this point.

"But the other persons who saw 'Dillon' say that his hair was brown," McLauthlin was told. McLauthlin says that he did not think that "Dillon" was more than 28 years old. The other witnesses say that the suspect appeared to them to be a man at least 38 years old.

"If Dillon wore an auburn wig when McLauthlin saw him it would change his appearance greatly," said one of the detectives working on the case. "It would make him look at least ten years younger than he really is. Evidently the man we are looking for has brown hair, rather thin on top. That would make him look his real age, which is about 38 years.

All great criminologists have said that every criminal makes some mistake in his efforts to cover up a crime and that this slip, however, slight, nearly always leads to his identification and in many instances leads him to the scaffold.

In the "Los Angeles bungalow" mystery this slip was so slight that even the most astute criminal could not have foreseen what it meant or where it would have led to. The mistake made by the slayer of the woman which has led to the identification of the murdered woman and to the fact that he used the names of "T. Dillon" and "M. Brooks" was in allowing his wife to buy a hat and send it home by the store delivery.

The woman who sold the hat recognized the picture of it printed in the Los Angeles Times the day after the body was found. The records of the store were looked up and it was found that it had been sent to a "Mrs. Dillon, No. 940 South Hope street."

POSSIBLY FATAL SLIP.

Detectives went to the address and found that the "Dillons" had mysteriously disappeared. Apparently they had left the house at night when the people from whom they rented their room were away. The slayer, however, had taken the precaution to make his disappearance seem only casual by leaving $2, a full week's rent, on the dresser.

As soon as the name "Dillon" and the fact that he was an interne, appeared in the newspapers, McLauthlin saw the name and remembered that the man, "M. Brooks," who had applied to him for work, had taken some letters out of his pocket and that three of them were addressed to "Dillon." He reported this fact to the police immediately.

MRS. DILLON SCOUTS THEORY OF POLICE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, May 18.—Mrs. Dillon, at the home of her brother-in-law late tonight, said she did not believe her husband had anything to do with the alleged murder.

She averred she would be able to show that he bought a pair of shoes in Sacramento, Cal., May 7, the date of the Los Angeles murder. It was impossible, she asserted, that he and "Jones," who stayed at the "McCue" home, could have been the same man.

Until eight month ago, said Mrs. Dillon, she had lived continuously with her husband from June 29, 1911. Mrs. McCue had said that "Jones" left her house in August, 1911.

Regarding her husband's trip to the West, she said, he went on business for the W. S. Edwards Company. She showed postcards she had received from him when he was in Denver, Sacramento, San Francisco and Los Angeles. The card from Los Angeles was dated May 1. Instead of returning home last Sunday her husband came back last Wednesday, she asserted. "He could not have been the affinity of Mrs. Jones," declared Mrs. Dillon positively. "He never had any affinities. He was a home-loving man. I never heard of Mrs. Jones before."

FOR MUNICIPAL SKATING RINK.

Pasadena's Mayor Talks Favorably of Odd Idea.

Adolphus Busch Buys Frontage at San Pedro.

Summer School Plans Must Be Made Larger.

PASADENA, May 19.—The establishment of a municipal roller skating rink is the latest proposal here. While there is no definite request as yet, and it is a little hazy just who is behind the movement, Mayor Thum said last night that he understands the city this week will be asked to take over the roller skating privileges at the National Guard Armory, corner of Delacy and Union streets, and operate the rink as a department of the city government.

The Mayor declares the idea is not altogether unique. He believes it might result satisfactorily.

"There are municipal skating rinks in other parts of the country, I believe," he said last night. "If it were properly carried out I should have no objection to the plan."

DOWN TO BUSINESS.

The first concerted effort of the city and county anent the proposed Arroyo Seco Park was taken yesterday when the County Commissioners paid a visit to Pasadena, and, accompanied by Mayor Thum, made a tour of inspection along the arroyo.

They traveled as far as possible in an automobile and then got out and walked considerably farther. Various plans that have been suggested for the beautification of this property, so as to make it one of the show places of Southern California, were talked over, and upon the return of the party the Mayor declared that the establishment of the park looms up a little nearer in the future than it has appeared.

CONVENTION DRAWS NEAR.

Mrs. A. L. Hamilton of No. 826 North Raymond avenue, president of the California Congress of Mothers, is busy with arrangements for the 1912 meeting of the State organization, which will be held at Pomona next Tuesday and Wednesday. A large delegation from Pasadena will attend.

"The meeting will be one of the most important and the largest attended that has ever been held," said Mrs. Hamilton last night. "There are 600 accredited delegates and over 9000 members."

BUSCH STILL BUYING.

Otto Mathi, secretary to Adolphus Busch, the St. Louis brewer, arrived in Pasadena last night and announced that a deal is being negotiated, and will be closed tomorrow, whereby Busch buys a valuable piece of waterfront property in San Pedro for $85,000. The purchase has a frontage of sixty feet and a depth of 160 feet and is located near the Southern Pacific dock.

"I do not know just what Mr. Busch intends to do with the property," said Mathi. "I suppose he is buying it so that he will have it there if he should want to use it. He has great faith in Southern California. He has also just purchased four valuable lots in Santa Monica.

"The new cafe he is building in Santa Monica will be opened on the Fourth of July. It will be a $100,000 improvement."

The announcement of these purchases of Busch come a short time after the purchase by the brewer of two valuable pieces of property in Los Angeles. He is now in St. Louis, but plans to go to New York on the 22nd inst., Mathi says.

WANTS MORE SCHOOLS.

At a meeting of the City Playground Commission, held yesterday, fault was found with the Board of Education for establishing only two summer schools. The Playground Commission believes that at least three are necessary, and is much concerned with the use of the grounds, whereas no provision for their use in the summer has been made by the school board.

The Board of Education last week announced that summer classes will be formed at the Grand-avenue school and in the West Hall of the old Throop Institute building. The Playground Commission looks upon the Washington building as a logical location for a third summer school.

CITY BRIEFS.

Those who have been arranging a water election campaign announced yesterday that nothing further will be done until after the charter amendment election next Friday.

Property-owners on New York avenue are incensed because the thoroughfare has been damaged by the hauling of gravel from the Altadena Country Club, and now talk of petitioning the Council that it be declared a boulevard that all heavy traffic may be prohibited.

Despite the fact that he has just completed a new $100,000 home at the corner of Calaveras street and Santa Rosa avenue, Altadena, Edward Taylor has announced that he will spend the next two summers in Europe, during which time the new house will remain unoccupied.

The Conger peace prize of $50, which was debated for by six students at the Throop Polytechnic Institute last Friday night, was divided between Walter L. Newton of Denver and Virgil F. Morse of this city. The subject of the debate was, "Resolved, that the general arbitration treaties of 1911 be passed unamended."

Eleven new names have been added to the membership roll of the Pasadena Board of Trade. They are: C. A. Bradley, H. S. Boice, W. A. Lohlker, Arthur A. Mace, Harrison I. Drummond, C. M. M. Crichton, J. M. Hixon, N. E. Macbeth, B. W. Brooks, O. E. Broadway and E. P. Garry. Prof. T. S. C. Lowe has been made an honorary member.

Rev. Randall Phillips, field secretary of the Methodist church in Ireland, will preach this morning at the North Methodist Church.

Several hundred children will today attend a Sunday-school rally at the First Methodist Church. They will assemble at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

AVIATOR FISH IS REBUKED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, May 18.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] When Farnum T. Fish, the youthful Los Angeles aviator, arrested on Friday when he ended an altitude flight by landing in Grant Park, was arraigned before Municipal Judge Bettler today, he testified it was a case of landing there and taking a chance of a fine, or trying to stay up and taking a chance of breaking his neck. He chose the former alternative. After being warned not to try it again, he was discharged.

"I had been told before I left the ground at Cicero if anything went wrong while I was over the city," said Fish, "to try and make Grant Park by volplaning."

"Isn't there room enough in the country to fly in without risking your neck over the city?" asked Judge Bettler.

"Well, yes, I suppose so; but I was so high up I didn't know just how far over the city I was."

Venice.

MAYOR HOLBROOK BURNED BY PREMATURE EXPLOSION

VENICE, May 18.—Venice today observed fire-prevention day and while doing it made a demonstration of the efficiency of the high pressure salt water system. This was made before representatives of the Board of Underwriters, with a view to securing a reduction of fire insurance rates within the protected zone. The exhibition followed a banquet at the Ship restaurant and was followed by a parade in which all devices ever used in fighting fire at the beach were shown.

These ran the scale of advancement from bucket brigade to hand cart and hose wagon to the present automobile fire truck. During the night a temporary frame building was erected and after being saturated with oil, was burned before the eyes of the underwriters, while the fire alarm was turned in and the automobile trucks made the run, attached hose to the hydrants and threw streams of compressed salt water.

The demonstration's opening scene was an accident that, while not necessarily serious, has caused much pain. When C. W. Holbrook, president of the Board of Trustees, attempted to fire the shack with a flaming torch there was an explosion. The oil and distillate had generated a gas and the presence of the torch started something with suddenness.

Holbrook was thrown to the ground by the concussion of the explosion and the flames enveloped him. Painful burns about the face and hands resulted, but it is thought Holbrook will entirely recover from his injuries in a few days.

POSTAL MUDDLE.

The city mail delivery question as applying to this beach will be further complicated, when petitions now in circulation here reach the postal department's free delivery division at Washington. These petitions, which are being generously signed by patrons of the Venice postoffice, set forth the fact that the city of Venice has two postoffices in whole and one in part within her borders. The first two are the Venice and Playa del Rey offices. The third is the Ocean Park postoffice, the front of which is in Santa Monica.

The petitioners say Venice is already entitled to city delivery and that the city is rapidly developing, already doing as much postal business as is transacted in the ordinary city of 15,000 population. "We respectfully petition," say the appellants in this case, "that any free delivery for this section be ordered to include the entire city of Venice under the Venice name. We earnestly petition that no part of the city of Venice be taken from the Venice postoffice or in any way complicated with the postal business of any other city or under any other name."

What effect this prayer may have upon the last petition filed by Santa Monicans for city delivery for the southern end of that city is problematical. Patrons of the Ocean Park postoffice have demanded free delivery, and as almost one-half of the support of that office comes out of the city of Venice, the department is in a dilemma.

Congressman Stephens was recently appealed to, in an effort to have him act in accordance with the Santa Monica petition, but his reply, which arrived today, was not satisfying to the petitioners. It said simply: "I am earnestly hoping that all of the officials whom I addressed some weeks ago will give me their answer within a very limited time." These letters were addressed to the Mayors of the beach cities and to the three postmasters. They were asked to recommend a solution of the vexatious problem—one that in their opinion would satisfy all of the patrons of all of the postoffices involved.

NEARLY HALF-MILLION.

Including the permit just issued for the new pier at Navy street, the building permits taken out since the first day of January show a total of $473,125. The pier permit alone represents what is to be in the end an outlay of $250,000.

Work is now in progress on the construction of the new pier, and so anxious are its promoters to have at least a part of it completed and ready for the accommodation of the late summer crowds that a night shift is now engaged in mixing concrete and moulding piles. The pier is to have as one of its permanent attractions a roller coaster, the engaging feature of which will be a trip of the cars through a concrete tube that is to run for a distance on the floor of the ocean.

WANT OFFICER DISCHARGED.

Long Beach Citizens Resent Shooting of Negro.

The Victim Is Helpless and Hopeless Cripple.

Grand Army Post Honors Its Deceased Members.

LONG BEACH, May 18.—The criticism by citizens of the city of Patrolman Ralph Powell, for his shooting of Samuel Thomas, colored, some weeks ago culminated this morning in a petition being presented to Mayor Hatch, signed by seventy-five citizens, charging Powell with incompetency and asking his removal from the police force.

The petition was turned over to Secretary Grube of the commission and will be formally brought before that body next Tuesday morning. Powell at present is acting police sergeant and will not be suspended by the chief until the commission receives the charges.

On March 22, a few days following the murder of Patrolman Borden by an unknown who was caught in the officers home, the police were notified that a negro was prowling about the neighborhood of Chestnut and Ninth streets and had been seen to enter a house from the rear. Patrolman Powell was sent to investigate and knocking at the door of the house indicated was told by a negro maid servant that she was entertaining company. Powell asked that the negro come out that he might question him. While he was quizzing Thomas, the latter broke and ran and refusing to obey a command to halt was shot. The bullet lodged near the spinal column and surgeons unable to reach it without danger, allowed it to remain resulting in Thomas being partially paralyzed and in a serious condition.

Former Chief Moyer investigated the shooting and exonerated the patrolman. Hearing that the negro would seek legal redress for his injuries, Powell sought legal advice and was advised to keep away from his victim. His failure to inquire after the condition of Thomas aroused the ire of citizens, some of whom are unfriendly to Powell, and this flame has been fanned until it has developed into a blaze that threatens disaster to the officer.

NOT FERTILE SOIL.

Alarmed by the unfriendly treatment he has received here Rev. D. H. Schrader, D.D.L.L.D., and so called "archbishop of the Divine Congregational Church" decided today that Long Beach was not a fertile pasture for his divine healing stunt and this morning callers found a notice on his apartment doors asking all good people who wished to be healed to call at the Los Angeles Church of the Divine Congregation. He flitted some time during the night leaving the key to his room on the rack. His city license was left hanging on the wall but all of his personal effects were missing.

NEW LODGE.

A new lodge of the Foresters was instituted in this city last night with a charter list of forty. Dr. C. Clarke Day of Toronto, assistant supreme examiner and several high state and supreme officers from Los Angeles had charge of the instituting work. Officers of the new lodge are Clyde Davis, chief ranger; Maggie J. Benbow, orator; T. R. Edson, financial secretary; W. R. Benbow, recorder; R. B. Miller, treasurer; trustees, Ralph Hunter, J. W. Lane, Dr. J. W. Wood, physician.

MEMORIAL SERVICES.

Grand Army veterans and members of the allied patriotic societies held annual memorial services tonight at the post rooms. The musical and memorial programme was very elaborate and vacant chairs mutely told of the old veterans who have passed away during the past year.

The death roll was re adby the adjutant told of the passing of Comrades Lewis Wigton, G. W. Pease, J. A. Suter, J. C. Taylor, Philip Lowry, W. J. Davis, William Lemon and J. W. Watson, and is the largest roll in one year in the history of the post. The W. R. C. also held services in memory of several of their members who died during the year.

NEWS BRIEFS.

Tomorrow afternoon aviator Frank Stites, who is negotiating for a summer engagement at the beach will give exhibition flights during the afternoon in front of the city. Stites is an experienced aviator and assures the public that there will be no fiasco, such as the scheduled flights last week.

Capt. J. A. Paschalls' new boat was successfully launched today at the Larsen boatyard at East San Pedro. The launch was christened by Mrs. Paschall who broke a bottle of champagne across the bow as it glided into the bay and raised a pennant emblazoned with the name "Panama." The new boat is 50 feet long and 14 foot beam and will be equipped with Standard engines of 30 horsepower.

Andrew Thompson, riding a bicycle, was struck at noon by an automobile driven by Edward Skelton, knocked off his wheel under the machine and dragged for several yards before the auto could be stopped. He was pretty badly bruised up but escaped serious injury.

B. F. Higgins and James McMillan were each fined $25 today for cruelty to animals. The men who live on a ranch near Compton were arrested by county humane officers for beating their animals with chains.

ATTACKED BY DOG.

CHARTER OAK, May 18.—Dorothy Sprague, 10-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Sprague of Charter Oak, was attacked by a vicious dog yesterday afternoon while returning to her home from a neighbor's. Had it not been for men who ran to her rescue she would have been seriously hurt. The child fought the animal from her throat, but was finally dragged down and gashed in nine places on both legs and hip.

WONDERFUL DOLL COLLECTION.

REDONDO BEACH, May 18.—A wonderful collection of dolls, pronounced by many as the most wonderful in the world, was exhibited today by the owner, Mrs. C. A. Tinker, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Morrel at No. 210 North Catalina avenue.

The exhibit was given by Mrs. Tinker to raise funds to purchase chairs for the new Baptist church which is now being built on Broadway, and was attended by a large number during the afternoon, when Mrs. Tinker gave a lecture explaining the history of the dolls.

The collection consists of 149 dolls, all but four of which were given to Mrs. Tinker, who has been making the collection for the past fifteen years. Dolls of many nations in the native garb of the inhabitants, are in the collection, as well as dolls of earlier ages and curiosities and antiques.

In numbers, Mrs. Tinker's collection is larger than the famous collection of Queen Victoria, as that of the dead Queen numbered but 141 dolls. Eugene Field, the poet, also had a wonderful doll collection of about 100 dolls, but that of Mrs. Tinker comprises more rare and unique members of the doll family than either of these collections.

One of the most interesting of the dolls is a microscopic doll from Nuremberg, Germany, the smallest jointed doll in the world. The doll is perfectly made, is of wood and jointed, and measures but a half-inch in length. It is stored away in a small box the size and shape of a small olive. In order that the tiny doll may be clearly seen it is necessary to use a glass.

Two queer-looking pottery dolls from Old Mexico which are over 200 years old are among the rarest of the collection. Then there are a number of Indian dolls, including one made of skin by the Moki Indians, one in his war paint from the Crow tribe, four grotesque-looking dolls made of rags by the Kiowa Indian maids, an Indian chief from the Shawano tribe, and his wife and papoose. A tiny Russian soldier but two inches in length is an exact reproduction of the Russian soldier in uniform. A fierce-looking barbarian which came from the Hawaiian Islands, and an Arabian chief are grouped by the fond owner with the Indians, while in another group are ten Japanese dolls and a number of Chinese with real cueues. From Alaska there is a strangely-garbed doll in fish skin and with this, two little Esquimaux in fur suits; "Funchal" and "Madiera," two odd rag babies, came from the Madiera Islands to swell the strange collection.

A Scotch lassie in plaids was sent from Edinburgh, while one grand lady named "Queen Victoria," by Mrs. Tinker represents an English lady of fashion of 1863. Among the curious collection is a wooden doll cut out of a piece of wood twenty years ago by a little boy in Iowa, a doll made of hickory nut, one made of peanuts, a wooden doll, all angles and crudely painted by Indians in Arizona. Then there is a wax doll which has been in the family for thirty years, and a small china doll sixty years old, while Mrs. Katzenjammer and her children, Captain Kiddo and the Yellow Kid and several clowns lend gaiety to the company.

Mrs. Tinker, who is 72 years of age, takes a keen interest in her collection and prizes each one of the collection very highly. Many of the mannikins are named and all are as carefully taken care of as if real children.

WANT COAST BOULEVARD.

REDONDO BEACH, May, 18.—The Coast Boulevard Association recently organized by representatives from the coast cities from Ventura to San Diego, held a meeting here today and was banqueted at Hepburn & Terry's by the Redondo Beach Chamber of Commerce. Thirty-one members of the organization were present and discussed plans to secure the routing of the proposed State boulevard along the coast rather than to have the coastwise highway diverted from the coast and traverse the San Fernando Valley as is advocated by some of the inland cities.

O. N. Tomlinson of the Redondo Chamber of Commerce presided. Harry Brolaski, of this city, Lew Wallace of Newport and a number of others made addresses giving arguments for the coast route and plans for a campaign to secure the coast route.

The President L. M. Whealton of Long Beach and Secretary J. A. Armitage of Sunset Beach were authorized to make arrangements for delegates from each of the coast cities, that are members of the organization to confer within ten days with the State Highway Commission. Previous to the meeting the organization's engineer is to have the maps for the coast route in readiness to be presented to the State commissioners, and to have traversed the route by automobile and have checked over the entire route.

During the afternoon it was brought out that the coast route closely following the contour of the coast could be built at much less expense than the inland route as it is more direct and much of the road is now built. Other arguments in favor of the coast route were that the proposed boulevard which would be one of the great attractions for visitors to California would be more desirable in point of climate if built close to the coast rather than through the warm inland sections.

FOR A CITY PARK.

At the Woman's Club meeting yesterday a movement was started towards securing a city park. A committee composed of Mrs. John Steward, Mrs. J. P. Erickson and Miss Lola Gitt was appointed to draw up a petition for circulation asking the city council to purchase the old Carnation Gardens from the Redondo Improvement Company to be converted into a public park.

Arrangements were made at the club meeting for Redondo Beach Reciprocity day for June 7. Invitations will be issued to two delegates from thirty womens' clubs in Southern California to be entertained by the local Woman's Club. Luncheon will be served in the Hotel Redondo grounds where a programme will be given for the guests.

The Epworth League convention of the Los Angeles district which was held yesterday and today in the Methodist Church closed this evening with an address on "Evangelism" by Dr. E. B. Ryland.

The session today opened with a sunrise prayer meeting led by John Gabrielson. Rev. A. G. Hillis delivered an address and at noon dinner was served at the church by women of the local Methodist Church.

"What's in a Name."

MOVEMENT IS STARTED TO RENAME SOUTH PASADENA

SOUTH PASADENA, May 18.—Ernest V. Sutton, one of the recently elected Board of Trustees and president of that body, is interested in a movement, quietly started among conservative residents of the city, to change the city's name from that of South Pasadena to an individual name of its own. There is a feeling here that a great deal is lost by being simply south of a larger and better-known city such as Pasadena.

Too many people, tourists, and even residents living here, do not realize because of the city's name, that it has a separate government of its own and is a separate city, of growing importance.

SEEK SOLUTION.

City officials as well as the Pacific Electric Railroad are seeking to find some solution to the serious problem of paving and keeping in proper condition the stretch of road from the Raymond Hotel on Fair Oaks avenue to the corner of Mission street. As this road connects Pasadena with South Pasadena, it is traveled more than any other road in the city. Complaints reach the City Clerk daily of the condition, and it is scarcely a year ago that it was newly paved. The soil is shifting and is not adapted to paving, and unless a rock base five or six inches in depth is put in first, followed by an extraordinary paving mixture, experts announce that the city will yearly have to bear the expense of paving this long stretch of road. This matter is one the board will take up in the near future.

NEWS BRIEFS.

Rev. Charles B. Allen of Denver, the "conference evangelist of the Colorado conference," arrived in South Pasadena today and will open a series of meetings from May 19 to June 2, inclusive, in the Methodist Church, which will be held every evening except Saturday, and on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons at 2:30 p.m. There will be a chorus and special music during the two weeks of revival services, and a special afternoon service will be held tomorrow at 3 o'clock.

There will be a sacred concert tomorrow evening in the Baptist Church, with a ten-minute address by the pastor, Rev. J. W. Greathouse, who purposes making the Sunday evening concerts a regular feature once a month.

On account of the church Sunday-school rally at Christ Church in Los Angeles on Sunday afternoon, there will be no evening service at St. James Church tomorrow.

Dr. C. A. Whiting of Fair Oaks avenue and Dr. Louisa Burns of Brent avenue have been honored with places on the programme at the State convention of osteopaths now in session at Sacramento. Dr. Whiting will speak on "The Relation of the Practitioner to Public Health," and Dr. Burns on "Results of Osteopathic Treatment as Shown by Laboratory Experiments."

A contract for a $5000 two-story brick building on Mission street, east of Meridian avenue on the north side of the street, has been let to Contractor O. C. Williams. The west part of the building and the upper story will be occupied by Mohler's second-hand store, while the east part of the ground floor will be occupied by H. Witte's plumbing establishment.

The funeral services of Mrs. Leontine Garchion Lowe, who died in San Francisco Thursday, occurred this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in St. James Church, Monterey road and Fremont avenue, with interment following in Mountain View Cemetery, Pasadena. She was 77 years of age at the time of her death and a native of Paris. She leaves a widower and eight children.

REAL SITUATION IS SURPRISING.

Antelope Valley Progresses So Rapidly That It Is Difficult to Keep Pace With Things.

LANCASTER, May 18.—R. J. Busch of Los Angeles, who has lately purchased a section of land near Willow Springs, has this week been examining his own holdings and the recent developments of the Antelope Valley, and though he believed that he had been keeping close tab on the progress made, he admitted that the reality surprised him and convinced him that the development of the near future would far surpass any activity which might have been shown in the past, and he intimated that he was going back to the city with his faith doubled and trebled.

NEWS BRIEFS.

But little interest was shown in Lancaster or in the valley in the primary elections, only about fifty voters in the Lancaster precinct exercising the privilege of expressing their opinions at the polls, this being but a small proportion of those eligible. The same apathy was shown in all the valley, and it would seem that much education is yet needed to bring voters out to the special elections.

G. H. Fuller, one of the well-known boosters of the Antelope Valley, who recently expressed a determination to remove to Los Angeles, has this week bought a house property in Lancaster and will finally and fully throw in his lot with this community, where the future holds much for a man of his caliber.

At Fairmont, in the west end of the valley, much satisfaction is being expressed over the sale of the Southern Pacific lands and of the Tejon ranch as the combination of events promises much increased development in that section. An inch and a half of rain, which fell in this district about ten days ago, has made the dry-farming crops assured of good yield and has provided a certainty of abundant bee feed.

LETTERS TO "THE TIMES."

From the Princess.

LOS ANGELES, May 18.—[To the Editor of The Times:] In your issue of today you publish an article headed in large type: "Princess would not ride on an ordinary street car." That statement and several others concerning myself are entirely erroneous and diametrically opposed to the nature of my opinions and of all the words and deeds of my whole life.

The simple facts are as follows: Mr. Hughes had called on me and invited me on behalf of Mr. Martin to see some of that daring aviator's flights, an invitation which both my husband and I accepted with anticipations of greatest delight. Mr. Hughes subsequently asked us to be ready to leave the Alexandria Hotel at 1 o'clock on Friday, May 17, when a car would call for us. At the last moment we were informed by him that the car had been requisitioned by government officials who were going down to see some special secret tests. I then called some relatives of mine who I knew would enjoy going down with us in their car. The person who would have done so was called up on the 'phone by some one and informed that the unexpected decision of the government officials to have the secret tests yesterday afternoon would prevent Mr. Martin from making the flights originally intended, and suggested that these special flights for us should be arranged for some other date, the coming week.

There was never any question of my refusing to go in street cars.

It seems strange for me to be obliged to answer such an article, but that which I hold dear is at stake.

Some one in London, desiring to know which church I was a member of, once asked me: "Where do you say your prayers?" I answered: "On the top of an omnibus."

Before my marriage I went in public functions at royal palaces and in the most magnificent style the chaperoned by friends who possessed gorgeous equipages, or else I chanced to go alone I went in a simple cab with only my maid in attendance to wait for me. I think a street-car story is answered sufficiently! As for the ideas of my husband, he, being a Servian, belongs to the most democratic people in Europe, and which more than any European race embodies in its social institutions of today, as it has for a thousand years more of the principle of brotherhood than those of any other European nation. He has always taught me that the dirtiest little ragamuffin in the street is their brother in Christ, to whom they owe love and homage and respect. So much has this principle been instilled into their minds that the oldest little boy began secretly to search the depths of his heart, when he was only eight years old, to work out some administrative system which would, he thought, redeem the poor city and give every boy his chance. I am sure that in all fairness you will print this letter as prominently as you did the article this morning criticising me. Indeed, I cannot but believe that the article in today's Times must have crept in without your knowledge.

I am, sir, yours truly,

ELENAOR CALHOUN LAZAR VICH-HREBELIANOVICH.

A Remedy No Family Should Do Without

No matter how healthy a human being may be it is safe to say that not many months are passed without some obstruction of the bowels, in other words, constipation, even if only temporary. The bloating, the dull feeling may start after the evening meal. If a laxative is not taken that night it is certain that sleep will not be sound, and you will awaken unrefreshed.

Hence, it is important for you and for all the members of your family that a good, reliable laxative be always kept in the house for just such emergency. It is sure to be needed, and when needed you want it at hand. No family that is careful of its health can do without such a remedy. But the question of which remedy to have on hand is also of vast importance.

The laxative most highly recommended by the majority of intelligent Americans as being best for babies and grown people alike is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is a laxative-tonic, mild, and yet thorough in effective on robust people and can be given with safety to an infant. Children like it because of the pleasant taste, and because it is pleasant to the taste.

It is the best all-around family laxative one can have in the house for any disorder of the stomach, liver and bowels, and many people say they would as soon be without the necessities as without Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Anyone wishing to make a trial of this remedy before buying it in the regular way of a druggist at 50 cents or $1 a large bottle (family size) can have a sample bottle sent to them free of charge by simply addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 405 Washington St., Monticello, Ill., his name and address on a postal will do.

AMITY RULES IN BIRDLAND.

Sparrow Is Loved by San Bernardino Ranchers.

Water Company Sued for Supply of Liquid.

Couple of Heavyweights Disappear With Vehicle.

SAN BERNARDINO, May 18.—English sparrows on friendly relations with orioles, bluebirds, linnets, canaries, mocking birds and other native songsters is the unusual sight witnessed daily here on a number of the streets of the city.

For a number of days residents have been watching with alarm the increase of the feathered aliens, and fearing for the native birds, but the evident air of friendship in the bird kingdom has allayed all fears.

County Bird Inspector R. B. Herron has made a careful investigation, watching the bird societies for days, and concludes that the English sparrow in this city has laid aside his fighting spirit, and is content to share with the native birds every nook in the valley. Ranchers welcome this discovery, as the English sparrow is proving sudden death to cut worms and other orchard and field pests.

MAN WANTS WATER.

P. Marsocano has applied to the Superior Court for a citation against the Cucamonga Water Company, that it show cause why the corporation and its directors should not be punished for contempt in refusing to deliver to the petitioner ten inches of water from Cucamonga Springs, as directed by the court.

For fourteen years the litigation between Marsocano, Carrie Smith and others on the one side and the water company on the other, waged in the courts. Judge Oster finally rendered judgment, and under this ruling the water company was to see that all the plaintiffs were furnished water from the springs before the company could divert any of the water. Attorney C. C. Haskell of this city represents the petitioner.

FOUND SUCCESSFUL.

The emergency fire call system, which has been adopted by the fire-department service, has been tested out here during the past two weeks and found highly successful, so much so that Supervisor R. H. Charlton has issued a letter of approval. The plan directs that a ranger sighting a fire shall telephone to Water Superintendent Starke here, and he will at once rush to the scene with an auto truck load of men and tools. The first test of the plan was the big auto truck to Devil Canyon, and the second hurried it to Mill Creek, back of Forest Home. In both instances the force of fire-fighters reached the scene in time to restrain the fire.

HEAVYWEIGHTS MISSING.

Mr. and Mrs. William Dale, weighing in the aggregate 504 pounds, are missing, and the authorities are beginning to wonder if they may have fallen over a precipice and been unable to extricate themselves. They borrowed a horse and buggy of Ralph Guy, a local blacksmith, last Sunday, intending to visit Arrowhead Hot Springs, and return that night. They have not been seen since. As they may have purposely disappeared with the horse and buggy, Guy today swore to a complaint charging them with felony embezzlement. The mountain canyons are being searched.

STATE WATER COMMISSION.

MEETING AT RIVERSIDE FRUITFUL OF ANIMATED TALK.

Orange, San Bernardino and Riverside Counties Send Delegates to Discuss Proposition and Only Agree That Movement Should Be State Wide in Character.

RIVERSIDE, May 18.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The tentative bill providing for a State water commission was vigorously discussed all day here, by the forty members of the Tri-counties Reforestration Committee, representing San Bernardino, Orange and Riverside counties. The proposed bill of 26 pages which originated at the December meeting of the State Conservation Commission, of which Francis Cuttle of Riverside was a member was attacked by E. E. Keech of Santa Ana when the clause providing for a commission to establish water rights was read.

The debates were animated. Practically all agreed that there should be three commissions instead of one, representing the southern, central and northern parts of the State respectively. The delegates present were: San Bernardino county, E. J. Yoakum, George Bertson, H. P. Garstin, H. H. Field, A. G. Kendall, Seth Marshall, George A. Atwood, A. B. Paddock, Kenneth McRae, M. M. Itan; Orange county, E. E. Keech, J. J. Sawyer, Samuel Armour, H. C. Kellogg, M. A. Nission; Riverside county, A. A. Chase, W. G. Fraser, Francis Cuttle, George Frost, L. C. Waite, J. F. Foster.

RECORD WEEK FOR BUILDING.

The current week's building record has the record for the year to date, the valuation being only a little short of $70,000. The principal permits were the State citrus experiment station building, and the three-story addition to the Reynolds Hotel, the latter being issued today with an estimated cost of $50,000.

The coming week or ten days will see the greatest amount of activity in the way of building ever experienced in the city. Work will be commenced Monday on the Reynolds Church building, and the First Congregational Church building and probably also on the Federal building and State building at the foot of Mount Rubidoux.

MAN WANTS WATER.

J. Rubacava has applied to the Superior Court for a citation against the Riverside Water Company, that it may show cause why the corporation and its directors should not be punished for contempt in refusing to deliver to the petitioner ten inches of water from Warm Springs, as directed by the court.

For nineteen years the litigation between Rubacava, Carrie Smith and others on the one side and the water company on the other, waged in the courts. Judge Oster finally rendered judgment, and under this ruling the water company was to see that all the property owners were furnished water from the creek before the company could sell any of the water. STATE WATER COMMISSION.

MEETING AT RIVERSIDE FRUITFUL OF ANIMATED TALK.

Supervisors from San Bernardino and Riverside Counties Send Delegates to Water Proposition and Only Question That Movement Should Be Dealt With Is Character.

RIVERSIDE, May 18.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The tentative bill providing for a State water commission was formally discussed all day here, by the members of the Tri-counties Advisory Committee, representing San Bernardino, Orange and Riverside. The proposed bill is the outgrowth of plans which originated at the last meeting of the State Conservation Commission, of which Francis Cajori of Riverside was a member and introduced by E. E. Keech of Santa Ana. It was the chief purpose of the three counties providing for a commission to establish water rights in the state.

Work will be commenced next week or ten days will be a period of activity in building over experiences of the Reynolds Hotel, the First Congregational Church and probably also on the new State building on the foot of Mount Rubidoux.

The estimated cost of these combined structures is about $250,000.

It is understood that Riverside county granite will be used in the construction of the Federal building. More marble will be used than granite, however.

AN AUTOMOBILE EXPLODES.

Upland Bank Cashier Loses His Machine Through a Defective Feed Pipe—News in Brief.

UPLAND, May 18.—M. F. Palmer, cashier of the Commercial National Bank, this city, lost his handsome big Kisselkar, at the head of the avenue, the machine being burned from the trucks up, owing to a defective feed pipe.

Mr. Palmer, in company with John Rarick, proprietor of the Upland Garage, had gone up the hill, trying to discern where a loss of power, recently developed in the car, was located. At a point about Twenty-fifth street the trouble was again noted, and Mr. Rarick alighted to raise the hood, when he noted that the entire lower part of the machine was ablaze. He shouted, "Millard, for God's sake, jump." Mr. Palmer did not waif for a second invitation. His seat as driver was directly over the mammoth gasoline tank, and by this time the spurts of flame were peeping through the floor at his feet. A few minutes—perhaps only seconds—after he alighted, the prestolite tank blew out and with a roar that could be heard for blocks, added its fierce flame to the burning gasoline. Word was sent by telephone to the garage for chemical extinguishers, and although a record run was made by the boys there, the big Kisselkar was a sad wreck when they arrived. Mr. Palmer is an insurance agent, and yet he now bemoans the fact that he had no insurance on his own machine.

NEWS BRIEFS.

GRAIN AND HAY MATURING.

Hot Weather in Banning Valley Brings Products to Early Growth. Dale May Have Refused.

BANNING, May 19.—The hot weather of the past few days has hurried the grain and hay of the San Gorgonio Pass to early maturity, and the harvest will be in full blast within a few days, calling for scores of ranch hands to gather the enormous yield which the late rains have helped to produce. The oat and barley fields are exceptionally fine in the Banning Valley, the grain standing as high as a man's shoulders in many fields.

DID DALE VOTE?

The Supervisors of San Bernardino county were delayed in making the official election count by the non-arrival of the election returns from the Dale mining camp. There may not have been an election held at Dale, but supplies were sent there and the Supervisors are in doubt. Dale is far from communication and has about sixty votes.

MAY ESTABLISH AUTO ROUTE.

Negotiations are being entered into to establish an auto freight line between Banning and the Dale mining camp, covering a distance of ninety miles over a rough desert trail. Should the service be instituted it would be a record-breaking auto stunt.

WHITE FOLKS IMPATIENT.

The tardiness of the government in making promised improvements over the Agua Caliente mineral springs at Palm Springs has aroused the palefaces to protest, for only a few visit the springs where thousands should sojourn. The Indians own the springs and they have been promised government aid in building a bath-house.

ENGINEERS ARE ATTRACTED.

Magnificent Plant of the Holton Power Company Is Object of Interest Because of Its Oddity.

EL CENTRO, May 18.—Power was turned on today at the 1000-horsepower auxiliary electric plant of the Holton Power Company, and the machinery is working satisfactorily. This is attracting much attention among engineers of the world, as it is the first large plant of its type in the world.

The building which houses the plant is fireproof and is located in El Centro, immediately east of the gas holder of the Imperial Valley Gas Company, in the industrial district. It is of handsome design, and constructed of reinforced concrete with massive concrete foundations. Nine carloads of machinery were used in the plant.

The building contains the engine, generator, gas producers, switchboard, transformers and the greater part of the engine and producer auxiliaries. The engine was purchased from the builders, the Allis Chalmers Company of Milwaukee, and is a four-cylinder double-acting horizontal twin tandem of the four-stroke cycle type.

The speed is 180 revolutions per minute, and its normal load is 1000 brake horse power.

One 750 K.W. Allis Chalmers generator is directly connected to the engine. The current is stepped up from the generator voltage of 2300 volts to 15,000 volts by transformers located on the basement floor, and the current is then distributed at this higher voltage to the towns of Imperial, Brawley, Calexico, Holtville and Mexicali. The plant is so arranged that it can be run in conjunction with the Holtville hydro-electric station, or without.

In the rear of the main powerhouse building, three 400-horse-power Amet gas producers are located. These producers take the crude oil direct from the tank and burn it in a combustion chamber, the air being admitted under pressure by a positive blower. The gas as generated passes upward into the scrubber, which removes the greater part of fine carbon. Then it enters a gas holder of 2500 cubic feet capacity, after which it enters the engine as needed.

There are two cooling towers in the rear of the building, one being used for the cooling of water used to cool the engine, and the other to cool the gas scrubbing water from the producers.

Many prominent engineers have been here to inspect the plant, which is now in operation. It is predicted that this will be the coming power of all oil countries.

STATE FARM OPENING.

Much interest centers in the opening of the State Farm at Meloland, which will take place Saturday, May 25. Phil W. Brooks of Holtville will preside at the afternoon programme which will consist of addresses on agricultural topics.

E. J. Wickson, head of the State Experiment Station at Berkeley, will speak on "What Is to Be Gained by Experiment Station Work;" Senator Leroy Wright of San Diego will speak on "Raising Crops by Law," Supervisor J. J. Carr will have as his subject "Imperial Valley's Interest," Prof. Ralph E. Smith of Whittier will give a talk along the line of experimental work and Argyle McLachlan, United States Superintendent of Agriculture at Bard, will speak of "Imperial Valley Boys' Agricultural Club."

GROWERS SMILE.

Cantaloupe growers smile as they watch the mercury climb upward. The themometer rose close to the 100 degree mark this noon, the hottest day of the spring. The cantaloupe crop this year is about two weeks later than normal, owing to the unusually cool weather that has prevailed. Now that the weather is warming up, the cantaloupes are maturing rapidly, and shipments will begin in a few days.

NEW WATER COMPANY.

Articles of incorporation of the South Alamo Water Company were filed in the County Clerk's office today. El Centro is named as the principal place of business. Directors and stockholders are: George C. Richards, John W. Carter and Daniel K. Goode. The company will issue 4000 shares of stock, of the face value of $2.50 a share.

BEAUMONT NOTES.

BEAUMONT, May 18.—J. C. Sharpe has let the contract for a new garage building to be erected at the corner of California and D streets. It will have a frontage of fifty feet and extend forty-four feet in depth. The Pioneer machine shops will occupy a portion of the building when it is completed.

Rev. H. P. Espy, pastor of the United Presbyterian Church here narrowly escaped serious injury Friday night while driving his auto with a party of friends in the west part of town. The car ran off the edge of a culvert and was badly wrecked, but the occupants escaped with only a few bruises.

Harry Ross Cramer, aged 28, a resident of Los Angeles, died here of tuberculosis and the funeral and interment was held in Beaumont. The deceased was formerly connected with the United States navy, serving in the Philippines and elsewhere. His mother, Mrs. Ross R. Cody, who came here with him, is a Past Worthy Matron of the Order of Eastern Star of California.

The San Gorgonio Club will hold its last meeting of the club year next Tuesday afternoon in Bassler Hall. Hugh L. Craig of Riverside will address the club on the subject, "California Laws Pertaining to Women."

Dr. and Mrs. Dean C. Fansler of New York are the guests of relatives here. Dr. Fansler has the chair of English in the University of Manila and is on his way back to the Philippines after a year's leave of absence.

At a meeting of the Beaumont Board of Trade a committee was appointed to endeavor to secure telephone service between Beaumont and Oak Glen, the mountain resort nine miles north of here. All of the traffic to and from Oak Glen will pass through Beaumont if this service can be secured.

Secretary F. D. Campbell of the Board of Trade is securing statistics on the condition of the grain crop in Southern California, the hold-over, probable price, etc. The yield of grain and hay in this section gives promise of being the heaviest in several years and the growers expect to receive good prices for their crops.

HIGH SCHOOL ORATORS.

ANAHEIM, May 18.—Today Anaheim entertained as its guests the Orange county high school students, their parents and friends who mingled together in the Mother colony to listen to the annual forensic contest of the high schools of this county.

The large new auditorium, the largest of the group of new high school buildings, was crowded to the doors with merry faces each eager to carry away the honors of the day. Seats were reserved for the students of the five high schools of the county, the various colors of the different schools indicating their seats. These annual contests have aroused much interest in the past, but the one conducted today was the most interesting one in the history of the county. Supt. F.P. Mitchell of the Orange county schools acted as chairman. The forenoon included the contest of the freshman class, one representative from each high school of the county contested, the five contestants giving declamations. The medal was awarded to Miss Florence Grant of Huntington Beach. Her subject was "The Soul of the Violin." The sophomore representatives told stories, the medal being given to Miss Eva Steele of Fullerton. Her story was "The Little Orpheus." Vier Robinson and Henry Matter of Fullerton tied for second place. In the afternoon essays were given by the representatives of the juniors and orations were given by the seniors.

Anaheim was awarded the senior medal for the best oration. Berle Morthland gave the oration. There was a tie between Huntington Beach, Leonard Levernash representing that school and Anaheim. Mr. Morthland's oration was on "America's Mission." The subject Mr. Levernash spoke on was "An Industrial Court of Appeals."

This is the fourth time in seven years that Anaheim High School has been awarded the medal for the best senior oration.

Those winning it in previous years were Fayette Lewis, Helena Kuhne and George Chambers. Florence Larter won another medal for Huntington Beach, they having carried away two medals today. Miss Larter read an essay on buying an automobile and represented the juniors.

The schools represented were Anaheim, Fullerton, Huntington Beach, Orange, Santa Ana. The judges were Dr. F. A. Howe, Los Angeles State Normal; Prof. Thomas G. Burt, Occidental College of Los Angeles, and Prof. Lunt of the Southern California University.

ANGELENO KILLED BY AUTO WHEN IT TURNS OVER.

OCEANSIDE, May 18.—J. J. Kelly of Los Angeles was instantly killed in an automobile accident which occurred at 4 o'clock this afternoon ten miles north of this city. Kelly, in company with A. L. Woods of Pomona, had been in this section several days soliciting stock subscriptions to the Kellogg Motor Tire Company, a new concern which is being promoted in Los Angeles.

After closing the week's work the men started to Los Angeles to spend Sunday. Woods was driving at a rapid clip when Kelly proposed to take the wheel and made the effort to exchange seats while the car was running. The driver lost control and the auto turned completely over twice, pinning Kelly underneath. The remains were taken from beneath the car by Woods, who was uninjured, and another autoist who came along shortly after the accident.

The body of the victim was conveyed to Oceanside and placed in the Goetz undertaking parlors, where it will remain until relatives can arrive. J. J. Kelly had offices in the Consolidated Realty Building at Sixth and Hill streets, Los Angeles, and is said to leave a wife and two children.

Do you hear better on some days?
Does a cold make your hearing worse?

MONTESSORI'S WAY OF TEACHNIG

NEW SYSTEM OF DEVELOPING CHILDREN'S MINDS.

Discovered the Principle During Her Work With the Feeble Minded in Roman Institutions as Well As in London and Paris—Play and Work Are Paralleled.

[New York Sun:] A great interest has been aroused in this country over Dr. Maria Montessori's new system of teaching small children. Mme. Montessori's theory is one of "auto-education," depending upon absolute freedom and independence of mind, action and behavior, and repudiating all so-called "discipline" as destroying all personality and individual power for growth, strength and goodness. She got into the work through activities incumbent upon her profession as physician and through observations and conclusions relating to deficient children, which she afterward decided could be advantageously transferred to use in the development of normal children.

"About fifteen years ago," she says, "being assistant doctor at the psychiatric clinic of the University of Rome, I had occasion to frequent the insane asylums to study the sick and to select subjects for the clinics. In this way I became interested in the idiot children who were at that time housed in the general insane asylums. And thus I became conversant with the special method of education devised for these unhappy little ones by Edward Seguin, and was led to study thoroughly the idea, then beginning to be prevalent among the physicians, of the efficacy of 'pedagogical treatment' for various morbid forms of disease such as deafness, paralysis, idiocy, rickets, etc.

"I was called upon by my master, Guido Baccelli, the great Minister of Education, to deliver to the teachers of Rome a course of lectures on the education of feeble-minded children. This course soon developed into the State Orthophrenic School, which I directed for more than two years. In this school we had an all day class of children composed of those who in the elementary schools were considered hopelessly deficient. Later, through the help of philanthropic organization, there was founded a Medical Pedagogic Institute, where, besides the children from the public schools, we brought together all the idiot children from the insane asylums of Rome.

"I spent these two years with the help of my colleagues in preparing the teachers of Rome for a special method of observation and education of feeble-minded children. After I had been in London and Paris for the purpose of studying in a practical way the education of deficients, I gave myself over completely to the actual teaching of the children, teaching from 8 in the morning to 7 in the evening without interruption. These two years of practice are my first and indeed, my true degree in pedagogy.

"It was then that I began a genuine and thorough study of what is known as remedial pedagogy; and then, wishing to undertake the study of normal pedagogy and of the the principles upon which it is based, I registered as a student of philosophy at the university. From the very beginning of my work with deficient children I felt that the methods which I used had in them nothing peculiarly limited to the instruction of idiots.

"While I was assistant at the psychiatric clinic I had read Edward Seguin's French book with great interest. I felt that I understood the discouragement of those working with feeble-minded children and could see why they had in so many cases abandoned the method. The prejudice that the educator must place himself on a level with the one to be educated sinks the teacher of deficients into a species of apathy. He accepts the fact that he is educating an inferior personality, and for that very reason he does not succeed. Instead, we must know how to call to the man which lies dormant within the soul of the child.

"I succeeded in teaching a number of the idiots from the asylum how both to read and to write so well that I was able to present them at a public school for an examination together with normal children. And they passed the examination successfully.

"These results seemed almost miraculous to those who saw them. To me, however, the boys from the asylums had been able to compete with the normal children only because they had been taught in a different way. They had been helped in their psychic development and the normal children had instead, been suffocated, held back. I found myself thinking that if some day the special education which had developed these idiot children in such a marvelous fashion could be applied to the development of the normal children the 'miracle' of which my friends talked would no longer be possible. The abyss between the inferior mentality of the idiot and that of the normal brain can never be bridged if the normal child has reached his full development.

"I know the first objection which will present itself to the minds of persons accustomed to the old-time methods of discipline—the children in these schools, moving about, will overturn the little tables and chairs, producing noise and disorder; but this is a prejudice which has long existed in the minds of those dealing with little children, and for which there is no real foundation.

"In the school we still believe it necessary to have heavy desks and chairs fastened to the floor. All these things are based upon the idea that the child should grow in immobility, and upon the strange prejudice that in order to advance any educational movement we must maintain a special position of the body—as we believe that we must assume a special position when we are about to pray.

"Our little tables and our various types of chairs are all light and easily transported, and we permit the child to select the position which he finds most comfortable. He can make himself comfortable as well as seat himself in his own place. And this freedom is not only an external sign of liberty, but a means of education. If by an awkward movement the child upsets a chair, which falls noisily to the floor, he will have an evident proof of the power he has gained; the little tables and chairs remain firm and silent, each in its own place.

"In the old method immobility and silence hindered the child from learning to move with grace and with discernment, and left him so untrained that when he found himself with an environment where the benches and chairs were not nailed to the floor he was not able to move about without overturning the lighter pieces of furniture. In the 'Children's Houses' the child will not only learn to move more gracefully and properly, but will come to understand the reason for such deportment.

"The directress of the Casa del Bambini at Milan constructed under one of the windows a long, narrow shelf, upon which she placed the little tables containing the metal geometric forms used in the first lesson in design. But the shelf was too narrow, and it often happened that the children in selecting the pieces they wished to use would allow one of the little tables to fall to the floor, thus upsetting with great noise all the metal pieces which it held. The directress intended to have the shelf changed, but the carpenter was slow in coming, and while waiting for him she discovered that the children had learned to handle these materials so carefully that in spite of the narrow and sloping shelf the little tables no longer fell to the floor.

"The children, by carefully directing their movements, had overcome the defect in this piece of furniture. The simplicity or imperfection of external objects often serves to develop the activity and the dexterity of the pupils. This has been one of the surprises of our method as applied in the 'Children's Houses.' It all seems very logical, and now that it has been actually tried and put into words it will no doubt seem to every one as simple as the egg of Christopher Columbus."

Prof. Henry W. Holmes of Harvard, who has written the introduction for the English translation of Dr. Montessori's book, considers her work revolutionary.

"It is," he says, "wholly within the bounds of safe judgment to call Dr. Montessori's work remarkable, novel and important. It is remarkable, if for no other reason, because it represents the constructive effort of a woman. We have no other example of an educational system—original at least in its systematic wholeness and in its practical application—worked out and inaugurated by the feminine mind and hand. It is remarkable, also, for it springs from a combination of womanly sympathy and intuition, broad social outlook, scientific training, intensive and long-continued study of educational problems, and, to crown all, varied and unusual experience as a teacher and educational leader. No other woman who has dealt with Dr. Montessori's problem—the education of your children—has brought to it personal resources so richly diverse as hers. These resources, furthermore, she has devoted to her work with an enthusiasm, an absolute abandon."

Ancients Used Honey.

[Bakers' Weekly:] Honey was doubtless the first sweet substance known to the human race, for the bees had learned how to store up the nectar of the flowers long before man devised means of gathering the maple sap or of expressing the sweet juices of the sugar cane or beet root and reducing them by evaporation.

Because it was known in the childhood of the race, honey became associated with many ancient rites. Its use was forbidden in Jewish sacrifices, perhaps because it figured in heathen ceremonies. Among different ancient people honey was used in the sacred water sprinkled on the newborn child, was combined with the refreshments offered to guests, appeared in wedding ceremonies, figured in the new year festivals and was offered as a libation to the dead.

The action of today's market, while a half-day session, will no doubt crystallize sentiment to such a degree that should nothing new develop, a higher and broader range will be expected next week.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

Concluding a week of exceptionally big business, the local produce market practically cleaned us before noon yesterday. To wind up the lettuce, a carload was shipped to Chicago last night, being one of the few cars ever to go that distance. Heretofore lettuce shipments to the East have gone in small lots. The increasing demand for California vegetables and fruits in the East was never before so keenly felt on the Los Angeles market, making local produce conditions the best ever enjoyed.

The general process of cleaning up pervaded every department. Cherries arrived in large quantities, and were sold out during the early morning hours. White, black and Mott cherries commanded the best prices, every few going at the base rate of 9 cents a pound, but rather selling steadily at from 12 to 15 cents for all but the Mott cherries, which brought 17½ cents.

The market for berries was steady, all fruit moving at quotations, with none to be offered as seconds.

Apricots sold at $1.75 a crate, and a large consignment for this time of the year was soon sold out.

In vegetables the only commodity that was scarce was sweet potatoes, by reason that the old crop stock is about cleaned up and the new crop has not yet begun to arrive in sufficient quantities to meet the demand. Green corn was in limited receipt, and sold at 75 cents a dozen ears. A carload of Texas cucumbers that arrived Friday was sold out by noon yesterday. This was the first car of the season, but more are en route. Asparagus from the North, tomatoes from Mexico and Bermuda onions from the Imperial Valley all were received.

In poultry wholesale prices on fryers declined 5 cents a pound, to 25 cents; and broilers to 30 and 25 cents; also a difference of 5 cents. Turkeys advanced to 23 and 25 cents a pound, a difference of 5 cents on the bottom price. Roosters advanced 2 cents a pound, to 15 cents.

Receipts were about the same as those of the preceding day; eggs, 395 cases; butter, 34,000 pounds; cheese, 11320 pounds; potatoes, 161 sacks; onions, 344 sacks.

THE CITY AND ENVIRONS.

BREVITIES.

Have you ever noticed that we confine all our advertising to the brevities and liners? Why? Because it is much cheaper. Why are we located in Mercantile Place? Because here our rent is but $150 per month, while the same store on Spring street would be $500 and on Broadway $750 per month. All the extravagance of upstairs clothing parlors and downstairs clothing stores are eclipsed here. Where we conduct our business at the most nominal expense possible—as Chas. Broadway Rouss of New York used to conduct his tremendous business, so we conduct ours. On a quick 7 per cent. basis. We do not want to get rich off one customer. We prefer a large volume. Here we sell nothing but uncalled-for tailor-made suits. Values from $25 to $35, and give you your choice of any suit in the house at $15, including alterations when necessary. Look in our two magnificent windows and see the work of some of America's foremost tailors. All the newest colorings, as well as blues and blacks. Give us a call. No trouble to show goods. Everything we sell is hand tailored and will positively hold its shape. The Auchell Tailor Parlors, 214 Mercantile Place, between Spring and Broadway, ground floor.

It is only by understanding the muscles of the face and the proper neck exercises that you are able to have a perfect facial contour. I explain this to my patrons and by them devoting a few minutes a day to their face they accomplish wonders. I have a few hours I can fill in this week. Anna Bergeron, 416 and 17 Fay Bldg., corner Third and Hill. Phone A6927.

KEYS READY FOR STATE BANKERS.

BIG CASH BOYS WITH THE COIN COMING TO SPEND IT.

Long Beach Prepares Entertainment for Five Hundred Delegates to Convention—Barbecue at Rancho Los Cerritos to Be Piece de Resistance Next Saturday.

Indications are that there will be a record-breaking attendance of delegates to the eighth annual convention of the California Bankers' Association, which will convene in Long Beach next Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Already there are more than 200 reservations at Hotel Virginia, and the attendance is estimated at 500.

Headquarters of the convention will be at Hotel Virginia, and the secretary's office, registration room and information bureau will be located in the lobby. Sessions of the convention, which will be held in the ballroom, will be called to order Thursday afternoon instead of in the morning, because of the late arrival Wednesday evening of most of the delegates. It is thought the business of the association can be transacted during three sessions, the afternoon of Thursday and all day Friday, leaving the evenings of both days and Saturday for the social features and entertainments.

During the convention a separate meeting will be held by delegates representing California members of the American Bankers' Association to nominate a vice-president for California for the A.B.A. and to name a member of the A.B.A. Committee on Nominations, which will meet in Detroit during the week of September 9.

Several big entertainment features have been provided by the beach bankers and their wives. On Thursday afternoon the women will give an afternoon tea at the Virginia from 3 to 5 o'clock for the visiting women. This will be an informal get-together social, and will be followed by a reception exclusively for the women of the party Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. P. E. Hatch on West Eighth street.

Friday evening the grand ball of the association will be held at Hotel Virginia.

The big event will be on Saturday, when the bankers will be entertained with a barbecue at the home of George H. Bixby at his Rancho Los Cerritos. Autos will transport the guests from the hotel to the ranch, making the drive over the Long Beach-Los Angeles boulevard.

Other special features of entertainment will include boat rides, surf and plunge bathing, auto rides and golfing, cards to the Virginia Country Club and its privileges, having been issued to the visiting bankers.

The business programme has been mapped out, but its division between the sessions will not be determined until the arrival of the State secretary. The programme will include:

Address of welcome; response, address by the president; report of secretary.

Report of treasurer.

Report of chairman of the executive council.

Appointment of committees by the president; auditing resolutions; nominations.

Report of Nominating Committee.

Report of Legislative Committee.

Report of Protective Committee.

Report of Committee on Advisability of Adopting the Group System.

Report of California delegates at New Orleans convention. American Bankers' Association.

Without the reference to the sequence in which the papers and addresses will be rendered, they will include the following:

"Agricultural Education and Development"—Prof. E. J. Wickson, dean and director, College of Agriculture, University of California.

"The Promoter and the Banker"—E. S. Wangenheim, president Bank of Newman.

"Postal Savings Banks"—W. E. Benz, cahier First National Bank, Bakersfield.

"The Panama Canal"—Hon. Duncan E. McKinlay, surveyor of customs, port of San Francisco.

"Personality as an Asset in Banking"—William H. Wallace, vice-president Exchange National Bank of Long Beach.

"Crossed Checks"—R. M. Welch, vice-president Savings Union Bank & Trust Company, San Francisco.

"Clearing-house Examination of Banks"—John W. Wilson, examiner Los Angeles Clearing-house association.

"The National Citizens League"—C. H. Bentley, president Fruit Canners' Association, president Northern California section of the National Citizens League.

"The School Savings System"—F. C. Mortimer, cashier First National Bank, Berkeley.

"The Deposit of Public Moneys in Banks"—H. S. McKee, president First National Bank, Long Beach.

In addition to the foregoing, it is likely that the president will invite several public officials and prominent bankers in attendance at the meeting to contribute to the proceedings.

Reports by the auditing committee and committee on resolutions will be received during the closing session of the convention, followed by the installation of newly-elected officers.

GEORGE JUNIOR BENEFIT.

All interested persons are urged to remember that the performance of the "Mission Play" at San Gabriel is to be given this afternoon for the benefit of the George Junior Republic. The worthiness of the object calls for a large audience and it is the hope of the managers of the republic that their friends will aid in every way possible.

ASTHMA
Hardening of
The Arteries
The continued use of HYPODERMIC injections of some drugs causes HARDENING of the ARTERIES. Hence they are more DANGEROUS than Cocaine, Morphine, Codein and other HYPODERMIC DOPE, and as wholly devoid of any curative properties.
Another DANGEROUS DRUG is the unpalatable IODIDE of POTASSIUM so hurtful to the digestive organs that it must be taken plentifully diluted with water after each meal. If tolerated, it is at best only a palliative, and in addition to the digestive disorders it soon induces a severe BRONCHITIS. Deprive the ASTHMATIC FAKERS of these DANGEROUS drugs and you divest them of their meal tickets. Dr. Owens does not use these or any other DANGEROUS DRUGS in his Asthmatic treatment. He has discovered that ASTHMA IS CURABLE ONLY BY TREATING EACH INDIVIDUAL CASE WITH PRECISE DISCRIMINATION OF THE CAUSE. YOU MUST NOT CONFOUND HIS METHOD OF TREATMENT WITH THAT OF THE NOSTRUM PEDDLERS WHO DISTRIBUTE FREE TRIAL BOTTLES OF IMPOSSIBILITIES GUARANTEED TO CURE ALL CASES REGARDLESS OF CAUSE.
The worst cases are PERFECTLY FREE FROM ASTHMA AS A RULE IN TWENTY-FOUR HOURS WITHOUT OPIATES, SPRAYS, SMOKES, ATOMIZERS, MASSAGE OR HYPODERMIC INJECTION DOPE. His remedies are harmless, pleasant and easy to take.
An interview will cost you nothing. Office hours 10 to 4.

If your scalp itches you have dandruff. The itching is due to the increasing growth of the microbe that causes dandruff, and this eats up an irritation in the hair growing thinner every time there is dandruff there is a loss of hair. Falling hair is the result. Every hair that falls is bristling with weakness. Every hair that falls is bristling with weakness. You may be sure not long before you must get rid of the hair. Nothing you must get rid of the hair. Nothing you must get rid of the hair. The use of Newbro's Herpicide will eradicate it completely. Every spoonful of the scale-like accumulation will be entirely destroyed. The hair formerly dry and dull and falling out takes on a healthy gloss. There is a world of satisfaction in the use of Newbro's Herpicide because you can see the change when troubled with dandruff. Don't delay another day. Don't delay another day. PROSECUTION ROUTS JUROR FROM PANEL.

District Attorney Finds One Man Sworn as Permanent Member to Try Darrow Has Socialistic Leanings, Believes in Unions, Strikes and Boycotts, and Admires Job Harriman, and Dramatic Episode Results.

With a rapid flank movement, such as was the terror of the defense in the McNamara case, Capt. Fredericks yesterday eliminated from the Darrow jury a man of professed Socialist leanings, a believer in labor-unionism and a warm admirer of Job Harriman. The juror, M. A. Cravath of Pasadena, had been sworn as one of the permanent members of the panel when the District Attorney charged and completely routed the forces back of Darrow. Judge Hutton, after carefully listening to the evidence of the State, excused Cravath from the panel. From the man's own words it would have been difficult for him to find Darrow guilty. Attorney Rogers made an effort to have Cravath retained on the jury but Darrow sat wearily back in his chair, realizing that the one man who might have been depended upon to listen with super-sensitive attention to the testimony of the accused had been dismissed from the panel. It was admitted by the juror that in discussing a certain labor trouble he "might have" declared that he would recommend the "McNamara treatment," meaning as assumed by the State, the dynamiting of buildings. The examination of the Socialist and labor-union sympathizer furnished a dramatic scene yesterday morning. At noon adjournment, there were ten jurors sworn in to try the case, one talesman expressing a fixed conviction, and another partially examined.

Ten new talesmen will be in attendance tomorrow and each side feels confident that it will be possible to get the full panel with this number. Yesterday afternoon the members of the jury were allowed to go in automobiles under guard to their homes and places of business to make arrangements for the period of their sequestration from active life. The court assured the men that he will do all in his power to make the period of confinement as easy as possible, and it is probable that diversions such as were provided the McNamara jury will be afforded.

HARRIMAN TO FIGURE?

Incidental to his unexpected attack upon Juror Cravath, Dist.-Atty. Fredericks indicated that the name of Harriman, one of the McNamara lawyers, will be brought into the present case in a more or less unflattering light. The District Attorney said he wished it distinctly understood that it would not involve any charge he might make but rather assertions of one or more witnesses. Rogers took his cue from this statement to re-examine all the jurors as to their political views and sentiment toward Harriman. While practically all stated they were Republicans none would admit that any testimony involving Harriman would in any way influence their minds adversely to the defendant.

After his successful charge Capt. Fredericks leaned back in his chair. He had no peremptory challenges. The defense, however, exercised two. This leaves the State with three and the defense with five peremptory challenges in securing the two final members of the jury.

The ten men who are practically certain to sit on the case are O. C. P. Ritter, L. A. Leavitt, O. M. Dunbar, F. E. Golding, M R. Williams, L. T. Lammers, E. K. Pierce, A. J. Snyder, O. S. Coppock and Edgar F. Moore. The other two men are C. E. Price, who tried to get off just before adjournment, and E. B. Lefler.

The ten additional talesmen who will report tomorrow afternoon are F. A. Hines, Thomas O'Neill, L. W. Fyle, J. F. Lobinger, H. J. Mayo, F. W. Nance, Lloyd R. Macy, Harry Heath and A. F. Hickey.

Anton Johannsen, under Federal indictment in connection with the alleged illegal transportation of dynamite, was an interested spectator yesterday morning. The San Francisco laborite wore a red necktie and during recess warmly espoused the anarchistic tactics of the I. W. W.'s in San Diego. He declared Emma Goldman will be received as a martyr to the cause of free speech when she goes to San Francisco.

When court convened in Department Two, few besides the District Attorney knew of the blow he was about to deal the hopes of the defense. He quietly arose to remark that under section 1068 of the Penal Code he desired the permission of court to re-examine one of the jurors because of newly-discovered information concerning him.

Darrow's face blanched perceptibly and Rogers jumped to his feet, almost stuttering in his eagerness to head off what he foresaw. He begged to be allowed to send to his office for authorities, for excerpts of cases tried in other States and a copy of certain legal work. He also contended that a foundation must be laid before there could be any reopening of any juror's examination.

Judge Hutton quietly heard Rogers's excited argument, but remarked he would take Capt. Fredericks's word that the matter was a serious one. He also gave permission to the chief counsel for the defense to send for his law authorities, but intimated that it would be a question of fact rather than of law.

"Mr. Cravath," began Capt. Fredericks slowly in his deep voice, "isn't it a fact that you are a great admirer of Job Harriman?"

"Yes; I am," replied Cravath aggressively. "I think that La Follette and Harriman are among the great men of the country."

"And if it should appear," continued Capt. Fredericks, "that Harriman's name were coupled with some of the events of the alleged bribery, would your professed admiration for him influence your verdict?"

Cravath studied upon this question for some time and finally replied that he would try to go by the law and the evidence. He volunteered the statement that he voted for Debs for President.

"Did you discuss the McNamara trial with friends?"

"Yes, in a general way."

"M'NAMARA TREATMENT."

Capt. Fredericks then led the attention of the juror to a conversation had with a neighbor on a Pasadena car in which Cravath is alleged to have declared the way to settle troubles was to "apply the McNamara treatment."

"Do you remember any such con-

TOO MUCH IRON IN SILK.

Cleaners and Dyers Will Ask Congress to Prohibit the Filling of Silk by the Use of Adulterants.

Adulteration extends to more things than those you eat, and the National Asociation of Dyers and Cleaners have started a campaign against the adulteration of silks. They call attention to the fact that pure silk should wear practically forever, while the silk that is usually bought in the stores carries such a weight of metalic salts, tin or iron that it is quickly destroyed by the action of the sun or perspiration. It is stated that sixteen ounces of silk frequently carries sufficient of the metallic adulterant to make it weigh as much as ninety-six ounces. All purchasers are urged to insist upon a written guarantee that they are buying pure silk. The attorney of the association has a law in preparation which they will ask Congress to pass.

SHOPPERS OF THE CITY SPLIT BY THE CLOCK.

Three Distinct Trade Divisions, Motor, Hoi-polloi and Peacock, Hold Closely to Their Respective Hours, and Stores Know Exactly When to Expect Them. Some of Them Go Up, and a Few Go Down.

The shopping hours of Los Angeles, like all Gaul, are divided into three parts or periods.

Each period of the day has its distinct class of shoppers. They are in no way related to one another, and know nothing and care less about each other.

come almost iron-clad for the management and operation of the great mercantile establishments that cater largely to the feminine wants.

For instance, take Broadway. That brilliant thoroughfare is the heart of the shopping district. Here every article dear to the feminine mind is shown in glittering establishments that resemble palaces more than marts of trade. In the morning from 9 o'clock up to 11:30 o'clock comes the motor trade. That is when Queen Quality rules. Huge automobiles come slipping silently along Broadway carrying young ladies and sedate matrons in the quiet but elegant street dresses that are almost Puri-

LOS ANGELES WORKERS SHY AT A STRIKE.

Say They're Satisfied With the Present Conditions in This City, and Agitators Seek in Vain for Some Following—Joker in the Scheme of the Bosses Shown Up. That Secret Committee.

Because of the general satisfaction of labor-union men with the conditions in Los Angeles, there is no prospect that the attempt to call a strike of the building trades will be successful.

A referendum vote is being taken of the members of the building trades to see whether the laborite leaders shall declare for the closed shop. They have announced at various meetings that no strike will be called unless 60 per cent. of the members vote for the closed shop.

There is a "joker" in the plan, however, that is not obvious to the members. A secret committee of five radical union bosses got themselves appointed to count the votes. There is nothing to prevent this committee from announcing that the necessary 60 per cent. has voted in favor of a strike, even if the count is far less. However, the apathy of the carpenters and other members of the building trades is so great it is not believed that even 25 per cent. will vote for the strike and closed shop. All seem satisfied with the present hours and wages. There apparently is no attempt to complain against these features, the only question being whether a concerted effort shall be made to unionize all the lumber mills, planing establishments and other woodworking shops, and all contracting jobs.

Puente Colony Copied from Massachusetts Farm.

"A little land, liberty and a living" is the alluring alliteration and the motto of a co-operative colony, the members of which will gather for the first time today on their communal land near Puente.

About fifty persons are to take the Salt Lake train to "Fellowship Farm." Wagons will carry the women for the two miles from the station to the farm. The fourteen members who have already pitched their tents and built their houses will do the honors.

The farm is modeled after a successful co-operative farm at Westwood, Mass. George Elmer Littlefield is the founder. He came with Mrs. Littlefield and will devote six months' time organizing the farm.

It consists of seventy-five acres of fertile land beginning at the base of the mountains in Puente and sloping down a valley, every foot of which is tillable soil. An allotment consists of one acre and no member is allowed more than three allotments. Twelve acres have been set aside as a community farm, to be worked by the members.

Littlefield asserts the proceeds from this acreage, if worked scientifically by a professional intensive farmer, will pay all of the expenses of the public improvements in the community, such as the streets, wells, implements, public buildings and a modern school where the Mountessourie system of teaching will be used. The back half of each acre has been plowed and planted to either corn, beans or potatoes.

A store, the stock for which will be bought at wholesale and sold to members at wholesale prices plus cost of transportation and handling, reducing the cost of living considerably, is among the innovations promised. All products will be harvested and marketed by the community, which will operate its own auto truck. This will make the members of the colony independent of other means of transportation.

PROFIT GUARANTEED.

"Mr. Littlefield guarantees us a profit of $400 a year per acre," said Dr. Stanley M. Hunter, treasurer of the Fellowship Farm Association, who, with Mrs. Hunter, will make his home in the community.

"Poultry will be a chief product of the farm. A specialty will be made of tomatoes. Another project in connection with the farm will be the building of a hotel on adjoining land to accommodate rest-seekers and the curious, which could be operated profitably by our being able to supply the table from the farm.

"A number of the members of the colony do not expect to work their land themselves and there are others who will not make their home on the farm at once. Their farms will be cultivated by some of those living in the colony, on a percentage basis."

Many of the women are preparing to do all but the heaviest work on their own small plots. Most of them are going in for poultry raising. Dr. Kate Buck, secretary of the association, will grow mushrooms. Dr. Buck, who has been a practicing dentist in this city for twenty-eight years, will leave her office in the Security building this week to go to the farm to live.

"I have arranged to stay on the farm for a year," Dr. Buck said. "It will be a rest after the years I have been practicing. There are a number in the colony like myself who look forward with pleasure to the prospect of becoming a resident on such a farm as Mr. Littlefield has established in Massachusetts.

"In our colony we have artists, musicians, teachers and writers. They are coming from the North, South, and East and one member will arrive from Arnheim, Holland, with his family in about ten days, to make his home on the farm. When the plan was launched here a few months ago, applications for membership began to pour in and the list was quickly filled but the long litigation over the Baldwin estate, from which our land was purchased, caused some to loose patience and drop out. It did not take long to fill the vacancies, however, and at present there is a long waiting list.

PLAN OF GOVERNMENT.

Arthur Peck is president of the association and the trustees are Roger Payne, Walter D. Smith, Henry Andrus, John M. Koller, M. B. Thompson and E. Zeller. All officers are subject to recall. Any grievance is to be adjusted by a board of arbitrators, composed of three members elected by the community. If their decision does not give satisfaction, an appeal may be taken to the general body. The permanent capital of the association is fixed at $50,000, in eighty-three shares.

Roger Payne, M.A., of Cambridge, Eng., who is a horticulturist and botanist of repute, will pursue his scientific experiments at the farm where he will make his home, and will also help along educational lines.

When this farm is on a paying basis, Littlefield says, he will organize another on the same principles in this vicinity. It is his pet dream to establish these farms all over the world. Littlefield and his wife will live on the farm, where they will have a printing establishment and publish the Aerial Magazine. This is the way he expresses himself in his magazine, now being published on the Massachusetts farm.

"To find a way of joyous life within the reach of the struggling multitude; to show how by co-operating in farm purchasing any group of average men and women may secure their home acres; to be able to teach by example—by doing it—how such a living is possible for all who have the right attitude toward it—this releases the soul to moral freedom, as the land itself does to economic freedom, to ascend ideal mountains."

PROSECUTION ROUTS.

versation?" pursued the District Attorney.

"No, I don't. I may have said it, but I don't favor violence. I believe the labor unions have other remedies," replied the juror.

Capt. Fredericks read portions of the transcript giving Cravath's testimony on the previous day when he gave everyone, save perhaps the counsel for the defense, the impression that he abhorred strikes and the tactics of the labor union leaders. The juror insisted he had not intentionally misled the State's attorneys.

"Do you believe in force at times?" asked Capt. Fredericks.

"Well, I have thought that the laboring men have better ways."

"But your views and sentiments are all on that side?"

"Oh, yes."

FOR BOYCOTTS AND STRIKES.

In the same manner, the District Attorney drew from the juror that he approves of boycotts, strikes, etc., opposed injunctions and thinks picketing might be "all right."

"What did you mean by the 'McNamara treatment?'" asked Rogers in an aside to Capt. Fredericks.

"Dynamiting," said the other, grimly.

Rogers made a half-hearted attempt to retain the juror, but the court quickly ruled that the juror should be dismissed for entertaining opinions such as would unfit him to sit upon the case.

Rogers then examined each member of the panel as to whether the possible introduction of evidence tending to show Harriman was in some way connected with the case would influence them. All replied in the negative.

F. W. Taylor, who took the Socialist juror's place, said he was a property owner of this city and formerly lived in Chicago. He declared that he was not especially interested in politics and only knew in a casual way of the accusation against Darrow.

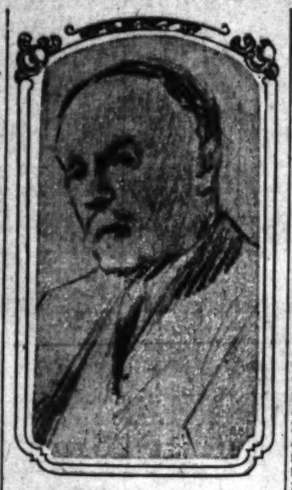
Capt. Fredericks read a long list of persons living in Chicago who will probably be called by the defense as character witnesses. Taylor only knew a few of those mentioned and that by reputation only.

When passed by both sides for cause, there was a pause to allow a private consultation as to exercise of challenges. With Cravath eliminated the District Attorney expressed himself satisfied with the other talesmen.

Rogers and Darrow consulted for some time before excusing Taylor. The other peremptory was exercised against Fred E. Cole, who was once in the New Hampshire Legislature.

Golding Moore, Leavitt and Dunbar were then sworn in. The two vacant seats were filled by C. E. Price and Elijah B. Lefler.

The examination of these men was not completed at adjournment.



M. A. Cravath of Pasadena.

A juror in the Darrow bribery case, whose pro-unionite sympathies were yesterday exposed by the District Attorney and resulted in his discharge from service by the court upon the ground he would not be able to give the State a fair and impartial hearing.

FOR THE MOTHERS' CONGRESS.

POMONA, May 18.—The local committees of the Pomona Parent-Teachers' Association are busy arranging for the State meeting of the Mothers' Congress which will be held here on May 28 and 29. More than four hundred delegates from all parts of California are expected and the programs will be interesting.

On the morning of May 28 at the opening of the Congress greetings will be extended by Mrs. Warren Inman andd Supterintendent of Schools W. R. Murphy. Miss Gibson will render a vocal solo and the reports of the president and other officers will be given. The session will be continued in the afternoon and Mrs. Charles Mayo will render vocal solos. In the evening there will be music by the high school orchestra and glee club, an address of welcome by Mayor Lee Matthews and a lecture by Mrs. John W. Edgar. On the next day the free text-book bill will be discussed by County Superintendent of Schools Mark Keppel and Senator F. W. H. Shannahan, with vocal solos by Victor Young and Miss Sue Darlington Pierce.

During their stay here the delegates will be given automobile rides over the city and valley.

FRANCHISE WANTED.

The city council has awarded the franchise on North Garey avenue to the Pacific Electric Company, Councilmen Matthews, Hansler and Boyd voting for it and Councilmen Tarr and Vandergrift voting against it, because the company will not agree to run the inter-urban cars over West Second street. The electric road officials have made arrangements now to issue transfers interchangeable in the yellow and red cars within the city limits, thus passengers may now ride as far as San Antonio avenue and the Santa Fe railroad tracks for five cents.

SOMETHING DOING.

Monrovia has closed another of her delightful carnivals. Monrovia never loses an opportunity to enjoy herself and to convince her neighbors that she is alive and glad of it.

RUDE INTERRUPTION.

A carpenter in an Illinois town was rudely interrupted while at work by the news that he had inherited $6,000,000. It is a shame to disturb a busy man like this. The lawyers should have had more consideration for the dignity of labor.

GOOD FORM.

An epidemic of Japanese fetes is making the rounds of women's clubs. A lady always shows to advantage in a kimono and a Japanese affair makes the kimono good form. The Japanese must be bright women to have made that garment their national costume.

DOG DAYS.

Society proclaimed Friday to be Dog Day in New York City, and the ladies fed their pets at a fashionable hotel. It used to be the fashion for dog days to come in the month of August, and it wasn't particularly healthy for a dog to make himself too conspicuous on such occasions.

WORKING BY SYSTEM.

After robbing a man's residence at Huntington Beach, two burglars aroused their victim and made him serve them with supper. This was rare forethought on the part of the operators. Burglars should not be expected to make a hard run for liberty on empty stomachs.

HEY, THERE!

It has always been admitted that making hay while the sun shines is profitable business, and now that everything from flapjack flour to the syrup that goes on the cakes is made from alfalfa, it will have to be conceded that the gold-dust twins have nothing on the hayseed.

ACROBATIC.

When an automobile not only turned turtle on a Los Angeles street Friday, but righted itself again and continued to run without spilling an occupant, it suggested the right conduct for machines in distress. Automobile factories should engage clever acrobats to teach their machines the gentle art of tumbling.

BETTER HALVES.

If you think the expression of a man's better half as applied to his wife is a joke you are not a newspaper reader. For instance, the ladies at Eagle Rock the other day entertained representatives of ninety-three women's clubs and then they only scratched the surface of feminine culture in a limited district. You would have to take in all of California and half the governments of Arizona, Utah and Texas to get a corporal's guard of men from half that number of literary clubs.

LITERARY SHORTSTOPS.

It is said that a convention of authors held at Carnegie Hall decided that in the future no hero would be permitted to flip the ashes from his cigar or cigarette, and that no heroine shall hereafter bury her head in her hands or be permitted to drop her eyes to the floor. So far so good. We do not approve of heroes who smoke while they are still alive, and the floor is certainly no place for a lady's eyes, even if her hands could be large enough to make a grave for her head. We would like to see the reform of these literary fellows, however, go a step farther and forbid detectives to discover crimes before they have been committed.

VICTIMS OF SELF.

A local court is giving victims of the drug habit an opportunity to leave the State if they refuse to go to the asylum to take the cure. Failing to leave the State and being unwilling to go to the asylum, these sufferers from diseased wills are to be sent to jail, where they will be deprived of the drug for six months. Sending them to another State relieves California of the burden, but does the victim no good. He will be himself wherever he is, and his misfortune will follow him as relentlessly as his shadow. The law in this State now holds the helpless inebriate to be insane and the same law should be made to include those who have been broken by drug habits. They are subjects for the hospital ward of the asylum, and not for prisons.

THE ASTOR ESTATE.

It seems that when Madeline Force was married to Col. John Jacob Astor she was under age, and her father, as her guardian, waived her dower rights so that the Astor real property might be left by will, in accordance with the policy of the Astor family, to the eldest son.

It is now claimed that Madeline's father had no power to waive her dower rights, and being under age when married she could not herself waive them. This point is not made by Madeline, the widow. It is made by the surrogate before whom the Astor will is presented for probate. If the stork shall visit Madeline, as is expected, there will be still another heir to the Astor properties. These are of sufficient value to keep the wolf from the doors of as many widows and children as may be found, but the great Astor estate will no longer be perpetuated under one ownership.

TAR AND FEATHERS.

It is to be regretted that Emma Goldman, the anarchist agitator, should have been compelled to leave San Diego, and that the cuticle of her business agent should have been accorded a ruiment of tar and feathers. It is to be more deeply regretted that conditions existed which seemed to San Diegans to justify in a measure this drastic action of leading citizens of San Diego.

The I-Won't-Workers selected San Diego for exploitation. They impeded the passage of vehicles and pedestrians through its business thoroughfares in the daytime by collecting in crowds at street corners where foreign anarchist speakers indulged in indiscriminate hurling of indecent language at our government and its representatives, the while they trampled upon the American flag and waved aloft the red rag of anarchy.

Arrested for disturbing the public peace, the anarchists conceived the plan of repeating the offense until the jails should be unable to hold the offenders, and the city treasury be bankrupted in feeding them. To accomplish this they invited I-Won't-Workers from the north to visit San Diego and increase the number to be jailed and fed.

The "army of the unemployed," as they style themselves, responded to the call. They journeyed southward by hundreds, begging food of farmers' wives, robbing hen roosts, and singing the Marseillaise hymn as they marched.

It is well known that the ultimate purpose of the anarchists, after rallying in force at San Diego, the city nearest the border, is to invade Lower California (Mexico) and there establish headquarters for a gang whose chief reason for existence will be the opportunity to make raiding incursions across the border and prey upon property in the United States. Not only San Diego, but Los Angeles would be in danger from these aggressors.

The people of San Diego are determined not to be overrun by these vermin, and their patience being exhausted, they are supplementing legal measures with vigilance-committee tactics.

Lynch law is to be deplored, but it is sometimes better than no law at all. More than half a century ago the great vigilance committee of San Francisco was organized. It hung Casey and Cora, expatriated Sullivan and others, and drove ruffians and ballot-box stuffers out of the city. For ten years and more after its disbandment San Francisco was one of the best-governed cities in the Union, with less of graft and greater security for life and property than existed in any city west of the Alleghenies.

The Times does not commend the "fowl" treatment accorded by the San Diegans to the anarchist doctor, but it does not attempt to sit in judgment upon those who discouraged his longer stay in the city of "bayn climate." Maybe he got, on the whole, about what was coming to him.

"BUTS."

There are a lot of "but" writers who infest newspaper editorial rooms, and "but" orators who stamp up and down platforms, and overwork that admirable and graphic conjunction until their readers could almost wish that they would die early rather than wearily dilate. These gentlemen seem incapable of giving hospitable entertainment to a positive, clean-cut, upright and downright opinion, with respect to men or measures. They qualify everything with a "but." Before the civil contest they were against slavery, but opposed to any interference with it. They were in favor of the war for the Union, but opposed to any measures for carrying it on. On the battlefield they were eager to capture the enemy's headquarters, but deemed it expedient to present to him their own hindquarters. After the war they were in favor of reconstruction, but opposed to the thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth amendments. They favored curbing the trusts, but were opposed to premature action with respect to the steel and harvester combinations. They rejoiced at the Supreme Court decision destroying the Standard oil and tobacco trusts, but deprecated the reasons given for the decision. They asserted that Billy Bryan was an undesirable citizen, but they stole all his frayed and spotted old clothes with which to garb themselves. They believe that our government ought to protect the lives and property of American citizens in Mexico, but insist that such protection should be withheld because, "dontcherknow," there are business rivals who own haciendas, and mules, and cows which it is desirable should be surrendered to insurrectos. They contemn the doctrines of anarchists, but insist that the I-Won't-Workers should be suffered to preach the doctrines of arson and dynamiting in the public streets without being ordered to move on. They believe in the wisdom and desirability of sustaining Republican doctrines, but insist that they should not prevail unless the candidates of their faction shall prevail with them.

The "buts" are not a modern product. They antedate the wireless, the telephone, the dynamo and the steam engine. Brutus was a patriot, but he should have used a caucus instead of a knife with which to get rid of Caesar. Aristides was an honest man, but he ought not to have so paraded his integrity as to have secured banishment by being called "the Just." The barons deserved commendation for obtaining Magna Charta from King John, but they should have used persuasion instead of menace. England is entitled to praise for overthrowing Napoleon, but she ought not to have secured the peace of the world by imprisoning him on St. Helena. Washington, and Jefferson and Adams are entitled to the gratitude of a nation for framing the American Constitution, but they ought to have provided for the security of personal liberty alone, and not guarded the rights of property.

The synods did well to reform their creeds, but they ought not to have discarded the doctrine of infant damnation. The progress of physicians in medical science is great, but they ought not to have discouraged the constant use of calomel and Epsom salts. The Times is the greatest newspaper in America, but, but, but its steamed contemporaries wish that it was not so successful, so newsy, so bright or so influential.

It is not understood that Japan will make any overt move to secure Magdalena Bay until the war on the advanced rates for Jap help in Hollywood is determined. Here is a job for The Hague peace tribunal.

A Warning From Over the Sea.

THE MEXICAN SITUATION.

Orosco and his bandits seem to be bottled up. The new provisional President, Gomez, has returned to his safe and comfortable quarters at San Antonio in Texas. His father has been incarcerated by Orosco for the awful crime of parentage of Gomes. The fleeing Americans on the west coast, that the Buford was sent to rescue, were only nineteen in number. The "gluttonous robbers" of Wall street have abandoned the efforts they were charged with making, to safeguard their mining and ranch interests in Lower California by incarnadining the multitudinous Mexican seas with Aztec-Spanish-Ethiopian blood; and the Federal and insurrecto troops are engaged in cordial and mutual massacre. When the Federals and insurrectos shall have cut each others' throats to the limit, then the debris of both armies will probably continue in the congenial occupation of depopulating unprotected hen roosts, devastating unguarded cattle ranges and robbing unarmed travelers.

Finally, when all combatants of all factions shall be exhausted or exterminated, and a new Diaz shall have grasped the reins of power and restored and preserved order in the only way it can be preserved in that turbulent country—by the strong hand—then Americans and other foreigners who have been robbed will place the proofs of the value of their property in the hands of the United States for collection, from whatever government may then exist in Mexico.

That Uncle Sam will collect these claims either in money or land is altogether probable. That he will make haste to turn the proceeds of the collections over to those entitled to them is not so probable. Three millions of dollars belonging to the sufferers by French spoliations has sojourned in the Federal treasury for more than a hundred years. Several millions of the Alabama award money collected from Great Britain has remained in Uncle Sam's strong box long enough to have grandchildren. Money collected from Russia for her destruction of American sealers has been withheld for a generation from its rightful owners, and the children of hundreds of American postmasters have grown whiskers while their parents were waiting for moneys which the department itself adjudged had been wrongfully withheld from them.

Mexico must pay—that much is certain—whether those entitled to the money ever get it or not. The necessity for intervention is probably at an end, and with it the hope which at one time inspired the insurrectos of uniting all Mexico against the United States. Decisive battles may be expected within a few days. Indications point to a triumph of Madero. It is to be hoped that such may be the result of the conflict.

"ON THE RIGHT SIDE."

It is easier to drift with the tide than to row against it. Yet duty often requires the navigator to battle with the flow that would carry him out upon a tempest-tossed sea, and away from the harbor he seeks. By and by the tide will turn. "Why," said a friend to a great New England statesman, "do you not go with the majority, instead of antagonizing it?" "I try to be with the majority," was the answer, "but I recognize always the great truth that one with God is a majority."

The Times may not always be right in what it advocates in its editorial columns, but it always tries to be right. It claims to have a conscience. Not merely a newspaper conscience which is sometimes mere appreciation of what is expedient. Not merely a blind devotion to the often misapplied maxim of "Vox populi, vox Dei," but a conscience which tries to measure men and measures in the scales of eternal justice and which abides by the result—a conscience which strives to "hew to the line, let the chips fall where they may."

The Times has desired and still desires to be on the "right side." But the right side is not always the popular side today any more than it was when the populace cried: "Give us Barabbas the robber and crucify Jesus the Christ." The popular tide of tomorrow may not be the popular tide of today.

We walk the earth at mid-day, and the vast expanse of the blue heavens is unrelieved by the sparkle of a single star. The earth seems the lonely satrap of space chained to the chariot of the mighty sun. Yet we know that the red planet Mars still holds his course, that Jupiter circles amid his shining orbs, that Uranus is flashing upon the confines of light, and that when the centrifugal force shall once more whirl us into the presence of the right we shall once more behold our companion worlds as they journey in shining splendor upon their eternal rounds. So we may not perceive in the glare and turmoil of the world's battlefields the patriotism, the judgment, the uplifted and enlightened conscience of the American people. But those qualities are there as true and as enduring as the stars in heaven, and when the hour comes they will exhibit themselves in glory, in majesty and in power.

LEASING COAL LANDS.

There is pending before Congress a bill providing for the construction by the government of not more than 1000 miles of railroad between the Alaska coal fields and tidewater, and for the mining by the government of coal for its own use and for sale to the public at a fair and uniform price.

There are also leasing bills pending which provide that the Interstate Commerce Commission shall regulate the prices at which coal mined under the leases shall be sold by the mining company. Unless such regulation should extend to the retailer it would doubtless result in giving to him the profit which was denied to the mining company, and the consumer would gain little benefit from the regulation of prices.

To sell or lease coal lands with a restriction in the patent or the lease that the coal mined should be sold at a rate not exceeding a specified sum per ton, would probably result in the lessees avoiding the effects of the law by preferring purchasers, and the ultimate consumer would not obtain fuel at as low a price as he would if the government mined, and transported, and acted as vendor of the coal. Forty years ago Congress granted hundreds of millions of acres of the public land to aid in the construction of railroads. These grants were accompanied by the condition that the ganted land should be sold only to actual settlers at a price not exceeding $2.50 per acre and in quantities not exceeding 160 acres to any one settler.

Experience has demonstrated that in many instances the railroad corporations have disregarded the conditions attached to the grant, and have sold or leased large tracts of forest land to lumbermen at $10 to $30 per acre, and have refused to sell to actual settlers at $2.50 per acre. There are cases pending in Oregon in which suit has been brought by settlers against the railroad company to compel conveyances of land. These suits have been defended on the ground that while the government might have a right to forfeit the land grant because of the refusal of the railroad company to comply with its conditions, the individual locator had no case, because he could not become an "actual settler" without consent of the company—that without such consent he was a trespasser without rights.

Few settlers cared to put up $2.50 per acre, maintain possession by force, incur the cost of building upon and improving the land, and undergo the expense of litigation with the railroad company. In the meantime, there was no law to prevent the company from removing the timber or selling to others the right to remove the timber from the granted lands at $20 per acre.

On the whole, it would seem that the best thing for the United States to do with its Alaskan coal lands so far as the public is concerned is to mine them, build railroads to them and sell the coal not to middlemen, but to actual consumers at cost. This would decrease the dividends of the Pocahontas Coal Company, but there are occasions when the interests of the noblest individuals must give way to the public good.

At the coming meeting of the Association of Railway Claim Agents in Los Angeles, one of the questions to be discussed will be: "How is it that a $4 cow killed by a railroad becomes a $100 animal when she is run over and killed?"

Government experts say there is as much strength in two-thirds of a pound of cheese as in a pound of beef. We have seen some cheese in this vale of tears that was even stronger than that.

SCIENCE PROGRESS.

Grafting Human Organs.

The science of transplanting functionating organs from a dead animal to a living one has become more than a theory, as it has been already proved practicable. Tissues may also be kept alive for an indefinite time and then successfully used for repair purposes.

"Healthy kidneys, removed from a human being, can be kept alive for at least two months," said Dr. William E. Quine of Chicago. "A kidney which had been on ice for about two months was transplanted in a dog recently and it worked.

"You can cut a healthy heart out of a dead person, connect the big arteries with tubes connected with a fluid of the same temperature as the blood, then place the heart in a warm liquid, and it will beat automatically, pumping the liquid for three or four days. It will, in other words, keep up its functions. That merely shows that certain organs of the body are really alive and in perfect working order long after the so-called dissolution takes place."

Skin grafting has been tried with success on human beings. Dr. John B. Murphy of Chicago is authority for the statement that not only has healthy, living epidermis been taken from a body just deceased and transplanted successfully on a living human being, but that the transplantation of skin from an amputated limb to a person in need of a patch of epidermis frequently has been accomplished. The latter is but a step removed from the transplantation of skin from one person to another.

Test of Wine's Purity.

The best and quickest way of determining whether wine has been adulterated is to place a tube containing a sample in a telephone circuit. If the wine is pure, says M. Dutoit, a Swiss savant, it acts as a conductor, and communication is maintained without let or hindrance. If, on the other hand, there is any fraud, it is difficult and sometimes quite impossible to carry on a conversation.

How can this be possible? Simply for the reason that wine is an electric conductor. Far from throwing ridicule on this interesting discovery, two French savants have been putting it to a severe test, and the result of their experiments has just been communicated to the Academie des Sciences. They do not regard M. Dutoit's theory as conclusive, but they frankly admit that if sulphates are mixed with wine—a process which converts it into what the French call "vin platre"—the trick can be clearly detected by means of the telephone. Naturally, however, they hold that at least for the present it is more prudent to adhere to the ordinary test of chemical analysis.

Delicate Scales.

In the personal laboratory of Sir William Ramsay, at University College, London, is a new pair of scales so delicately adjusted that they will weigh a seven-millionth part of an ounce. The room is in semi-darkness. So delicate are these wonderful scales that their balance is disturbed by the alteration of temperature caused by the turning on of an electric light at the other end of the room. The operator has to leave them for an hour in darkness—after he has tip-toed from the room so that his footfall should not set up any vibration—and then read them swiftly before any change in the temperature has had time to affect them. The scales rest in a metal chamber. The beam, only a few inches long, appears a mere cobweb of glass with its frail supports. It is not made of glass, however, explains Sir William, but of silica, which expands and contracts under the effect of heat far less than glass.

New Powerful Poison.

The most powerful poison known is reported to have been extracted by a German chemist from the seeds of the ricinus, the familiar castor oil plant, and has been attracting much attention on account of its remarkable properties. Its power is estimated to be so great that a gram—about a thirtieth of an ounce—would kill a million and a half guinea pigs. If administered so as to cause severe illness without death, it gives immunity against a larger quantity, and the dose can be gradually increased until more than a thousand times as much can be endured as would kill an untreated animal. Though arsenic, morphine and other poisons can be taken in larger and larger quantity, nothing approaching this marvelous increase in dose can be borne. The ricinus poison has effects much like those of living germs, and in immunized animals an antitoxin is formed, so that injections of their blood serum may cure animals that are already in danger or have become ill from ricinus poisoning.

Atmosphere and Flight.

The name of "ergaer" has been given to a supposed allotropic form of the atmosphere. During a sojourn in India E. H. Hankin, a British scientist, made extended observations on vultures and other large birds, and satisfied himself that soaring is still as much a mystery as ever, no explanation yet made being sufficient. A curious discovery was that birds were unable to soar when the sky was densely overcast. He has been led to the conclusion that the sunlight stores up in the air some form of potential energy that the motion of the birds' wings liberates as kinetic energy, and it is this energized state that constitutes the modification of the air. Some form of molecular bombardment or minute explosion is the conception of what takes place in the sunlight-charged atmosphere. If justified, the theory is interesting, but just how much of the influence on bird flight might be due to variations of atmospheric density, as shown by the barometer, is not clear.

Queen Victoria's Change.

Queen Victoria of Spain has succumbed to the customs of the country and not only attends bull fights with the King, but she awards the prize to the fortunate toreador. At the recent return to the bull ring of Ricardo Torres, the intrepid "Bombita," prince of the toreadors of Spain, Queen Victoria became as enthusiastic apparently as any member of the great throng. It is the custom for the favorite of the public to cut off the ear of the slain bull as a trophy, and after Bombita had made a great killing a great shout went up, "The ear! The ear!" the question of the award being in the balance for two minutes while the spectators were looking to the royal box for a sign of approval from the King.

King Alfonso looked toward Queen Victoria, whose eyes were sparkling and whose cheeks were flushed with excitement. She turned and nodded to the King, and Alfonso joined in the cry for "the ear!"

That settled it. "Bombita" cut off the ear of the slain bull and took it home as a trophy to nail to the wall of his dining-room. He had truly won royal favor and the most coveted trophy of the torreador.

The Asquith home-rule bill is a peculiar measure. It will not satisfy the Irish minority whose political principles are based upon centuries of struggle and resistance, it will hardly satisfy the extreme Nationalists; but, as a model of conciliation, it certainly merits commendation, as it will inevitably disarm the more intolerant and violent of its opponents.

WHAT MIGHT BE DONE.

What might be done if men were wise—
What glorious deeds, my brother,
Would They unite
In love and right,
And cease their scorn of one another!

Oppression's heart might be imbued
With kindling drops of loving kindness
And knowledge pour
From shore to shore
Light on the eyes of mental blindness.

All slavery, warfare, lies and woe,
All vice and crime might die together
And wine and corn
To each man born,
Be free as warmth in summer weather.

The meanest wretch that ever trod
The deepest sunk in guilt and crime
Might stand erect
In self-respect
And share the teeming world sublime.

What might be done? This might be true,
And more than this, my brother—
More than the tongue
E'er said or sung.
If men were wise and loved each other.

DISTINGUISHING FEATURES: Independent, uncompromising, unshackled, unpersuadable, unafraid and unbossed. THE LOS ANGELES TIMES is devoted to the great principles of Liberty under Law, Equal Rights in all fields of lawful human endeavor, Industrial Freedom, and to the upbuilding of Los Angeles, the State of California and the great Southwest.

AS TO LABOR: The Times is the undeviating friend of all honest toilers—of all unshackled law-abiding workers everywhere; and while never denying the right of workmen to organize lawfully, it is the unyielding foe of lawless, coercive, monopolistic and exclusive labor organizations, because they are the selfish enemies of their own class and of the common industrial weal. Our position is unmistakable and will be maintained. The long record of The Times as a just, liberal, reliable paymaster is unassailable. During the period between August 6, 1890, and September 30, 1911, there was paid to our loyal and well-satisfied non-union workmen, in salaries and wages, the tolling aggregate cash sum of $4,344,319.17—mainly to skilled labor.

THOUSANDS TO PICNIC.

Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation Plans Third Annual Event at Baldwin's Ranch.

The third annual picnic for the employees of the Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation is to be held at Baldwin's Ranch next Saturday. It is expected that fully 4000 persons will participate in this event.

The affair is entirely in charge of the company, it providing the transportation, a picnic dinner and the amusements. The company employs from 1500 to 2000 persons, and each employee is invited to take with him his family or a friend. The general arrangements are in charge of ten committees.

A dancing pavilion, 100x80 feet, and a grand stand for the baseball games with a seating capacity of 2000 persons are being erected.

Only sufficient employees will be left in the city to keep the plants in operation, and these are entirely volunteers. All remaining by the work, however, will be given a day off later in the season, with an allowance to cover their transportation expenses and entertainment.

OLDEST BAKERY TO MOVE.

Opening of Plaza End of Sunset Boulevard Requires Tearing Down of One of the Landmarks.

A communication was sent to the Board of Public Works yesterday asking for an extension of time in which to remove the Gonzales building, No. 545 North Main street, which must be razed to make way for the opening of Sunset boulevard to the Plaza. M. G. Gonzales is sick, and the extension of time is asked for this reason.

It has developed in this connection that this building houses the oldest bakery in Los Angeles, for many years known as the old French bakery, but for several years past a branch of the Franco-American Baking Company. The concern has been in existence for more than a quarter of a century at this one point.

TEACHERS' CONCERT.

The choral section of the Los Angeles City Teachers' Club will give a concert at the First Congregational Church on Thursday of this week. "By Babylon's Wave" and "Maytime" will be rendered by the Gutterson-Lewis trio, "Snowflakes" as a soprano solo by Mrs. R. F. Land, and "Wert Thou in the Cauld Blast," and the "Hymn to the Madonna," by the trio. Mrs. Ida Morrison, president of the club, will preside, J. B. Ponlin will direct and Mrs. Roy Calvin Wilson accompany.

A Peculiar Meeting.

[Baltimore American:] Each believing that the other was dead, Mrs. Lulu Day of Oakland, Cal., and Claude Fitzgerald, an auditor for the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad, met suddenly at the Union Depot yesterday morning. The two are brother and sister, they have been separated for more than twenty years.

Mrs. Day came to this city to seek the location of her brother's grave here. Fitzgerald was on his way to Emporia, Kan., where he had supposed the body of his sister was buried. When the brother and sister were orphaned they were small children. They were adopted in separate families and afterward lost trace of each other.

To Whom Credit Is Due.

LOS ANGELES, May 13.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Several of the national aids of the Woman's Relief Corps of the Grand Army of the Republic were recently instrumental in the organization of a new post from men who had come here from several eastern States to live, but who had not applied for membership in either of the three posts in Los Angeles. To these loyal patriotic women belongs the conception and successful organization of a Grand Army post at this late period and which will probably be the last to take their place in line among the men who made it possible for this country to continue its mission unaided. Your report in today's issue gives an erroneous impression and one that can only be properly explained by giving "credit to whom credit is due"—our auxiliary, the W. R.C. of Admiral Robley D. Evans Post No. 200, Department of California and Nevada. JOHN Q. A. WALKER. Twenty-fourth Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, army of the Cumberland.

Crooked Primaries.

LOS ANGELES, May 13.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Your editorial in today's paper prompts the writer to attempt to air his long conviction and suggest a possible plan to measurably curb the political crook and take away the occupation of the bolter of easy conscience. Now, that primaries are ostensibly conducted under the sanction of law in this State, let the lawmakers, if they are half as honest as they pretend to be, go a step further and provide that all votes cast by the voters of a given party at a primary be counted in the final election in favor of the candidate nominated at such primary by such party, and prohibit all voters who participate in such party primary from again voting in the final election. Had such a law been in force at the recent primary be Democrats and Socialists, who pretended to be Republicans would be prohibited from again voting in November and their votes would be counted in favor of the candidate who shall be nominated at Chicago in June, and, had such a law been in force at the last county election, the bolters of easy conscience would have been prevented from voting against Capt. Fredericks after such bolters had participated in the primary at which Capt. Fredericks was nominated.

In short, let the voter make up his mind as to whether or not he will participate in any given primary, and, if he chooses to so participate, let him—yea, make him—abide by the result of such primary. If it be objected that such a plan would tend to result in minority rule, let it be remembered that in practice a very small minority rules almost everywhere, notably so in this city. W. E. CLARK.

THE GIRL WITH THE STRIDE.

Enlivens Broadway Shoppers and Sets New Fashion—Short Skirts and Walking Shoes in Vogue.

The passing show on Broadway has developed the girl with the free stride and the swinging arm. She sails along like a yacht on a taut bowline, parting the shoppers as gracefully as the stem of the yacht cuts through a choppy sea. And because of this new heel-and-toe walk, the saunterers have livened up.

Broadway shoppers no longer dawdle. It is all because of the girl with the stride. Watch her coming along. See her wheel and march into a store, and note the women in her wake. When she passes they all strike out as though they were out for exercise and not to match a piece of silk.

There is another thing the passing show is driving into the alfalfa. The woman whose skirt touches the pavement is as much a novelty as the woman who several years ago wore a short skirt. She is out of place and knows it. The short skirt is the style. It also is good for the hosiery trade, for on Broadway there is an amazing display of hose, principally silk.

The short skirt has also brought into vogue the walking shoe. The former high heel, it was found, had a tendency to throw the body forward in the kangaroo style. The striding girl carries her head erect which gives full play to the lungs.

There is also a change in the head gear. The hat is no longer unwieldy requiring a jerk of the head to tilt it straight. It is light and filmy, and the style is to have it match the eyes.

Oh, the passing show is a wonderful thing to watch, and the striding girl a thing of joy and beauty.

WILLING TO PAY FINE.

Relative of Convicted Long Beach Mail Robber Seek to Keep Him Out of Prison.

Frank E. Tennant, found guilty of rifling letters in the United States mail in the postoffice at Long Beach where he was employed, will be up for sentence in the United States District Court tomorrow morning. Efforts will be made to have this sentence take the form of a heavy fine rather than imprisonment. It is stated that Tennant's mother-in-law, Sophia Drake, is willing to pay a good round sum to save him. She believes that Tennant is a much abused man.

W. H. Pohlman will also answer to the court for his refusal to answer questions put to him by the Federal grand jury in connection with the McNamara case. It is supposed that Pohlman has a number of letters from John J. McNamara involving the shipment of dynamite into the State. Pohlman insists that if he delivers these documents he might be incriminated.

It is expected that there will be about 600 railroad men from all parts of the United States in attendance. Subjects pertaining to the matter of adjustments will be discussed thoroughly at the session which is to open Tuesday morning at the Alexandria. The business sessions of the organization will last over Thursday. All of the usual plans for entertaining have been made for the adjusters, including a trip over the Santa Fe "kite-shape" track to Riverside, Redlands and adjacent terr

Public Service: City Hall, Courts.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

The special committee appointed by the City Council to prepare plans for a municipal labor bureau, and an estimate of the first year's cost of its operation, completed its work yesterday, and will ask for $7000 for this purpose.

The City Engineer reported to the Board of Public Works yesterday that the cost of improvement of Barrow street will amount almost to a confiscation of the properties aligning the thoroughfare and suggests as the only solution the doubtful precedent of the city paying a part of the assessment out of general funds.

More protests were filed yesterday to the application of the General Pipe Line Company to establish a pumping station and oil tanks on San Fernando boulevard, near Division street.

At the City Hall.

PLANS TO HELP UNEMPLOYED.

CITY LABOR BUREAU REPORT READY TUESDAY.

Special Committee Appointed by Council Will Recommend Appropriation of Seven Thousand Dollars for First Year's Work, and Outlines General Plans.

The report of the special committee appointed by the City Council to outline plans for the municipal labor bureau, and to make an estimate on the necessary expenses for the first year's operation, will present its detailed report to the Council next Tuesday. It will ask that the Council authorize the establishment of such a bureau in connection with the Civil Service Commission, and that a fund of $7000 be appropriated for its maintenance. The special committee completed its work on this report yesterday.

The report will ask that free quarters be provided in the Temple Block, which is city property. Three rooms will be required, connecting, if possible, and separate entrances are desired for men and women. The plan is to provide for all classes of employment, from the pick and shovel men and the scrub woman to the highest grades of work. Every person placed is to be given special consideration as to his particular fitness for this position. A complete card index system and cross systems will be recommended.

Besides the superintendent, it is proposed to have a woman in charge of the woman's department, and a general clerk and stenographer. There is also to be an outside man to fill a position to which the committee attaches great importance. His work will be to carry on special investigations for the purpose of educating the employers of labor to use the municipal labor bureau, gather definite information as to the needs of the various avenues of labor-employment in the city and vicinity, and keep in as close touch as possible with the demand for labor throughout Southern California, Western Arizona and Southern Nevada. At all times, proposes this committee, there shall be kept on file accurate information as to the needs of employment throughout the agricultural districts of Southern California and the permanency of this employment. In fact, the bureau is to become a general clearinghouse for the handling of labor, if the committee's plans are adopted.

The Civil Service Commission has asked the City Council to appropriate $150 for sending a representative to the convention of civil service commissions to be held in Seattle beginning June 21, and it is proposed to send Secretary Spalding so that he may also study the details of the operation of the Seattle municipal labor bureau. Spalding also proposes to go to Chicago to make a study of Prof. C. E. Henderson's work in the Municipal Commission on Unemployment, which has been successful. He will also go to Wisconsin to study the methods of the State labor bureaus established under W. M. Leiserson, superintendent of the State Labor Bureau of Wisconsin.

The leading students of this subject state that there are 200 ways of getting together the employers and the unemployed that are not in use by the ordinary labor bureaus, and the local committee proposes that a study of these methods be made and the best of them be adopted for the proposed municipal bureau for Los Angeles.

Almost Confiscation.

In regard to protests made by property owners on Barrow street as to improper construction of street improvement work and the heavy assessments which will result because of this improvement, the City Engineer has reported to the Board of Public Works that any defects found on final inspection will be made good, and that the heavy cost of the work is true, in fact, almost amounting to a confiscation of the property. The City Engineer suggests that this is a matter outside of his control and that no relief can be offered unless the City Council sees fit to adopt the doubtful precedent of paying a part of the assessment out of the general funds.

Will Maintain Street.

The South Los Angeles and Slauson Avenue Improvement Association has filed with the Board of Public Works and the City Council protests against the acceptance of the improvement of Slauson avenue from Central avenue to Arlington street on the ground that the macadam is crumbling and has never been properly set. The rock used was rhyolite and one exceedingly hard to bind. The contractor, George Oswald, is now at work on the street, making repairs, and has bound himself to maintain the street for a reasonable length of time.

Will Not Build Wall.

The City Engineer has reported adversely to the Board of Public Works on the petition of property owners asking that the construction of a retaining wall be included in the plans for the improvement of Lookout drive from Mora street to and around block A of Mt. Lookout. The property-owners want a wall of special design along the uphill side of the drive, of such height as will follow the contour of the land; but the City Engineer says that this is impracticable to include the cost of such a wall under the provisions of the Vrooman act, as in many places the lots are from fifteen to twenty feet above the present graded roadway. He points out that the retaining walls should be constructed on the private property and not on the street.

More Protests Filed.

Protests continue to be filed against the application of the General Pipe Line Company for a permit to install branch pumping station and tanks for oil on the San Fernando boulevard near Division street. A protest containing ten pages of signatures was filed in the City Clerk's office this week, and yesterday there were filed protesting resolutions from the Cypress Park Improvement Association and the Parent-Teachers' Association of the Washington Park School, the latter alleging that the proposed tanks would be within close proximity of the school and would be obnoxious.

No Need For Bureau.

The Board of Public Utilities has decided that there is no practical need for the city establishing a general information bureau to disseminate information about arrival and departure of trains, as each railroad now has departments for this service, and there are also other means available. This bureau was petitioned for by A. E. Bruce and others.

City Hall Brevities.

The City Engineer has notified the Board of Public Works that he has set the stakes on the new lines on Sunset boulevard, defining the property lines, but that it should be understood by property owners that the present grades may be modified to a considerable extent and that no permanent construction should be undertaken until this is definitely settled.

The Board of Public Works has approved the recommendation of the City Engineer that the name of Warner street be changed to Pacific avenue. Warner street is a continuation of Pacific avenue, extending from Washington street to Twenty-second street. The City Council will be asked Tuesday to make this change.

The Country Club Park Company has filed a petition to the City Council, asking for the immediate construction of the Arroyo de la Brea storm drain.

George I. Cochran, president of the Civil Service Commission, has asked the City Council for a three-month leave of absence. He intends to visit New York and European points.

Property owners at Wilmington want the water pipes placed in Canal and J streets while the streets are being improved, and the City Attorney has decided that this can be done under the provisions of the Vrooman act.

The sum of $1272 is the highest amount that has been offered for the boating refreshment stand privilege in Echo Park. The City Council will act on these bids Tuesday.

The Fire Chief has been granted permission to build a reel house on the jail lot at Wilmington.

The Public Welfare Committee of the City Council has decided that it is not to the best interests of the traveling public that the street cars be required to stop at all intersections of lines with Olive street, as requested by the Automobile Dealers' Association.

NOTE JUGGLING OF NO AVAIL.

SIGNER OF ACCOMMODATION IS HELD NOT LIABLE.

Carnegie Trust Company of New York Loses Suit Against California Corporation—Queer Financiering Methods on Plaintiffs' Part Are Revealed.

The suit of the Carnegie Trust Company of New York to compel the Alfalfa Feed Milling Company and William K. Weaver to pay a note for $37,500, given October 7, 1910, which was tried before Judge Houser several months ago and submitted, was decided yesterday in favor of the defendants.

The trial of this suit revealed a trick of financiering to bolster up the assets of the trust company, which later went into the hands of a receiver. It was brought in this county because the Alfalfa Feed Milling Company is a California corporation and Weaver a resident of this city.

The Carnegie Trust Company, the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Securities Company and the Platt Iron Works were affiliated through the same man being president of all three corporations. The Merchants' and Manufacturers' Securities Company made a draft on Jack Cudahy for $49,500 and the evidence showed, it was taken to the trust company, where credit was given for that amount. The trust company sent the draft to Chicago for collection. Cudahy was out of town and his bankers refused to pay it. The draft went back to the trust company unhonored.

The trust company, it appears, was not in good financial condition. It was about to have a new president and the directors were not anxious that he should inquire into the dishonored draft. Weaver was secretary of the Alfalfa Feed Milling Company and that company had had dealings with the trust company. It was proposed to Weaver that he should give a note to cover the draft. He demurred, but when told that it was an accommodation paper and that he would not be liable, he consented. He signed the note as secretary of the company and the difference was made up by taking $12,000 out of the account of the Platt Iron Works, the total amount being applied to the payment of the draft.

The note was found among other securities after the receiver took charge and he brought suit for payment. The suit was tried here under the laws of New York, which provides that where an accommodation note of the character described in these proceedings is given, the party accepting it cannot enforce payment.

SHUTS OFF THE WATER.

LIFE IN PERIL, SAYS FATHER.

A suit for $5000 damages was filed against the Hawthorne Electric and Water Company yesterday by Abraham Scharf on behalf of his 3-year-old son, David, the allegations in the complaint showing that while the boy was sick with scarlet fever and the house quarantined, the water supply was shut off for thirty hours for nonpayment of the water rate.

The citizens of Hawthorne have been fighting the alleged unreasonable meter charge and it is now before the Railroad Commission to determine what is reasonable for the company to charge. Scharf alleges the water was shut off from his house April 23 and only restored when the rate for April was paid. He alleges the rate had been paid for March and there was nothing due for April.

The complaint, filed by Attorney Ackerman, also states that Supt. Trumbull explained that if Scharf had not made a "fool of himself" at a meeting of citizens held to protest against exacting the meter rate, the water supply would not have been shut off.

Owing to the inability of Scharf to obtain water for drinking, medicinal and bathing purposes, he alleges, the life of his sick son was endangered, and for these reasons he asks damages.

COURT HALTS SALE.

STOCKHOLDERS DISAGREE.

An order issued by Judge Willis yesterday estopped a sale set for yesterday, growing out of the non-payment of an assessment on stock held by L. M. Holt, J. W. Tibbot, Ethel Chapin Tibbot, G. W. Rose and Ella F. Rose in the Atlasta Mining Company. The suit was brought by these parties against the Atlasta Mining Company, C. W. Foote, secretary, and R. E. Janes, president.

The company was organized under the Arizona law which provides for non-assessable stock. The property is in California, and in order to bring the company under the California laws, the Atlasta company was formed. An assessment of one-half cent on each share of stock was levied, the alleged agreement being that the assessment could be paid by the stockholders with stock at the rate of 10 cents a share.

When the plaintiffs offered the stock, they allege Janes and Foote demanded cash. This was not paid and a sale was ordered. The order to show cause is returnable on the 27th inst.

HERE'S A PUZZLE.

TWO ARE INVOLVED.

According to Dr. E. M. Spates of Sunland, his daughter Gladys, aged 19 years, stole $150 of his money. According to the citizens of Chico she is a fine young woman.

Gladys was summoned before the Juvenile Court yesterday on a charge of being a delinquent. Her father signed the complaint. Judge Wilbur continued the case until next Friday, placing the girl in charge of Constable Lopez and his wife of San Fernando. Lopez arrested her at Oroville, where she had gone on a visit.

Spates is divorced and alleges the court gave him the custody of his daughter. The mother went to Chico and the girl lives with her. She obtained a place in a store.

The puzzle Judge Wilbur must solve is whether he shall dispose of the case as the father would have him do, or whether the citizens of Chico are right in their estimate of the young woman.

LAND HELD ON LEASE.

WANT TAXES REFUNDED.

The San Pedro, Los Angeles and Salt Lake Railroad Company has brought suit against the City of Los Angeles and the county in separate actions to recover taxes paid on land which it is alleged is held on lease and therefore should be charged against the owner of the property.

The taxes, amounting to $1126.94 and $1051.27, respectively, were paid under protest for the purpose, the complaint states, of preventing the sale of the property and preventing a cloud on the right of the company.

The assessment is illegal and void, the company alleges, for the reason that the fee title to the land is vested in the State, the city and the county, and the assessment of the leasehold interest is and was not a proper charge.

MUST PAY NOTE.

STEP-MOTHER LOSES.

Mrs. Bessie P. Hall must pay a note of $1178.17 which she gave to her step-daughter, Mrs. Laura Brown Hall, although she says it was given without consideration and was obtained by fraud and misrepresentation. Judge Craig decided yesterday in favor of Mrs. Laura Brown Hall, who brought the action.

The younger woman's husband conducted a drug store. It seems he took money out of the till from time to time and gave it to his father, Joseph Hall. The son died, and his wife obtained the note from her stepmother, she alleged, to make up the sums loaned to the latter's husband.

A WIDOW'S PLAINT.

ALLEGES FRAUD AND FORGERY.

A complaint filed in the Superior Court yesterday by Mrs. Mary L. Sill against Elmer F. Mackusick, George Grover Smith, Winslow P. Hyatt and Ephraim G. Angell, alleges that the defendants, Mackusick and Smith, real estate agents, and their attorney, W. P. Hyatt, fraudulently executed a deed to Angell, the fourth person named in the complaint.

Mrs. Sill owned a lot at No. 325 West Twenty-eighth street, valued at $12,000, which she authorized the real estate men to trade for seventy acres of land in Fresno county, owned by George E. Hart. At their request she executed a deed to their attorney, Hyatt, and at the same time authorized him to make a deed to Mackusick for the seventy acres. She alleges that the defendants told her the transfer would be more easily effected in this way and that she complied. She also alleges that it was afterward discovered that the deed had been made to Ephraim G. Angell and that she had been defrauded out of her property; that she never authorized any such transaction, nor authorized any other person to do so.

The complaint sets forth that the defendants now claim that Alida Hurst, as attorney in fact for Mrs. Sill, signed an authorization for the transfer to Angell. This is denied and the paper denounced as a forgery, and Mrs. Sill asks that she be given a clear title to the seventy acres or a judgment against the defendants for its value.

COURTHOUSE NOTES.

BREVITIES MISCELLANEOUS.

TIES ANNULLED. Clarence A. Appleford appeared before Judge Monroe yesterday asking that his marriage with Andrea Appleford be annulled. He testified that they were married in this city, November 3, 1910. He was informed by his wife that she had not obtained an interlocutory decree from her former husband, Samuel Dollard, in San Francisco, February 7, 1910, and that she had no right to marry Appleford. She was afraid her husband would have her arrested for bigamy and left Appleford January 9, 1911, since which time he has not been able to locate her. She is a nurse and Appleford believes she has obtained employment in some hospital. The annullment was granted.

COURT MARRIAGE. Miss Eunice Elliott was married to Daniel Cole by Judge Wilbur yesterday. The ceremony was performed in court. The bride is the step-daughter of De Lara, Mexican revolutionist.

IN THE INFERIOR COURTS.

I.W.W. Arrested for Vagrancy, Quibbles Over Form of Charge and Elects Trial by Court.

J. H. Jones, I.W.W., who is also known by the nicknames "Dynamite" and "Smoky," was in a defiant and quibbling mood when arraigned before Police Judge Chambers yesterday. He was charged by Patrolman Croft with vagrancy. The man was arrested at First and Los Angeles streets, Friday, while interfering with the arrest of a fellow I.W.W.

Jones is known from the Canadian to the Mexican lines because of his characteristic dress. Upon his tousled head of jet black hair he wears a large, high-crowned light gray sombrero. Under a long black overcoat he wears a blue shirt and vest. Over dark trousers is a pair of blue striped overalls. Jones's eyes are small and piercing, and look steadily from under a pair of bushy brows. He is over 6 feet tall and powerfully built.

When arraigned, "Smoky" was minus his overcoat. It was stolen from him after he was lodged in the San Diego jail several months ago.

"You are charged with being an idle and dissolute person," said the justice, reading the complaint.

Slowly contracting his eyelids and gazing intently at the court as he rested his two large hands upon the bench in front of him, Jones replied, carefully measuring each word:

"I would like to listen to some very specific evidence before I plead to that offense. The mere assertion of being idle and dissolute is not very definite."

After Justice Chambers had told him that was the language of the charge and that he must plead to it, Jones declared he was not guilty. He will be tried July 30.

After Justice Chambers had fixed bail at $50, Jones had a whispered conversation with a friend who answered to the name of Scott.

"Go find Elsworth," whispered Jones, "and tell him to dig up $50, telling him for me that I've got all kinds of evidence to beat this case."

When Scott left the courtroom he was under surveillance.

Traffic Officer Injured.

A scratch on his right wrist and a discolored left eye are the only injuries Traffic Officer R. E. Robbins sustained yesterday morning when he was struck and thrown into the air by an auto driven by A. G. Stephenson, No. 1841 Monticello avenue. Robbins did not prosecute Stephenson. "I ran out from behind a truck wagon to catch a car when the accident occurred," said Robbins. "I saw the auto coming at about thirty miles an hour, and supposed that the driver saw me. When the fender struck my right hand as I put it out to protect myself, the rear wheels of the auto were sliding, so tightly had Stephenson applied the brakes. The force of the impact threw me about ten feet into the air, and I landed on the pavement." Stephenson said he didn't think he was exceeding the speed limit, but admitted that he didn't see the officer until he suddenly leaped from behind the wagon to run across the street to catch a car.

Four-time Offender.

A. Eyrand, a brick contractor, arrested three times for similar offenses, was taken yesterday morning by Motorcycle Officer Gardner and charged with exceeding the speed limit. He was released on $200 bail for his appearance in court Monday morning when his case will be set for trial. "I was hurrying over to Covina where I have some men at work," was the only comment Eyrand made. The second time the young contractor was arrested, he paid a $50 fine, and the third time the court assessed him $100.

Given Stiff Fine.

Mrs. A. Christianson, who conducts a rooming-house at No. 317½ South Main street, arrested several days ago by Officers Carter and Lloyd for selling liquor without a license, was fined $100 by Police Judge Fredericksen. On July 5 Mrs. Christianson will be tried on the charge of conducting a disorderly house.

Taken at His Word.

When James Walsh, alias Jim Wallace, was arraigned before Police Judge Chambers yesterday on a charge of drunkenness, he wasn't nearly as anxious to go to jail as the day previous, when he followed Officers Burgess and Wedge around the city asking them to lock him up. He tried to beg off yesterday, but the court felt differently, and sentenced him to ten days.

Juvenile Offenders.

Walter McChesney, alias J. K. Green, 17 years old, and B. C. Carter, 16 years of age, were arraigned before Police Judge Chambers yesterday on complaints charging them with passing a fictitious check on a South Main-street clothier. They were arrested as they stepped off the steamship Santa Clara at San Francisco, and were brought back by Detective Fox. As both are under age, they will be turned over to the Juvenile Court. They were held under $2000 bail for their appearance in court tomorrow.

Two Get Jail Sentences.

Harry Glenn, a young ironworker, spent half an hour of Police Judge Chambers's time yesterday morning trying to convince him he should not be sent to jail, although he had been convicted of an ugly charge. He was arrested by Officer Childress of the Metropolitan Squad. At the conclusion of Glenn's explanation of his actions during the past few weeks the justice sentenced him to 150 days. James Condiff, who was convicted of disturbing the peace in a rooming-house by breaking furniture, was given thirty days.

CLUB ENTERTAINED.

Mrs. E. A. Lundquist, president of the S. S. Embroidery Club, entertained the members of that organization at her home in Oneonta Park on Friday. The house was beautifully decorated and the lunch table was outlined with a wreath of yellow roses and ferns.

YOUNG WOMEN IN DRAMA.

On Tuesday evening the dramatic class of the Young Women's Christian Association will present "Hiawatha," with all the Indian costumes and staging, and on Thursday evening the Choral Club will give an operetta entitled, "A Dress Rehearsal," under the direction of Mrs. Caroline Tew.

RALLY OF MACCABEES.

The Ladies of the Maccabees will hold a rally in Turner Hall on Tuesday and Wednesday, when Mrs. Minnie W. Aydelotte, supreme chaplain and State commander, will be the guest of honor. On Wednesday evening the public will be invited to attend, hear a lecture and music and enjoy the pictures and fancy drills.

The Right Furniture
For Your Summer Comfort

The "California"—after careful research—has selected its showing of summer furniture with critical regard for the peculiar requirements of this semi-tropic climate.

The three styles we have found to be most thoroughly suited to the long California summers are the famous "Crex" furniture, made of specially treated woven grass and shown in the natural soft green and beautiful Baronial Brown tones—the attractive "hand wrought reed" pieces, made of the finest German reed—and the beautiful "Willowcraft" furniture, made of select French willow.

This furniture is not only serviceable and durable, but of most comfortable proportions and of attractive designs. Our showing includes every essential piece for the complete summer furnishing of the living room and porch—including the rugs.

A few pieces of "Crex," "Reed" or "Willow" furniture will entirely transform your home in harmony with the season, and add materially to your summer comfort at exceedingly slight cost.

We cordially invite you to come here and see this attractive furniture—and we shall welcome the opportunity to prove to you the superiority of our values.

An interesting display of "Crex" may be seen in one of our windows this week.

Has Placed the Electric Vehicle on a "Power Basis" Adequate to All Service Requirements

The "Exide" group of batteries—the "Exide", "Ripcap-Exide" and "Ironclad-Exide"—are the ultimate in battery construction. WARNS WOMAN KIND AGAINST TIGHT SKIRTS.

Munich Doctor Says They Are Inclined to Make Otherwise Fair Ladies X-legged—Old Adam Shows in the Kaiser's Youngest Son—The Emperor Loses a Case in Supreme Court.

BY MALCOLM CLARKE.

(THE TIMES WIRELESS, CABLE, EASTERN AND OVERLAND NEWS SERVICE.)

BERLIN, May 18.—Beware of the tight skirt, women! Munich's most distinguished physician, Dr. Karl Francke, says it is more deadly than dancing or bridge. The doctor made an elaborate investigation of what is here known as "X-leg," but which may be popularly defined "knock-knees," and here are a few of his discoveries:

In early childhood 75 per cent. of both sexes suffer from the tendency of the leg to slip away from the perpendicular. Men straighten out as they grow to manhood, but the women incline to still greater deviations. So, in the forty-eighth year he finds a percentage of 33 among women classified as unenviable possessors of "X-leg," to only 8 per cent. of men. And, he says, tight skirts are the cause.

According to Dr. Francke, close-fitting and too heavy skirts hamper women's movements and distort her limbs. An Aphrodite could not stand the modern gown, if his theory is correct.

OLD ADAM SHOWS.

Prince Eitel Fritz is a young man with a very determined will, as he has demonstrated on more than one occasion. He inherits it from his father, who is devotedly attached to him. Usually the Kaiser and Prince Eitel Fritz get along well together, but some times old Adam will show, and the Emperor, who is a model father, as well as a masterful monarch, has to lay down the law and apply it with firmness. While the Crown Prince was still very young he was gazetted to a regiment and given his uniform as an officer. Master Eitel Fritz at once insisted that he, too, should be given "pretty clothes" like his elder brother. When told that he would get the "pretty clothes" as soon as he grew old enough to wear them, he gave a very successful imitation of infantile military mutiny. This occurred while the imperial family was at breakfast. The Kaiser ordered the obstreperous infant to "arrest." Prince Eitel Fritz was told to crawl under the table and stay there. He stayed. When told that he might reappear, out he came with nothing on but his shirt. "If I cannot have the pretty clothes, I'll have no clothes at all," he told his father, who could hardly keep from laughing. He got the uniform; also a spanking.

The influence which healthy sports have upon the human body, stimulating the vital organs, developing muscle and bone, is receiving study at a sports laboratory conducted by the Charlottenburg municipal authorities. It is the intention of the committee in charge to give particular attention to he effects which various forms of exercise have upon growing children and to pave the way for the curing of organic and other ailments by suitable outdoor games instead of by the use of drugs and the lancet.

The German surgeons and physicians are noted for their liberality and enlightenment and they are quoted by several conservative journals in a friendly attitude towards the suggestion. Of course exercise cures, like everything else, have their limitations. But a glance at any group of professional or highly trained amateur athletes is enough to convince that running, jumping, cycling, weight throwing, etc., all have their distinct effects upon the distribution of vitality, and it follows that they can be used with advantage to repair defects which disease, or neglect, may inflict.

Kaiser or common-rank confers no privileges in the German courts. A case which recently came before the supreme tribunal in Leipsic arising out of a dispute as to the rights and powers of landlord and tenant caused a great deal of interest and not a little amusement. The particular landlord was none other than Emperor William, who is making numerous improvements on his Danzig estate. His Majesty had trouble in bringing one of his tenants to his views, especially when he wanted the tenant to bear a share in the cost of putting up buildings in keeping with the general character of the property. Opposition is sweet sauce to His Majesty. He insisted upon his ideas. The tenant was no less stubborn, so the matter came into the courts. First, the Kaiser won. The tenant appealed and won the second round. The Kaiser appealed in his turn and the Supreme Court decided against him. He has shown himself a good loser by carrying out the improvements himself and footing the bill for legal expenses outside of the costs allowed the victor tenant by the Supreme Court judges.

CHOOSING A HUSBAND.

Frenchman Advises Young Women to Go Slow and Study Their Suitor, as He Is Usually a Delicious Liar.

[London Standard:] Mgr. Bolo, in his lecture addressed to young men and women, said that exceptional beauty is not to be despised, but requires to be linked with moral value, for the one only attracts, while the other retains. Mgr. Bolo was also very decided as to the worth of housekeeping qualities, and lamented over the families where the servants broke and stole and the husband paid, while the wife was turning the fashion shops inside out. My advice on the choice of a husband implied long engagements, which he evidently approves.

"While he is your fiance he is the most delicious liar, so do not marry him till you know him well. Keep your confidence for after marriage, you will always have too much before. Watch your fiance well, for in big things men always show themselves, as they would fain appear, but in little ones such as they really are. And do not be in a hurry to marry, at all costs."

Then came some amusing illustrations, such as how one young girl would never marry a man unless he wore an overcoat with a tight waist, and another must have a husband named Gaston. As a matter of fact, nine out of ten French girls of any social position have still very little to say as to the choice of a husband, and Mgr. Bolo's remarks addressed to mothers and relatives were more to the point.

Diogenes searched for a man with a lantern and he compared too many French mothers to the old sage with always a lantern in their hands. He was also severe upon the packs of matrimonial agencies and friends of the family, and on the systematic chase after a husband that goes on at fashionable resorts.

"But," he added, "good husbands are not caught like trout at every cast of the fly, and the intrepid offer of oneself is not without danger to modesty." This excellent priest, and man of the world, as he showed himself to be, had no objection to the honest artifices of the toilette, though he refrained from specifying where the line should be drawn between honest and dishonest artifice, but he dislikes powder and paint, for "game flies before the dress of the hunter, and the rat smells the trap under too tasty a morsel of lard."

EDUCATIONAL NOTES.

The Chicago Board of Education is divided over the question of the teaching of sex hygiene in the city schools. Dean Walter T. Sumner, chairman of the sex hygiene committee, has urged the teaching of the subject in the high school, but at a private conference the majority of the board voted against the proposition, but a compromise was effected by a decision to an appropriation of $2500 for giving instruction to the parents at meetings in the public school halls. The debate upon the subject is said to have been keen, but the end has not been reached as at least one member who was absent at the conference, objects to this substitute proposition on the ground that the board has no right to spend money for the teaching of adults, and the action of the board has been referred to the attorney of the board for an opinion.

It was proposed by the board that $1000 should be used during the present school year in securing physicians to give two lectures to parents in schools to be selected by the committee on sex hygiene.

The educational interests in the South are much encouraged by the statistics of the census of 1910, according to the Knoxville Journal and Tribune. "One fact shown by the census of 1910 serves to emphasize what was accomplished in the decade ending with that year. While the population of continental United States was about 16,000,000 greater in 1910 than it was in 1900, the number of illiterates in the country was not so many in the latter as in the former year by three-quarters of a million. The greater ratio of the decrease was in the Southern States.

"If asked to tell how much money was spent in the Southern States for the promotion of public education in the year 1911, not many readers could tell. But nearly every one would be surprised to know that it amounted to the great sum of $74,000,000. This shows an increase since the year 1880 of more than 500 per cent. And the amount named does not include what was spent by privately endowed institutions.

But the millions of money being spent does not tell the whole story. The teachers engaged in the schools, as a rule, are a great improvement over those engaged thirty years ago. There are more normal schools, and facilities have been and are being provided for giving instruction to young men and women who propose to adopt teaching as a profession, and in these schools special attention is being given that fits those who engage in the profession for their important tasks.

"And we have about reached a point where the masses of the people do not complain at being taxed for the support of the schools, but they clamor for it. There is not a Legislature in any State in the South that is not being importuned to make generous provision for the support of the schools. Public sentiment is behind the schools, and public sentiment makes law. When another census is taken in the year 1920 it will show a very gratifying reduction in the number of illiterates in the South."

"Moonlight schools" are a feature of the educational work being done in the mountainous districts of Kentucky. The inspiration for these schools was the pathetic appeal made by a woman 86 years old that she be taught to read so that she might have the comfort of her Bible before she died.

The request was made to one of the young teachers who had been educated in the Hindman school, located forty-five miles from a railroad station. This teacher then persuaded the other teachers in the poorly-equipped public schools to consent to conduct night classes in their schools for men and women. As these school sessions have to be held on moonlight nights, in order for those wishing to attend to be able to travel over the rough paths and roads, they have been termed "moonlight" schools. One of the principal influences attributed to education of the mountain people has been the elimination of early marriages. Many of the uneducated mountaineers allowed their daughters to marry as young as 11 or 12 years of age. When given the opportunity to attend school, girls defer marrying until they are fully grown.

THE RAVAGING MISSOURI.

Cannot be Held in Place by Three Hundred Boat Cars Loaded With Stone, Dumped Into It.

[Omaha Bee:] The Missouri River continues to cut away the banks and low lands in Iowa near Folsom and almost directly opposite Bellevue. The Burlington had a large force of men at work trying to stop the damage, but efforts proved fruitless. The work consisted of dumping into the river 300 condemned box cars loaded down with scrap iron, and bags filled with sand and rock.

So strong was the current where it set in against the shore that these cars loaded with tons of iron and stone were picked up as if they were blocks of wood and whirled away from the points where it was intended they should be sunk.

In several places the current cut away portions of several farms, one man losing an orchard of forty acres, the trees in which were from a foot to eighteen inches in diameter. They were undermined and carried into the river. Erosion is going on very rapidly. The land is underlaid with sand and as this is washed out, the soil above drops away in great tracts, as much as five and ten acres at a time.

The trakcs of the Burlington were several hundred feet back from the former bank of the stream. For three miles the river has cut up as far as these tracks and a long section of the roadbed has dropped out of sight.

A mile east of Folsom there is an old creek bed that is now quite a large-sized stream. It empties into the Missouri nearly opposite the south lane of Cass county, Nebraska. Between where the cutting is now going on and thisc creek the land is level and low. Fears are expressed that if the river cuts through into the creek the channel of the river will follow the cut and the main current will move over from two to five miles east, leaving Plattsmouth, Nebraska City and several other towns inland. In this event it would leave the Burlington's bridge high and dry over a sand bar with the river running eight or ten miles east of Pacific Junction.

Famous In a Day For the Beauty of Her Hands and Arms

A Free Prescription That Does Its Work Over Night—You Can Prepare It at Your Own Home.

"It's my own discovery, and it takes just one night to get such marvelous results," answers Miss Grace Benson, when her friends asked her about the marvelous change in the appearance of her hands and arms. "You can do the same thing if you will take my advice," she says. "I feel it my duty to tell every woman what this wonderful prescription did for me. Just think of it! It did all this in a night.

It affords me a world of pleasure to tell anyone else just how such remarkable results were brought about. I give you, absolutely free, the identical prescription which has removed every defect from my hands and arms. You can form no idea of the marvelous change it will make in just one application. The prescription, which can be prepared at your own home, is as follows:

Go to any drug store and buy an ounce bottle of Kulux Compound. Pour the entire bottle of Kulux into a two-ounce bottle, add quarter ounce of witch hazel and fill with water. Mix this at home, then you know that it is the genuine article. Apply night and morning. The first application will astonish you. It makes the skin transparent, removes all discolorations such as tan, sun spots, freckles and coarse pores, roughness and wrinkles, and, in fact, every blemish the hands and arms are heir to. It also produces a marvelous effect on the neck and shoulders.

If the neck is discolored from being exposed to the sun or from wearing high collars, this prescription will immediately relieve that condition. No matter how rough and ungainly the hands and arms, or what abuses they have had through hard work and exposure to sun and wind, this prescription will work a wonderful transformation in twelve hours at the most. Thousands of women are using this prescription with just the same results than I have had."

HIGH OFFICERS ARE NAMED.

Witness Says Others Signed When He Refused.

Bares Alleged Espee Secret in Federal Trial.

Factional Fight Causes Big Men Much Trouble.

The lease given by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company to the Kern Trading and Oil Company was made operative through the signatures of W. F. Herrin, the general counsel of the former, and President C. H. Markham of the latter company over the protest of Charles W. Eberlein, acting land agent of the Espee, after he had refused to sign the document, according to testimony given yesterday by Eberlein before Special Commissioner Longley in the hearing of the suit brought by the government against the railroad company to declare non-operative patents to alleged oil-bearing land in the Elk Hills county.

The witness testified that on recommendation of his assistant, George A. Sims, he had made an affidavit that all the lands in the lease were non-mineral in character and that he therefore opposed the operations of E. T. Dumble, consulting geologist of the Southern Pacific, who, with a force of men had been picking out alleged oil-bearing sections with a view to having them patented by the company.

Eberlein argued in defense of his course that if oil were found it would show him up in a bad light and make it impossible for the road to secure patents on land declared to be non-mineral. He said he could not understand why a company like the Kern Trading and Oil Company desired to lease land that according to the reports of the experts did not contain oil.

REFUSED TO SIGN.

The witness said he had prepared a list of the unpatented and unsurveyed land in the Elk Hills that was subject to entry and that after repeated efforts to secure his signature to the lease he had finally refused to do so, and that then the instrument became operative by the signatures of Herrin and Markham and was spread on the records of the road by Auditor C. H. Segar.

The lease embraced land in the Coalings, Sunset, McKittrick, Midway, Buena Vista and Elk Hills districts.

The hearing closed temporarily yesterday, with the examination of Eberlein. The cross-examination of the witness will be resumed in San Francisco June 1 and another sitting will follow here when the case of the government will finally close. The railroad company will then have forty days within which to present its evidence to Special Commissioner Longley.

It was announced yesterday at the close of the Eberlein testimony, that after the visit to San Francisco, the government would call for the books and papers of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company and the Kern Trading and Oil Company with a view to determining, if possible, the truth of the allegation in the government's complaint that the companies are fictitious. Officers of these companies will be subpoenaed to produce the documents desired, and it is not believed there will be any disposition to resist the processes of the court.

TWO FACTIONS.

In the examination of Eberlein today it developed that the witness had been placed in charge of the land business by what was known as the New York office of the road, and that testimony developed that there was much friction between Eberlein and the officers in San Francisco. It was shown that in the management of the affairs of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company there are two opposing forces, one known as the New York crowd, headed by Vice-President Cornish, and the San Francisco contingent, with Herrin, Markham and others in control. Dumble and Eberlein had been hired by the New York end of the combination, with instructions to go to San Francisco and get the forces in the saddle there, with the result that he was in control of the parent corporation, figuratively, almost from the time he entered the service in December, 1905, to June 1, 1908. He was given seemingly to the affiliation of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company and the Kern Trading and Oil Company, not only the signatures in the lease, but the further fact that the lists of directors and stockholders were almost identical. The Kern Trading and Oil Company was organized, it was seemingly indicated, by those in the management of the parent corporation, for the alleged object of securing the holding company valuable leasehold lands, some of the best oil lands in California.

One of the features of the examination of Eberlein was the showing of efforts that were made to preserve letters, telegrams and other memoranda concerned in the case. They were nearly all copies of the original documents, the originals having been destroyed almost beyond recognition as the result of the fire in San Francisco. The Kern Trading and Oil Company was in yellow and brown tissue paper pasted on a white background, the original looking like a fine manuscript exhumed by some archeologist from the ruins of Pompeii.

Eberlein testified that the work of destroying as far as possible the records of the office after the fire had attracted the attention of the force in charge for months. He had caused thousands of acres to be listed as "non-mineral, government land," he said, when the lessees heard of the fire and that the records of the office had been practically destroyed, a few of them changed their contracts, "and we had much trouble on leases."

BOARD OF HARBOR COMMISSIONERS ABOUT THE...

But Board of Public Works Will Report and Recommend Further Action—Distributing Mobile Highway Bridge Being Large Subject.

The Board of Harbor Commissioners met twice yesterday, and in reply of the Board of Public Works to its request that it provide for the immediate construction of a twenty-foot strip of land on Fourteenth street, Front street, San Pedro, for a temporary road to the harbor boulevard, to be used until the permanent boulevard at sea level in front can be acquired, the Board decided that it would be in vain, for no action would be forthcoming from the Public Works.

The chairman, A. J. Waterhouse, in San Diego, and Commissioners Chaffee and Humphreys, who were present, would take no action until they returned. It is rumored, however, that the Harbor Board, which has some say in the matter, with the plan to extend the harbor improvement district for the purpose of constructing a boulevard this way, will have a meeting for that purpose, and that this matter will be taken up in its communication to the Railroad Commission.

There are now two propositions in regard to the harbor improvement. An initiative petition, fathered by the Socialist Club and containing 1500 signatures, asks for the passage of an ordinance that provides for the completion of improvements on Front streets, including sidewalks, curbs, gutters, curbs and the entire street surface to be paid for out of the general fund for harbor improvement fund. The Harbor Commissioners' plan, which has the approval of the City Council, the Mayor, is that of improving the twenty-foot roadway on Front streets.

Proponents of the initiative petition declare a large portion of the streets mentioned already sufficiently improved, and that there is no justice in asking property owners in San Pedro to pay for improvements in these streets when the improvement is for the general benefit of access to the harbor from all parts of the city. Opponents to the initiative petition declare that the roadways on the streets mentioned are in such condition that trucks is sufficient for the present traffic. The only entrance required, and that the improvement of the streets is for the direct benefit to the water frontage and should be paid for by an assessment district.

An alternative proposition, however, has been given consideration, is the boring of a tunnel through the hills from Pennington slide, to have connection with business district of San Pedro, with thence reaching by a ramp to the Miner fill and other points on the water front. There is some talk that this may be the solution, that the Board of Public Works will advance. Members of the Harbor Board declined to say what their action would be or what action they would take.

It is estimated that the cost of the demolition and purchase of property required Southern Pacific right of way for the harbor boulevard will amount to several millions of dollars, the latter estimate it as high as $6,000,000, that this tunnel proposition can be carried through for less than $1,000,000.

BRUISED BY COLLISION.

Mrs. J. B. Smith, wife of a Pacific Electric car conductor, was the victim of a slight but peculiar accident yesterday afternoon, which occurred almost in front of her home on Twenty-fifth avenue near Pico street. Mrs. Smith had just stepped on car No. 334, in charge of Motorman Hovatin and Conductor Nar when a work car, in charge of Motorman Johnson and Conductor Ries, ran into it. The force of the collision was sufficient to throw the rear end of the passenger car off the track. Mrs. Smith was caught between the two cars and the rear seat, receiving minor bruises. The crew of the work car train said the accident was caused by the dropping of a brakeshoe.

The lease given by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company to the Kern Trading and Oil Company was made possible through the signatures of [illegible] F. Herrin, the general counsel of the former, and President C. H. Markham of the latter company over the signature of Charles W. Eberlein, acting land agent of the Espee, after he had refused to sign the document, according to testimony given yesterday by Marion Biggs before Special Commissioner Long-ley in the hearing of the suit brought by the government to compel the railroad company to deliver the respective patents to alleged oil lands had in the Elk Hills [illegible].

OPENS ASSESSMENT ROLLS.

City Assessor's Force Begins Enrollment of City's Taxable Property. May Place Arbitrary Valuations.

Deputy City Assessor Conrad began to write the assessment roll for Los Angeles, yesterday. The seventy men who have been doing field work have about completed their work.

The Assessor says that many persons have neglected to turn in their personal property lists, and he states that only five days more will be allowed in which this can be done. After that, arbitrary assessments will be made by the City Assessor, and these will stand.

The assessment rolls must be completed and turned over to the City Council by the first Monday in July. A day force of forty persons and a night force of from twenty-five to thirty will be kept on this work until the rolls are closed.

Merchant Victimized by Telephone Trick—Swindler Gets Hat and Suit of Clothes.

Jacob Salzman, clothier at West Sixth and South Main streets, was victimized yesterday by a smooth-talking young man. Salzman was told over the telephone, that a young man would call in half an hour and he was instructed to give him "everything he wanted."

A young man called and asked if a telephone message had been received. When informed in the affirmative the young man fitted himself out from shoes to hat. Nothing was too good for him. Later Salzman ascertained that he had been victimized.

HARBOR COMMISSION ANXIOUS ABOUT TRUCK ROAD.

But Board of Public Works Makes No Report and Two Sessions Are Fruitless—Distinct Plans for Automobile Highway Proposed, Involving Large Sums.

The Board of Harbor Commissioners met twice yesterday to receive the reply of the Board of Public Works to its request that steps be taken to provide for the improvement of a twenty-foot strip on Pacific avenue, Fourteenth street and San Pedro street, San Pedro, as an auto-truck road to the harbor frontage, to be used until the permanent harbor boulevard at sea level along the water front can be acquired. The meetings were in vain, for no report was forthcoming from the Board of Public Works.

The chairman, A. A. Hubbard, is in San Diego, and Commissioners Chaffee and Humphreys decided to take no action until Hubbard returns. It is rumored about the City Hall, however, that the Public Works Board, which has not been in sympathy with the plan to use any of the harbor improvement funds for the purpose of constructing this roadway, will have a new plan to propose, and that this may be embodied in its communication to the Harbor Commission.

There are now two distinct propositions in regard to this proposed improvement. An initiative petition, fathered by the socialistic Alembie Club and containing more than 7000 signatures, asks for the adoption of an ordinance that provides for the complete improvement of these streets, including sidewalks, granite gutters, curbs and the paving of the entire street surface to be paid for out of the general fund or harbor improvement fund. The Harbor Commissioners' plan, which has the approval of the City Council and the Mayor, is that of improving only a twenty-foot roadway through these streets.

Proponents of the initiative petition declare a large portion of the streets mentioned already is permanently improved, and that there is no justice in asking property owners in San Pedro to pay for any change in these streets when the improvement is for the general public's access to the harbor frontage. Opponents to the initiative petition declare that the roadway for auto trucks is sufficient for the temporary entrance required, and that any further improvement of the streets is a direct benefit to the owners of abutting properties and should be paid for by an assessment district.

An alternative proposition which, however, has been given but little consideration, is the boring of a tunnel through the hills from the Wilmington side, to have egress in the business district of San Pedro and thence reaching by a roadway to the Miner fill and other points along the water front. There is some conjecture that this may be the proposition that the Board of Public Works will advance. Members of the board declined to say what their proposition would be or what action they would take.

It is estimated that the cost of condemnation and purchase of the required Southern Pacific lands for the harbor boulevard will amount to several millions of dollars—some estimate it as high as $6,000,000—and that this tunnel proposition could be carried through for less than $2,000,000.

The force of the collision was sufficient to wreck the rear end of the passenger car. Mrs. Smith was caught between the sill and the rear seat. She sustained minor bruises. CHILDREN GET CONSTIPATED JUST LIKE GROWN-UPS DO.

If Your Little One Is Cross, Feverish, Tongue Coated, Give "Syrup of Figs" to Clean the Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

Look at the tongue, Mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's insides, the stomach, liver and 30 feet of bowels are clogged up with putrifying waste matter and need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When your child is listless, drooping, pale, doesn't sleep soundly or eat heartily or is cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, sore throat, or is full of cold, give a teaspoonful of Syrup of Figs, and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile will gently move on and out of its little bowels, without nausea, griping or weakness, and you surely will have a well, happy and smiling child again shortly.

With Syrup of Figs you are not drugging your children. Being composed entirely of luscious figs, senna and aromatics it cannot be harmful, besides they dearly love its delicious taste.

SHOPPERS OF CITY SPLIT.

tanical in their primness. They come one after the other and stop before the great establishments for shopping.

MOTOR TRADE AWAITED.

As a rule they are expected, as they have telephoned ahead to the management to have a certain functionary ready to make note of their wants. The functionary—generally the most astute salesman in the establishment—is waiting near the entrance and espies the particular motor as it glides up. He is at the door in a second, and as he is well known to the occupants he enthusiastically tells them of a delightful secret—which generally is that some certain gown, frock, cloak, wrap or hat has just arrived from Paris or New York and been uncrated this very morning and as he knows perfectly that it is the very thing for madame's or madamoiselle's particular statuesque beauty or coloring he has kept it secret from the prying eyes of the vulgar rich awaiting the arrival of madame.

He leads the way hastily to some special nook and the sacred article is displayed. If it happens to suit or fit or look good it is ordered sent home and the price is not asked. This motor trade always has accounts with the big stores, which are settled either monthly or quarterly. The morning's shopping is always a serious matter of business. There is little or no trifling among this class. They know exactly what they want before they start from home and they know exactly where they can get it, and that the house they are dealing with has a reputation which they feel makes it unnecessary to ask questions outside of their liking for a certain object. The time spent in the stores is generally short, as there is always the day—long list of social affairs to attend to. And the motor trade must be home in time to dress for luncheon and then plunge into the afternoon's round of teas, bridge or matinee.

This is the time of day also when the most delightfully alluring young ladies from the most exclusive old families of the city come dashing madly down to attend to their very important shopping before the rush begins and so that they can have left as much of the day as possible. The morning hours of Broadway are one long parade of swiftly-moving, costly motors sometimes driven by the young ladies themselves, but usually by chauffeurs or elder brothers, who sit outside and fume while the feminine part of the family makes its selections.

It is the hour, also, when father generally comes to his office. So it is a splendid time for the young lady of the family to drive him to his business and wheedle something extra out of him before she starts on her shopping round.

The stores all like this period of the day, and their keenest efforts are put forth to meet every want of this class. Purchases are heavy and quickly made, and the accounts are settled with clockwork regularity.

This delightful onslaught upon the mercantile houses generally ceases abruptly at 11:30 o'clock, which leaves just thirty minutes to get home and thirty minutes for dress before luncheon.

THEY CARRY BUNDLES.

Following in the wake of this Motor Trade come the Bundle Carriers, who hold full sway over the shopping district up to 3:30 o'clock, when they rush to catch the electric cars for their long ride home in time to cook dinner for the head of the house when he returns from his work.

The hours for the Bundle Carriers are fraught with the most frenzied work of the day for the stores. Here is shopping with a capital S. They come in platoons and regiments and swoop into the wide entrances of the department stores like an invading army. They generally paw over the counters from one end to the other, and their dearest mecca is the remnant counter where the odds and ends are piled high, and where the quick-sale cut in price of 1 or 3 cents stares them in the face.

They always pay cash, and they make the clerks fully earn their money before they get what they are after. They travel from store to store getting prices on certain articles and after they are through often put off until tomorrow or next week, the actual purchasing. It requires generally two very interesting days for the purchase of an article of any value by the Bundle Carriers.

Their name is legion, however, and the greatest shops and mercantile establishments in the West, which are on Broadway, are constructed and operated with the direct idea of interesting and holding this class of trade for it is good and invariably carries away what it buys.

The third, last and most picturesque class of the day's shoppers are the members of the "Peacock Parade." This uses shopping as an excuse to promenade up and down Broadway between 3:30 and 5 o'clock. Here the most gorgeous afternoon gowns are shown, and the most picturesque picture hats displayed. Ostrich feathers that hang far over the wearer's shoulders wave in the breeze. Frocks and gowns of silks and satins of a hundred shades shimmer in sunshine and shadow. The most beautiful women in the West can be seen on Broadway between 3:30 and 5 o'clock. They know their charms, and they are taking the sun and air in an atmosphere of busy life that appeals to them. They use the shops as the merest pretext for coming down town and parading. The matinee does not answer this purpose fully. It keeps one closed up in a dark house the greater part of the afternoon, and who can see a frock or a gown that is just rippingly splendid in the interior of a theater?

The shops understand this thoroughly and look forward to the poorest hours of their day—yet perhaps the busiest. These gay young women do really buy something, but not very much, and they drop into store after store looking over and trying on the latest creations. Occasionally they will purchase something irresistible, but of the entire three classes of shoppers these "peacocks" are the fussiest. They have the necessary funds, but they are out for a spectacle and not to buy, and when they do buy they take a full day to it and do it right.

EVOLUTION.

The clerks and managers of the stores have watched these classes of buyers for years and they have seen certain ones rise from the Bundle Carriers into the Peacock Paraders, and even up to the Motor Trade with its hall mark of quality. During a busy day they will point out Mrs. Brown-Jones, who was a Bundle Carrier a few years ago, and insisted on the exact price of every article every afternoon. Later, they will tell you, she began to shop between 3:30 and 5 o'clock and wear Paris gowns while she was doing it. Then they will point out a tall, slender young matron with heavy, wavy chestnut hair who has just entered the shop wearing a severely-plain jacket suit of the very softest and richest texture, and a neat turban, or perhaps she is sans hat and has just slipped hurriedly from her motor. She buys rapidly and quietly and has both the bill and the goods sent home. They will tell you how she was a bundle carrier several years ago while she was teaching school, and how she cleared the Peacock Paraders at one jump and landed into the Motor Trade class, where she has ever since held her own quiet way.

They have the opposite tale to tell sometimes, but not often. That is the Bundle Carrier who comes to the shop during the morning hours when the motor traders are in force, does her little purchasing hurriedly, and takes her bundles with her. They will whisper to you that several years ago she was one of the motor traders, but through reverses has been reduced in circumstances, but still clings to the proper hours for shopping.

WANT LIBRARY SITE.

East Side Residents Petition to Have Land at Workman and Avenue Twenty-six Condemned.

A largely-signed petition was filed with the City Clerk yesterday, asking that steps be taken to condemn the land at the southeast corner of Avenue Twenty-six and Workman street for a branch library site. It is said that this property can be secured for about $7750.

Some weeks ago the Streets and Boulevards Committee of the City Council had before it this proposition and also one to condemn land for the same purpose on North Broadway, in the vicinity of Avenue Twenty. The committee decided to let the proponents of each proposition enter the field and to select the site for which the most frontage was signed. The time for the filing of these petitions expired yesterday. The City Engineer will have to check up the petitions to determine the actual frontage represented.

PERUVIAN CHANCELLOR.

Prof. Rafael M. Gallegos received word yesterday afternoon from the Peruvian government that he has been appointed Chancellor of the Peruvian Consulate in Los Angeles. The notice came by telegraph from Dr. German L. Martinez of Lima, Minister of Foreign Affairs. He will enter upon his duties tomorrow in the offices of the Peruvian Consulate in the Pacific Electric building. Owing to the increase in trade and commercial relations between Peru and Los Angeles, that government decided to place a chancellor in this city to attend to the growing demands of the consulate. Prof. Gallegos has resided in this city eight years.

REFORMING THE PATENT SYSTEM.

ATTEMPT TO ALTER THE PRESENT PROTECTIVE LAW.

Opponents of Proposed Legislation Are Asking the Congressional Committee for Time, During Which They May Organize the Opposition Movement.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—[Special to the Journal of Commerce:] It has become evident, even within the short space of time which has elapsed since the opening hearings by the House Committee on Patents, that manufacturers, who are safeguarded under the present patent law are determined to make every effort to "hold up" the proposed bill. Floods of telegrams asking for delay have already poured in upon the chairman of the Patent Committee, and it has been insisted that no action should be taken until time had been obtained to organize the resistance to the proposed measure. This is the usual method of opposing any patent legislation and has been practiced for years past.

One of the first persons to visit Chairman Oldfield of the Patent Committee has been an agent in the employ of the United Shoe Machinery Company. This man, in a long talk, sought to explain to the chairman the great benefit of the methods followed by United Shoe machinery and the undesirability of the proposed legislation. The reply was a request that the head men in the United Shoe Machinery Company should appear before the committee and answer certain straightforward questions about the way in which the concern was organized and in which its patented machinery is leased to persons who want to use it but who are compelled to buy supplies from the company at exorbitant prices thereafter. This suggestion was not received with very great enthusiasm and there seems to be no prospect that either Mr. Winslow or any of the other men behind the scenes will turn up here. Very much the same attitude is adopted by others who are in a like situation. The disposition seems to be to put forward small men of various kinds from different parts of the country to bear the brunt of the first of cross-examination. Among those who have been put on the stand thus far have been persons who evidently had only a minor interest in the legislation as compared with the "big" men who are pulling the wires and whose mission it is to defeat the legislation in question.

OPPONENTS TERRORIZED.

It is not an easy matter to get men to take the witness stand in large numbers in favor of the bill. Some of those who are in the city for the very purpose of urging the legislation state frankly that they do not like to go on the witness stand because they fear the results of their action in so doing. It is their expectation that they will have punishment meted out to them by the large concerns upon which they are more or less obliged to depend for permission to continue in business upon a successful basis. Nevertheless there are a certain number of men already here who have not been completely terrorized and who expect to tell what they know. If these men are to be trusted, the present system of tyranny which exists in connection with the use of patented inventions is a great deal worse in its effects upon business than the most vicious of the tariff duties which are in effect under the Payne-Aldrich law. What they ask is that some conditions shall be arranged so as to permit moderately easy access to inventions which otherwise would either (1) be kept idle and never manufactured at all, or (2) be set at so high a figure and be accompanied with onerous working conditions as to make it as unprofitable to use them as it would be to do the work by hand. Both of these features are provided against in the Oldfield bill, as the result of language inserted at the suggestion of the Commissioners of Patents and very carefully drafted.

CRY OF "HASTE" DROPPED.

It has been a notable fact in the hearings thus far that the twaddle about "hasty legislation" which was indulged in by a good many people at the start has been dropped. An inspection of the bill has convinced a good many who talked in this way that the legislation was not nearly as "hasty" as they would have liked to have it, and that it has been pretty carefully drafted and is likely to stand the test in the courts. Instead of this talk about haste there is now heard the statement that the committee is acing unfairly in seeking to drive the legislation through. This statement has been met by Chairman Oldfield with the announcement that he will hear anybody who wishes to appear before the committee, provided the witnesses will come forward without any delay and will present their argument consecutively, thus avoiding the long gaps between witnesses that are so useful when it is desired to kill time toward the end of a session. The manufacturers who have been telegraphing their protests against prompt action have been advised that if they will come forward at once they will receive all the attention they need. This means that all legitimate argument will be weighed by the committee before doing anything whatever about the bill. Such modifications it is understood, as are proved to e desirable will be made. But the chief object aimed at in the measure—relief from patent tyranny and compulsory working on specified conditions—will not be abandoned, if the statements af the majority members are to be believed.

HOUSE IS HOPELESS.

There is a good deal of reason to believe that the old line patent legislation manipulators who have been appearing here for years past regard the House as well-nigh hopeless on this subject and are inclined to transfer their energies to the other end of the Capitol. An indication of this is seen in the attitude of the bar. Local patent attorneys had announced at the openings of the hearings that they would be on hand in full force to testify against the bill. Not one of them has turned up thus far and few if any have attended the hearings. At the outset Chairman Oldfield telegraphed to a number of patent attorneys that he was about to open hearings. None of them has put in an appearance up to date. Doubtless some of them may come very shortly, but there is every reason to think that their arrival will be pro forma only. The real struggle will evidently occur in the Senate, where there are plenty of beneficiaries of patents or representattves of such beneficiaries.

PLANNING BIG EXHIBIT.

Local Committees Make Arrangements to Entertain National Municipal League in July.

Plans for the entertainment of the delegates to the convention of the National Municipal League, which will be in session in Los Angeles July 8 to 12, are being arranged by local committees. The tentative programme prepared by Secretary Clinton Rogers Woodruff of Philadelphia includes addresses by many of the noted civic and municipal experts in the United States, as well as some prominent Californians.

A civic exhibit is to be displayed at the Normal School from July 3 to 20 to embrace modern ideas in civic work in municipal advancement.

The general committee consists of Rev. Dana W. Bartlett, chairman; George A. Damon, transportation expert; J. B. Lippincott, park commissioner and engineer; J. D. Radford, playground commissionar; A. B. Fleming, harbor commissioner; Myron Hunt, architect; Elmer Gray, architect; Wilbur Cook, landscape architect; Meyer Lissner, member of the Council and National Municipal League, and Florence H. Mills.

Miss Mills is the manager for the exhibition committee and will have direct charge of assembling the exhibits and displaying them at the Normal School. The exhibits will consist of models, graphic representations of ideas, maps, drawings, photographs, books, papers, documents, etc. Stereopticon lectures will be given, and it is likely that motion pictures will be employed for some forms of presentation.

The general subjects include comprehensive city planning, traffic and transportation, terminal facilities, harbors, water supply (including an exhibit by the Aqueduct Board,) street system, parks and boulevards, civic, cultural and social centers, school architecture, open-air school methods, platting of city subdivisions, garden sites, housing, municipal art, health and sanitation, child welfare, civil service, municipal charters and commission form of government, short ballots, municipal taxation systems, municipal efficiency, excess condemnation, civic education and municipal library exhibit.

A large amount of space in the Normal School building is to be devoted to display purposes. The rooms will be appropriately decorated by the committee. The exhibits which have been given in the East have attracted nation-wide attention, and Miss Mills is working to make the local exhibit better than any that ever preceded it. She is receiving the cooperation of municipal and civic organizations, as well as public service concerns, both private and municipal, throughout the United States.

CELEBRATION OF JEWISH WEEK.

The Feast of Weeks to Be Marked by Special Services and Confirmation Ceremony.

Shabuoth, the Feast of Weeks, will be observed at Temple B'nai B'rith on Tuesday evening and Wednesday morning. Rabbi Hecht will officiate at both the services, preaching the festival sermon in the evening, and on Wednesday morning will confirm a class of eight young people, each of the novitiates taking part in the service. Dr. Edelman, president of the congregation, will present the certificates of confirmation, and elaborate musical programmes will characterize the entire celebration of the feast.

The feast itself marks the period between the departure of the Children of Israel from Egypt and their arrival at Mt. Sinai, and has both an agricultural and historical aspect.

The choir will consist of Miss Celia Davison, soprano; Mrs. Nuncie S. Bittman, alto; Roland Paul, tenor; Edwin House, baritone; Julius Krans, violinist; Erskine H. Mead, organist and director. On Tuesday evening C. Hayden Jones will render an aria from "The Creation."

ARTIFICIAD GOLD POSSIBLE.

The Discovery of Radium and Its Spontaneous Decomposition Has Revived Belief in Transmutation.

[London Telegraph:] The disclaimer recently issued by Sir William Ramsay, in which he definitely contradicts the rumor that he has reported favorably on a process of manufacturing gold, shows that speculators are already taking advantages of the fact that modern scientific opinion regards the transmutation of metals as an open possibility. The gradual disappearance of skepticism in this matter was explained to one of our representatives by an eminent scientist.

"The absurdity of a transmutation of metals was adopted as a scientific dogma in the eighteenth century," he said, "but since 1860 certain things that have been discovered have shown that the dogma was premature, just as it would still be premature to say that transmutation will ultimately be achieved. In 1869 the Russian chemist Mendeleeff arranged the elements in the order of their atomic weight, and from this arrangement conceived the hypothesis that they had all been evolved from some common original substance. For the elements thus arranged fell into families, each member having similar but accentuated properties as the atomic weight increased, and therefore the old idea that the simple elementary substances stood absolutely apart one from another had to be abandoned. The hypothesis that an unknown substance or element, provisionally called 'protyle,' underlies their differences, was suggested to account for the affinities.

"Now this was a considerable revolution in opinion. The discovery of oxygen in 1774 had overthrown many conceptions previously entertained by scientists, and it had come to be supposed that the search for the transmuting 'philosopher's stone,' which occupied the medieval alchemists, was an entire delusion. This 'philosopher's stone' means some substance by means of which the elements, and indeed everything, could be turned into gold, and though probably a good deal of honest research was undertaken in connection with the idea, all sorts of frauds accompanied its exploitation.

"But since the whole method of medieval science had been generally discredited—whether accompanied by honest, or by dishonest experiments—the revival of the 'original substance' idea in 1869 was a very considerable revolution in opinion. However, the idea of artificial gold might not have entered the minds of modern speculators at all seriously if radium had remained undiscovered. But it was found that radium undergoes a sort of spontaneous decomposition, and that among the emanations which it gives off a totally different element, namely, helium, is included. Here, then, within the last decade science has been brought to admit by facts that a spontaneous transmutation of elements does take place in nature. Therefore scientists can no longer deny that the transmutation of such elements as lead, gold, copper, nickel, platinum, silver, mercury, cadmium, and so on, and even the creation of artificial gold are possibilities of future experiment.

"However, I think one may say that scientists still maintain the improbability of this achievement, although the state of scientific knowledge as it stands at the moment seems to oppose no insuperable barrier to it. But one may speculate whether a universal method of transmutation would be discovered. It appears to me that we shall conceivably be able to note affinities between certain elements, and even to transform one into another. But the idea that gold will be the first artificial element to be constructed is probably a delusion, even if it is not a fraudulena delusion. A universal process of transmutation would throw our whole economic life into the most extraordinary quandary, and the difficulties created by the discovery of a way to make gold artificially would alone be very disastrous. But the other minor transmutations, not bearing so directly upon our standard of values, might be scientific benefits without becoming the basis of too profitable exploitations."

MALES OF VOTING AGE.

Total Number Is Twenty-seven Millions, an Increased Percentage Compared With Ten Years Ago.

A preliminary statement giving for continental United States, for each geographic division, and for each State and Territory, the distribution of the male population 21 years of age and over, according to color, nativity and parentage and, in the case of foreign-born whites, a further distinction as to citizenship, as shown by the returns of the thirteenth decennial census, taken as of April 15, 1910, has been issued by Director Durand of the Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce and Labor. The statistics were prepared under the supervision of William C. Hunt, chief statistician for population in the Census Bureau, and are subject to revision.

The potential voting strength of the nation and of each State and Territory is expressed by the number of its males 21 years of age and over, excluding the foreign-born who have not become naturalized, but by this is not meant the actual number of voters in the several States and Territories. It represents, rather, the number of males who from the standpoint of age alone are eligible to vote, aside from any qualifications based upon education, length of residence, or considerations of a like nature imposed by the national or State government. The foreign-born whites are distributed as naturalized, having taken out first papers, alien, or unknown.

In 1910 the number of males of voting age in continental United States was 26,999,151, or 39.4 per cent of the total population, as compared with 21,134,299, or 37.3 per cent. of the total population in 1910.

Of the foreign-born white males of voting age, 45.7 per cent. are naturalized, 8.6 per cent. have taken out first papers, 34.1 per cent. are alien, and 11.7 per cent. unknown. The equivalent figures for 1900 are as follows: Naturalized, 58.0 per cent.; first papers taken out, 9.4 per cent.; alien, 15.7 per cent.; and unknown, 14.9 per cent.

ANCIENT CHINESE BOOKS.

Orientals Used Engraved Copper Types—Books Printed in Eleventh Century Are in British Museum.

[Springfield Republican:] The earliest printed books of the western world, though collectors prize them, are mere infants beside some Chinese books in an exhibition now going on at the British Museum. One volume, a translation of a part of the Abhidharmasastra, dates from 1099, and the ink shows no sign of fading, its exceptional permanence being attributed by experts to an admixture of camphor. How far back the art of printing existed in China is not known with precision, but it did not come into general use until the T'ang dynasty, A. D. 618-906. Even in the use of movable type, China has a clear priority, for this invention was made in the eleventh century by Pi Sheng. That it did not come into general use was due simply to the nature of the Chinese language and the enormous number of characters required to represent it. The great encyclopedia issued in the eighteenth century was printed from some 200,000 engraved copper types. It is four times as big as the Encyclopedia Britannica, and profusely illustrated. Till quite recently it was believed that color printing originated in Japan, between 1710 and 1739, but the London exhibition contains several good Chinese color prints dating back to the latter part of the seventeenth century. And yet the Chinese are accused of a lack of originality.

Absorbs Skin, Chases Wrinkles—Young Again

"The shock at beholding myself in the glass after nine long weeks abed, nearly caused a relapse," writes Emily Colson in Home Queen. "The faded face, with its lines of illness and worry, seemed thirty years older. Now, I thought, I could not attend my chum's wedding, eleven days off, to which I had looked hopefully forward.

"She herself came to my rescue. She procured an ounce of mercolized wax, which she bade me spread on like cold cream, washing it off next morning. Applied nightly, this appare tly absorbed the withered skin, so gently I experienced no discomfort. Upon the wedding morn the pallid complexion had entirely given way to one of youthful color and loveliness.

"And there wasn't a wrinkle. This due to a wash lotion made by dissolving an ounce of saxolite in a half pint witch hazel. The daily face bath had dispersed every line."

VALENTINE MONORAIL

With Such a Road "Los Angeles to the Sea" Will Accomplish These Results:

The running time will be cut down to 15 minutes or less.

Because of lower maintenance and operating expenses and increased traffic the round-trip fare rate can be reduced from 50c to 25c.

Such a reduction in time and fares will quickly double, treble and quadruple the passenger travel between Los Angeles and the seaside vicinities.

Every outlying property along the line of such a road will be enhanced in value very materially.

The construction of one such line will be quickly followed by the construction of other such lines reaching to all surrounding suburban districts, with a rapid, safe service, and these lines will be the most important factor in building the population of Los Angeles to 1,000,000 during the coming few years.

Grade crossings with their constant menace to human life will be eliminated.

Such a line will be, we believe, the most profitable electric line of similar length in the world.

Advance Engineering Principles Responsible

The result briefly detailed above will be accomplished through the employment of advanced railroad engineering principles. Valentine Monorail cars will not be interfered with by street traffic, as the roadbeds will be elevated, hence eliminating grade crossings. The roadbeds will be constructed of reinforced concrete, and will be the finest ever conceived. The maintenance cost of such a roadbed will be only a fraction of the maintenance cost of present type roads. The cars will be propelled by electricity, and the Valentine direct power motor wheels will make easily attainable speeds of from 100 to 150 miles per hour, at an extremely low cost. Indeed, every item of maintenance and operating cost will be much lower with the Valentine Monorail System than the present type two-rail roads, hence fares may be reduced, ample margin still remaining for large profits. Valentine Monorail cars are absolutely nonderailable, hence may run at high speed with perfect safety.

Seeing Is Believing

A demonstrating model of the Valentine Monorail car has been established in the basement of the Consolidated Realty Building, Sixth and Hill streets, Los Angeles. This model car is about six feet long and is operated on a track about 150 feet in length. YOU are invited to call any day between the hours of 10 a.m. and 5 p.m., or 7:30 and 9 o'clock p.m., to see this car in actual operation. It will show you that our claims for the Valentine Monorail are based upon demonstrated facts.

If you cannot call at our demonstrating room to see this car in operation, fill in and forward to us the following coupon and we will mail you, free, illustrated descriptive booklet giving full details of the Valentine Monorail System.

LOS ANGELES TO THE SEA IN 15 MINUTES—VIA RAPID TRANSIT MONORAIL

Will You Trust Your Eyes and Your Reason

The demonstrating model of the Valentine Monorail car, built to one-twelfth scale and operated on a track 150 feet in length, may be seen by you in actual operation any day between the hours of 10 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. and 7:30 and 9 o'clock p.m. Come and see this for yourself. Bring your engineers, mechanics and electricians. We welcome the best of them. Reason the proposition out for yourself and you can only arrive at the conclusion that a Valentine Monorail road from Los Angeles to the sea will accomplish all that we claim for it.

Tremendous Profits Apparent

The patents covering the Valentine Monorail System, the Valentine Direct Power Motor, etc., throughout the entire North American Continent are controlled by the MONORAIL RAPID TRANSIT COMPANY. The first operating road of the Valentine Monorail system we expect to place in operation within 18 months, and it is estimated that within five years following the completion of this road not less than 25,000 miles of Valentine Monorail roads will be constructed on the North American Continent. All of these roads must pay constant tribute to the Monorail Rapid Transit Company, the owner of the patent rights. With such a mileage of Valentine Monorail roads in operation, Monorail Rapid Transit Company stock will be worth probably not less than $100.00 per share, ten times the present price, and possibly a great deal more.

Offering of Monorail Rapid Transit Stock

In furthering the construction of the first operating road of the Valentine Monorail System, which it is proposed shall be built between Los Angeles and the sea, a small allotment of stock of the MONORAIL RAPID TRANSIT COMPANY is offered for subscription at $10 per share. Payments may be made 10 per cent. cash with order, the balance in nine equal monthly installments, or a discount of 5 per cent. will be allowed if all cash accompanies the order.

Those who secure stock of the Monorail Rapid Transit Company will not only participate in the earnings of the proposed road between Los Angeles and the sea, which is certain to be an immensely profitable one, but they will also participate in the earnings of every other road of the Valentine Monorail type constructed anywhere on the North American Continent for many years to come. Monorail Rapid Transit stock will be offered for a short time only, as a subsidiary organization will soon be formed and such additional funds as required will be raised through the sale of its stock and bonds. The big profits will be made by the stockholders of the operating corporation—the Monorail Rapid Transit Company.

Obey That Impulse

Do not fail to call at our demonstrating room in the basement of the Consolidated Realty Building, Sixth and Hill streets, at the earliest possible moment to see the demonstrating model of the Valentine Monorail car in actual operation, and do not fail to secure a block of Monorail Rapid Transit Company stock while it may be had. We believe the 20th century has seen no other enterprise of such tremendous importance to the world as is now being undertaken by the Monorail Rapid Transit Company.

Obey that impulse. Come and let us show you what we have and what we are doing. Let us show you that we can make "Los Angeles to the Sea in 15 Minutes" a reality and that we mean to do it in the very near future. Let us show you the wonderful development of the Valentine Monorail System and how it inevitably return extraordinary profits to the early investors of the Monorail Rapid Transit Company.

Great Rally of the Los An... Teachers' Association, the ... National Congress of Mothe... Wide Boys' and Girls' Welf...

WITH the active co-operation and moral support of every school teacher in the city, every parent of a school child of whatever social rank, every municipal official, every civic organization and every public-spirited citizen of Los Angeles will be held on Tuesday of this week a general rally of the largest child-welfare organization in the world—the Los Angeles Federation of Parent-Teachers' Associations, comprising 121 separate bodies and a membership of nearly 8000.

An integral part and the single great motive force of the National Congress of Mothers, this gathering of its largest single unit is one of national significance. It represents a crystallization in concrete and practical form of a world-wide movement undertaken by the parents of all nations to work out on a scientific basis the age-old problem of the best methods for the rearing and education of children.

"Child Welfare," meaning everything that goes to the making of normal, healthy childhood and well trained, self-respecting citizenship, is the aim of the Mothers' Congress. The idea of associations of parents and teachers to bring about a heartier cooperation of the parents with the schools originated with the Mothers' Congress, organized in 1897 "to promote the best opportunities for the physical, mental and moral development of every child." California has taken first rank in this work and Los Angeles leads California.

The sixteenth Child Welfare Conference of the National Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teachers' Associations took place in St. Louis in March of this year. Mrs. C. C. Noble of the local federation attended the conference as an official delegate. The keynote of the session this year was "The Home's Responsibility for Child Welfare."

One of the features proposed for the next session of the Mothers' Congress, to be held in Boston next year, is a permanent child welfare exhibit, showing what the schools and the parents throughout the country are doing for the care and uplift of children. Mrs. Frank P. Fay, of the Cambria-street Circle, has been appointed chairman of a committee to prepare the California exhibit for this purpose. Photographs of all the different activities of the work in Los Angeles will make up a part of this exhibit. It is expected that the collection, after being shown at Boston, will be sent to various sections of the country as a part of the child welfare exhibits which are becoming one of the most important features of the campaign.

The programme for Tuesday is, in a sense, preparatory to this. Members of the circles throughout the city and all others interested are invited to gather on the Olive street side of Central Park at 9 o'clock in the morning. Officials of the Federation and members of the committees will be present to act as guides and the guests will be escorted on a visit of inspection to the various schools and institutions where practical child welfare work is being carried on under the auspices, or with the assistance, of the associations.

The Utah-street Day Nursery, the "model cottage," maternity hospital, penny kitchen and children's clinic and hospital will be visited, and it is

SHOW WORLD OUR WAYS OF CHILD-EDUCATION.

Great Rally of the Los Angeles Federation of Parent-Teachers' Association, the Largest Existing Branch of National Congress of Mothers, to Crystallize Nation-Wide Boys' and Girls' Welfare Movement.

WITH the active co-operation and moral support of every school teacher in the city, every parent of a school child of whatever social rank, every municipal official, every civic organization and every public-spirited citizen of Los Angeles, will be held on Tuesday of this week a general rally of the largest child-welfare organization in the world—the Los Angeles Federation of Parent-Teachers' Associations, comprising 121 separate bodies and a membership of nearly 8000.

The Utah-street Day Nursery, the "model cottage," maternity hospital, penny kitchen and children's clinic and hospital will be visited, and it is hoped that many may avail themselves of this opportunity to see for themselves what is being accomplished. Perhaps the most unique work is what is now known as the "Children's Clinic." Two cottages, on the grounds of the Children's Hospital, have been provided by the Board of Education and equipped by the federation. They contain two dental operating rooms; a room completely fitted up for the examination and treatment of eye troubles; a room for the ear and throat patients; and a small operating room and a rest room which are used exclusively for trachoma cases. During the past year more than 1000 children have been treated here. Five hundred and forty-five of these were dental cases, 317 children were treated for eye trouble and 105 pairs of glasses were furnished free of charge, besides many others at cost. Twenty-seven operations were performed for trachoma—the dreaded eye disease, which is frequently found among foreign born children. It is stated that each one of these operations resulted in a complete cure.

DETAILS OF WORK.

The association has recently fitted up a neat ward with several beds in the Children's Hospital for the use of the children who are operated upon for adenoids and tonsil troubles. These operations are performed by the regular staff of the hospital, and the social nurses are aided by the hospital nurses when necessary.

After school hours, from thirty to fifty children may frequently be found gathered at the clinic for examination and treatment. In no case is a child treated unless accompanied by a parent or by the parent's written consent to the operation. Every effort is made to make even dentistry as painless a performance as possible, and to dispel the dread that a child naturally feels at the sight of a doctor's case or a dentist's chair. And gentle treatment and consideration has gone far toward making the little patients feel at home and among friends when attending the clinic.

The clinic is supported by funds furnished by the school board and federation. In every case a minimum charge is made and the parents pay such portion as they are able. If the committee are satisfied that any payment at all would be a hardship, it is all paid out of the funds at hand. The clinic is under the management of Mrs. Elizabeth McManus.

DAY NURSERY.

Babies crying in six different languages at once—that is what you hear at the Utah-street Day Nursery. But then they laugh in six languages, too, and these patient little foreign kiddies are quite as apt to laugh as to cry. And one little mother looks after from forty to fifty-five babies every school day in the week! It's no wonder some little tummies are empty and some little faces smeary. This nursery is an outgrowth of the conditions in this district, which is largely Russian in character. The mothers work; the law compels the children of school age to go to school; consequently the babies of the district went to school, too, much to the dismay of the teachers and the detriment of the child mothers. So the good mothers of the federation took a hand. The school board provided an old "cottage" of the California style; it was fitted up by the mothers and a Russian mother who had little ones to support was employed as matron. The city has been contributing $30 per month towards its support, but this appropriation has recently been increased to $50 and an assistant is to be employed.

Every day anywhere from forty to sixty babies are brought here by their parents or older brothers and sisters to be left during school hours. There are stufdy little Russians, dark-eyed Spanish and Italian babies, flaxen headed "Deutchers," curly haired Lithuanians, and now and then an American or colored youngster. Outside is an enclosed yard with shade trees and a sandpile; within there are cribs and hammocks for the naps and simple toys to amuse. The babies are fed milk and crackers and oatmeal when they are hungry and at luncheon time. But really it's luncheon time all the time with the busy little caretaker—just a continuous procession of bottles and cups. Of course it is an impossibility for one woman to keep so many tots all clean and happy at once; but under the vigorous supervision of Mrs. F. E. Wolfe and with the assistance of the teachers of the school and the older girls, wonders have been accomplished. The little ones are well looked after and are safe in the nursery, while the older children are free to attend to their school work without the burden of responsibility for the little ones which seriously interfered before. So successful has this nursery been that a similar one has been started at the First street

These views are taken in the maternity hospital, the Utah-street day nursery, the children's clinic and the model cottage. In the center are the present heads of the federation.

MOST PRIMITIVE MEN.

A Wandering Race Found in Sumatra Who Are Much Inferior to the Paleolithic Men of Europe.

[Philadelphia Record:] A people without any form or religion, without superstition, devoid of any thought of the future state, has been found in the interior forests of Sumatra, according to Dr. Wilhelm Valez, the geologist of the University of Breslau, who has made extensive journeys through the island. There he found the Kubus, as he named them, who are scarcely to be distinguished from the small man-like ape of the Indo-Malayan countries. They are wanderers through the forest seeking food. They have no property. They are not hunters, but simply collectors. They seek merely sufficient nuts, fruits and other edible growths to keep them alive.

The Kubus wage very little warfare upon the small amount of animal life in their silent and somber land. The only notion he could get from them of a difference between a live and a dead person was that the dead do not breathe. He infers that they are immeasurably inferior to the paleolithic man of Europe, who fashioned tools and hunted big game with his flint-tipped arrow and knife.

Intellectual atrophy is the result of the Kubus' environment. The words they know are almost as few as the ideas they try to express.

UMORS OF VON JAGOW, ·BERLIN'S POLICE CHIEF.

Flood of Litigation Follows All His Decrees—Exiles Resident in Berlin Find Their Chief Amusement in Watching Him—How the Socialists Turned a Threatened Massacre Into a Farce.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

ERLIN, May 15.—Police President Trustgod von Jagow is the consolation of exiles in Berlin. He rvides interest, news, conversation, omics, life. When the exile opens "Lokal-Anzeiger" over his leather-ored morning coffee, he inevitably hts on the effective name "Trust-d von Jagow" attached to "A new ree of Police President Von gow."

Thereupon follow orders to police-nt to shoot at criminals, to wom- not to wear hats in theaters, to be to be all painted the same color, dogs' chains not to be shorter than e feet, or longer than eight, to tian and Correggio to cease cir-lating prints of their indecent dam, to bathers not to bathe naked whatever happens to compel them into respect.

Jagow began with the Social Democrats. The Social Democrats arranged to hold in Treptow Park a giant demonstration in favor of the reform of the antique Prussian franchise. Like all meetings run by Germany's well-drilled socialists, it was to be perfectly orderly. Jagow forbade it. The socialists persisted that it would be held. Thereupon Jagow printed several hundred thousand brief, sensational posters on squares of blood-colored paper and stuck them up all over Berlin. They ended, "I warn night-seers."

Berliners expected a massacre; they got only a roaring farce. Jagow concentrated 5000 policemen, with fire-arms, near Treptow to break up the rebellious demonstrators, and all day long tore about in an automobile hunting for them. While he was thus engaged a hundred thousand socialists concentrated and held their meeting in the Tiergarten, ten minutes' walk from the Kaiser's palace. By brilliant strategy and organization Jagow's army had been fooled. At the last moment secret messages were sent to all socialist gathering places changing the meeting place. When exhausted, folled Jagow got back to Berlin, the meeting had been held triumphantly, and everyone was laughing.

Jagow's next battle royal was with the hooligans of Moabit in North Berlin. Here his success was also doubtful. While the police entirely failed to arrest the hooligan leaders, they chopped to death an old man who was out looking for his son and they further chipped pieces off the hands of four British and American newspaper men. Berlin was amazed at this specimen of police activity and asked itself what sort of a man was this terrible Jagow.

Jagow is the ideal incarnation of the Prussian conservative junker spirit. He is a tough, middle-aged man, with an almost clean-shaven head, bloodshot eyes, a firm, runaway horse's mouth, a humped accipitrine nose and a scar from a student's Mensur duel across his leathery cheek. All the Jagows, and there are many—one being Godleve Jagow, Ambassador at Rome—are just such hard, stupid, honest individuals, who cause trouble wherever they go.

President Trustgod Jagow's taste for trouble quickly develops into litigation. The Treptow affair led to whole series of processes; the Moabit affair to more. The court declared that at Moabit the police had shot and sabred many innocent persons, and they added that the innocent persons would have done well to retort with devolver shots. This enraged Herr Jagow. He took occasion on the Kaiser's birthday celebration to declare that the court was wrong, and the police innocent. Editors criticised him. One ridiculed him as "Jagow the Strong," and got into jail for two months. The editor is still appealing. Altogether, between the Treptow and Moabit affairs, lawyers have had one of the biggest harvests recorded in Berlin.

Herr Jagow's next exploit was also in the direction of judicious force. He issued an order to his underlings threatening them with condign punishment if they hesitated to shoot when any trouble was caused them by criminals. The valiant patrolmen applied the advice towards solving a quarrel about a washerwoman who had invited an adorer to her apartment, and various complications led to the barring of a door. When the police arrived on the scene, they reasoned that a barred door must have dangerous and heavily-armed criminals behind it, so they advanced courageously and poured a terrific volley through the panel. Instead of the expected return volley they heard a piteous squeak. The door was thrown open, and behind it squirmed the washerwoman's adorer with a bullet in his leg, and nothing more lethal than a pair of gloves in his hand. Again the people laughed.

Herr Jagow laughed also, because the "don't hesitate to shoot" order made trouble, and trouble is his aim in life. It was Berlin's municipality which made the trouble; Ober-Burgermeister Kirschner is so angry with Jagow that he will not shake his hand. The municipality has issued a protest declaring that Jagow, instead of protecting the citizens, is exposing them to needless perils. Jagow retorts that his instructions to the police are no affair of the municipality, but only the affair of the Prussian Legislature. He further complains that the citizens do not help the police. "They will never help," replies the municipality, "until the police learn to behave themselves."

While thus pursuing the glorious path of war, Herr Jagow finds time to direct the arts of peace. Berlin's bad taste, especially in trafic matters, annoys him. Since the skinny-old-horse droschky has been replaced by the smart automobile, fierce excesses of taste are the rule. One automobile owner paints his car in cheap silver, with festoons of purple grapes; another prefers gold with silver stars, and so on. Herr Jagow decrees that all benzine cars must henceforth be painted dark brown, with bright red stripes. The car owners retort that this will cost them enormous sums, as brown is a bad wearing color, and they add that henceforth no one will distinguish hired automobiles from private ones. Jagow, they claim, has exceeded the power of interference given to him by law. To show his contempt for the law, Jagow replies by issuing a new decree altering the arrangement of droschky seats, which the owners declare will cost them $200 for every car. If the order is persisted in they declare they will begin more lawsuits to prove that Jagow is again in the wrong.

With such contentions on hand, any ordinary bureaucrat would be content. But Jagow is insatiable. Knowing that women are by nature litigious, he resolved to make a raid in their sacred domain. He declared that henceforth no woman might wear hats in theaters. This created the hoped-for-storm. All Berlin women in boxes wear enormous hats, with three-foot long, wobbling ostrich feathers, which sway in the draughts and rub the powder off their Grecian noses.

"For every hat worn in future," says Jagow, "I shall fine $125." The theater managers vow that this will ruin their business and add, as usual, that Jagow is exceeding his legal powers. It is not his business to decree the fashion.

"True," says Jagow, "but I have power to prevent riots, and some day these big hats may cause rioting. They interrupt the view."

"If a lady occupies a box with her own family," retort the managers, "her hat interrupts no one's view, except her husband's, and he does not count." As the parties have failed to come to an agreement, the theater managers are going to law, thinking to annoy Herr Jagow. But as a fact, annoyance is precisely what Herr Jagow thrives on.

Having engaged the drama, Herr Jagow has now resolved to go for pictorial art. He began by seizing prints of stout nude peasant girls by the Swede Anders Zorn and proceeded further until his minions confiscated copies of Correggio's "Io and Jupiter." This has also brought down the customary litigation and the courts have ordered the seized pictures to be restored.

Jagow then decided to attack the artists themselves. As Zorn lives in Sweden and Correggio in Paradise, he could raid only Berlin's painters. This he is doing on the queer ground that their art is too elevated. In Berlin you must not build skyscrapers more than five stories high; but many houses have an additional attic story with studios for artists, and here the artists not only work, but live.

For twenty years they have done this, and former Police Presidents never complained. Jagow, however, is angry with artists in general, and he has taken advantage of a doubtful point of law to order all the artists to vacate their attics at once. It is not easy for 2500 artists to find new studios and lodgings in a day, but the most Jagow will concede is a short respite. The artists must quit. A few of them, who doubt the legality of Jagow's measure, have threatened litigation.

Even the hatpin question when regulated by Herr Jagow has caused trouble and lawsuits. Herr Jagow issued a severe monition against projecting hatpins and notices accordingly were pasted in street cars and electric railroads. This harmless ordinance has already led to several lawsuits, and a litigious countess who was refused admission to a railroad car on the ground that her hatpin projected nine inches, has demanded back her 4-cent fare. She declares that Herr Jagow has exceeded his statutory powers and will have to pay her the 4 cents. The law. This attitude pleases the immensely.

Altogether Herr Trustgod is an effective specimen of the sian Junker-bureaucrat. He issues an ordinance which the owners of vacant lots, who will litigate rather than pay compulsion. Today it is that he is considered in the stricting the use of water private houses; tomorrow there a decree forbidding the feeding of spotted necktie who follow the doings of the Chief Berlin life is not half as it seems to tourists.

PAUL SCHEE

"The Fight Over the Points."

Chief of Police von Jagow, having compelled women to wear protective caps over their hatpins, "Ulk" advised him to "put protective caps on your policemen's swords"—a reference to the Moabit disturbances, when the police slashed out freely and injured several onlookers.

Muggelsee, or to newspaper men to carry pale-blue cards and prove that they are not burglars.

Jagow is Germany's earthly Providence. He rules everything, says everything, does everything, permits everything, forbids everything. He is disliked only by bourgeois Germans who want a supine, adventureless life. The brave and high-spirited adore him. He exhales a thick, almost visible atmosphere of contentiousness, which stirs the blood, and, like the devil of Goethe's "Faust," moves tame humanity into thinking and acting. Lawyers love him for sending them excellent business, while the lively Yankee, the slow Britisher and the sneering Frenchman simply adore him as a provider of the best conversational topic in all Berlin.

Jagow became Police President in 1910. He succeeded an amiable, unmeddlesome bureaucrat named Stuhmrauch, which means "roomsmoke." All Berlin's presidents have attractive names. Jagow from the first was impatient for fame. His record required that, for he came from Potsdam, under Kaiser Wilhelm's shield. All high German officials come from or via Potsdam. They begin as "Referendar," proceed as "Landrat," develop towards Potsdam, where they hold some fat post, and there catch the Kaiser's eye. Presently, when a high vacancy comes, they get it. Chancellor Bethmann-Hollweg is a case in point. As a rule these Potsdamites are models of courtesy. But Jagow lacks the Potsdam manner. He set straight out to prove to Berlin's foolish people that he does not want their love, but that he is determined —Do you know that there are dozens of reasons why you should own a Free Sewing Machine?

"THE FREE" SEWING MACHINE

The Free Sewing Machine—

—is an insured Sewing Machine—that means—should your machine be burned in a fire, damaged by water, tumbled off a wagon, be smashed in a tornado, struck by lightning—

—In case you lose your machine through any of the above reasons in the space of five years after it is purchased, there is a brand new sewing machine waiting for you.

—Weigh this feature right now in your mind—figure what it means to you.

—The rigid feed, the rotary spool pin, the automatic tension release.

—And the Free Sewing Machine has such a splendid outward appearance. The case is made of best clear-grained, quarter-sawed oak, highly polished, and the steel frame is of latest design with French legs.

—There isn't another machine that does run like it. The Free doesn't go to its work like a backward school boy—its movements aren't labored and slow.

—The Free Sewing Machine seems to have animation, so quickly it answers the slightest touch. All its parts are united and centered to make greatest speed with positive accuracy.

—Morning, noon and night and all day through, The Free is ready, willing and you will find that The Free runs just as easily at the close of a day's work as it did at the start.

MATERNITY HOSPITAL.

At the Maternity Hospital on Utah street, maintained for mothers who cannot receive proper care in their own homes and who cannot afford to pay the charges of regular hospitals, the federation has fitted up a room with three beds and contributes toward the support of the institution. Though the hospital has been evolved from an old residence, the rooms are sunny and airy and immaculately clean, while at the same time homelike and free from the depressing atmosphere of the ordinary hospital ward. In the present year eighteen patients have occupied this mother's room and fifteen babies have come into the world under the most favorable conditions possible to be given by the women who have this work in charge. Mrs. Yeager, the matron, is an experienced trained nurse and in case of need the best physicians in the city may be called upon for assistance. A large committee of the federation, with Mrs. Alexander N. Lord at its head, aid in the work.

THE PENNY KITCHEN.

The Penny Kitchen at the Castelar street school was started by the Civic Association and is now carried on under a special committee, of which Mrs. N. E. Wilson is chairman, representing both the Civic Association and the Federation. From 150 to 250 hot luncheons are served here every school day to the children. Each child presents a ticket which entitles him to a bowl of soup and all the bread he wants, or to whatever else is on the menu. The tickets are secured through the teachers or the superintendent, Mrs. Smith, who exercise their judgment as to the payment of the penny. In many cases, after investigation, it is found that even a single penny is too much for the family income, and no child is allowed to go hungry for the lack of it. It is pitifully true that many children receive here the one substantial meal of the day.

The scene at the noon hour is a vivid one. The children of the cooking classes assist in preparing and serving the meal. In fresh caps and aprons, little girls and boys are ready to pour the soup and serve the slices of bread when the clock strikes 12, and the long file rushes in to be fed. Many little foreigners are learning here not only how to cook, but what to cook and how to serve food. The children do the dishes and help clean up, too, and are thus gaining practical experience which is of almost as great value as the nourishment to the underfed bodies. The teachers of this school agree that better work is done in the school room because of the Penny Kitchen.

THE MODEL COTTAGE.

Another exceedingly practical training in actual living is furnished by the model cottage on the Utah street school grounds. The suggestion for this feature came from some of the women of the Federation who were in touch with the conditions of the neighborhood. The women of Ebell Club furnished the funds to equip the four-room cottage which was provided by the Board of Education. Two of the teachers of the school live in this cottage, which is modestly but tastefully furnished, and all the house and laundry work is done by the girls of the school under the supervision of the teachers of Domestic Science and Home Economics. The classes also prepare daily and serve the luncheon for ten of the teachers. Many girls are here gaining a working insight into the management of a well conducted American home, which it would not be possible for them to acquire otherwise.

Too much credit cannot be given to some of the women, chiefly chairwomen of the committees, who are devoting much of their time and strength to the carrying on of the work of these different undertakings. The earnest and unselfish work of these women alone makes success possible, for while the school board or the city may furnish funds to aid in maintaining the work, they cannot afford to pay salaries for the supervision and promotion of these enterprises. Much is due to the hearty co-operation of the teachers of the different schools also. Many of the city teachers are voluntarily doing much toward bettering the conditions among our foreign population by their interest in the children under their care and their influence upon the families with whom they come into contact. The work which the Federation is doing could not be carried out by the teachers alone, nor could it be accomplished without the assistance of the teachers. The support of the school officials and of the physicians of the city is also an important factor in the work accomplished.

Upon the sincere interest and cooperation of school officials, teachers and the Mother's Congress, as represented by the Parent-Teacher circles, depends to a very large extent the physical, moral and mental welfare of a great proportion of the 46,000 school children of Los Angeles. It is through this agency that the deficiencies of homes which are not up to the high standard demanded for the training of good American citizens must be supplied. It is through the training and care these children receive that the standard of American homes must be preserved and raised.

EL SEGUNDO.

EL SEGUNDO, May 18.—At a meeting of the El Segundo Home Builders this week, the capital stock of the company was increased to $1,000,000, with an addition of $250,000 bonds for the purpose of enabling the company to understand new and vaster projects for the upbuilding of El Segundo, "The City That Must Be Built." Since its inception a few months ago, this company has erected a large number of residences and business structures in El Segundo. The large and imposing residences on the Standard reserve are to its credit, as well as homes in all parts of the city and the El Segundo Acre Tracts, and the largest and best business blocks have been erected by this concern.

A school election for the voting of bonds for school purposes in El Segundo has been called for May 20. The amount of the bonds has been placed at $5500, the highest amount that may be issued under the law, being 5 per cent. of the net assessment value of the property of last year.

Paul Shoup, vice-president, and Chief Engineer Pillsbury of the Pacific Electric, accompanied by E. I. McCray, general manager of the El Segundo Land and Improvement Company, were here yesterday, and R. J. Hanna of the Standard Oil Company accompanied the party in an automobile trip over the proposed route of the Pacific Electric into El Segundo, to Athens, to which point the road has already been constructed from Watts. The work of hastening the completion of the much-needed electric line into the heart of El Segundo will be rushed with all possible speed.

RIDING THE BELLS.

Primitive Way the Famous Bells of Seville Are Rung and the Nerve Required for the Work.

[Youths' Companion:] In ordinary circumstances bell ringing is a peaceful occupation to which white-haired, venerable men seem ideally suited. But the men who ring the bells in the famous Giralda of Seville must be young men of unusual agility and steadiness of nerve.

When the city is to make merry on feast days the ringers climb to the belfry, and then, by the aid of a rope and steps cut in the wall of the tower, each mounts to the bell he is to ring and stands astride its brazen shoulders. Then he presses the bell with his feet, holding on to the cross-piece to which it is swung.

Gradually the great bell sways to the movement of the man astride it until it acquires a momentum that swings the hammer, first gently, and then with increasing force, as the sweep of the bell widens, until the air is trembling from the blows that strike the massive sides.

The riders bend and rise and fall with the action of the bells, now appearing to the observer from below to be in a horizontal position as the bell reaches the limits of its swing, and again riding gracefully to an upright position as the monster sways backward with another thundering note.

The most extraordinary part of the daring performance is the sight of the bell-ringer calmly swaying the bell while it hangs far out of the belfry over the city, for the outward swing sends the counterpoise with the ringer into space beyond the arch.

Geese That Pick Cotton.

[Washington Post:] Dr. R. O. Williams of Humboldt, Tenn., who is also a farmer, claims to have a flock of geese which he has trained to pick cotton. There are ten geese in the flock, and Dr. Williams claims each goose will pick on an average of seventy-five pounds of cotton a day, and that often his flock will gather sufficient seed cotton in one day to make two large bales. The doctor says he first taught his geese to do the picking act by placing grains of corn in the open bolls of cotton in such a way that in order to get the grain the goose would have to pick out the cotton.

HOW I GOT RID OF MY WARTS

"I am not troubled with warts any more, because I have learned how to get rid of them," said a young lady when asked what had become of the unsightly warts that had disfigured the beauty of her hands. "It is very simple. Go to your druggist; get two drams of Traxit (triple strength.) Bathe the wart in warm water just before retiring, dip a wooden toothpick into the Traxit and touch the wart lightly. Inside of three days your warts will disappear, just as mine did."

The DOCTOR'S ADVICE

by Dr. Lewis Baker

The questions answered below are general in character, the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers will apply to any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Bldg., College-Ellwood Sts., Dayton, O., enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only initials or fictitious name will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

"An unhappy woman" writes "What can I do to reduce my weight. I weigh entirely too much for my own comfort. It is also very embarrassing at times. I would like a reply."

Answer: The safest, quickest and best remedy that I know for reducing flesh, and one that I know to be harmless, is: Aromatic elixir, 5 ozs.; glycol arbolene, 1 oz. Mix, shake well and take a teaspoonful after each meal for three days, and then double the dose. Continue until your weight is reduced properly.

"Howard" writes: "What can I take for headache, dark spots before my eyes, dizzy spells and also constipation?"

"Answer: Constipation is the cause of all your trouble, but I can cure you if you will follow my directions. Get at the drug store three grain sulphera tablets (not sulphur.) These are packed in sealed tubes and contain full directions. These little tablets purify the blood, the bowels and liver are stimulated into healthy action and will gradually cure your trouble.

"Little Girl"—To cure your child of bed-wetting get tincture cubebs, 1 dram; comp. fluid balmwort, 1 oz., and tincture rhusaromatic, 2 drams. Give 10 to 15 drops in water about one hour before meals.

F. G. H. writes: "Please send me a harmless formula for preserving the gums and whitening the teeth. I have tried many kinds of pastes and powders but have not been able to find one that would whiten and cleanse the teeth and preserve the gums."

Answer: To cleanse and whiten the teeth and preserve the gums, mix the following and use twice a day. Antiseptic vilane powder, 2 ounces; powdered sugar or sugar of milk, 2 ounces; powdered soap, 1 ounce, and precipitated chalk, 6 ounces. Most ready prepared tooth powders contain a strong flavoring which is very harmful. You can make three-fourths of a pound of the above, which is equal to two or three dollars worth, for less than one dollar, which is absolutely harmless.

"Kathryn" writes: "If you know of anything that will stop premature baldness, cure dandruff and itching scalp, I should appreciate a reply."

Answer: The following simple remedy will cure dandruff and promote a luxurious growth of hair. Ask for plain yellow mingol, which can be had in 4 oz. jars and use regularly according to directions. I have seen the most astonishing results from its use that I heartily recommend it to all who suffer with any disease of the scalp.

"Mrs. A. F." writes: "Really if I could find a true remedy to increase my weight, I should be the happiest woman alive. I am so thin and scrawny it is a shame. Why can not I be like other women? I do not work hard and have pretty good health."

Answer: You can "be like other women" if you will follow my advice, which is to use three grain hypo-nuclane tablets packed in sealed cartons with directions, and most widely prescribed by intelligent physicians everywhere. They improve the nutrition, add red corpuscles to the blood, improve the complexion, but thorough and regular use must follow to get these good results.

"Mr. Ben" writes: "My joints are becoming so stiff from rheumatism that I can scarcely walk. Is there any help for me?"

Answer: Of course there is help for you and for all others who suffer from rheumatism. Take the following and you will be entirely cured: Iodide of potassium, 2 drams; sodium salicylate, 4 drams; wine of colchicum, ½ oz.; comp. cascara candies, 1 oz.; comp. fluid balmwort, 1 oz., and syrup sarsaparilla, 5 ozs. Mix and take a teaspoonful at meal time and again at bed time.

"Mary J." says: "Every winter I have a cold which lasts till spring. I have tried several doctors' prescriptions, but they do no good so I ask you what to do."

Answer: The best medicine to relieve colds and coughs is made by mixing the contents of a 2½ oz. bottle of essence mentho laxene with honey or home-made sugar syrup. Full directions for making are given on the bottle and also how to take. You will find this will cure your cough in a very few days and it is perfectly harmless and pleasant to take.

"Miss A." writes: "I have a very bad case of dyspepsia. I am afraid to eat a hearty meal. My breath is bad and I am cross and irritable most of the time."

Answer: If you will get the following tablets and take according to directions which accompany the package, you will soon be rid of all distress in your stomach. It will also help your constipation. They are called tablets triopeptine and are packed in sealed cartons. If this trouble is allowed to stand it will cause appendicitis, so begin taking at once.

"Helen" writes: "Please tell me what to do to gain an appetite. I cannot eat and am thin and nervous."

Answer: You need a good system tonic and the best one that I could tell you of is: Syrup of hypophosphites comp. 5 ozs., tincture cadomene comp. 1 oz. Mix and always shake well before using. Take a teaspoonful before meals for several weeks and you will gain an appetite and your whole nervous system will be restored to its natural state.

LIFORNIA MAN BUYS VINEYARD.

erican Artists Making Themselves Known.

Times Wireless, Cable, Eastern and Overland News Service.]

ARIS, May 18.—The name of a well wn California millionaire is mened in connection with the recent of the famous Burgundy vineyard Romanee-Conti. When the vineyd was first offered at Vosnemanee the reserve price of $68,000 not reached in the bidding. MM. odin de Villaine and Chambon, two the seven proprietors, then made rivate purchase, acting, it is underod, for an American millionaire, is extensively interested in Calinia vineyards. His name and the e paid are both withheld.

The Romanee vineyard derives its me from the Roman settlers who t saw its advantages. For several nturies it belonged to the monks of eaux, by whom a portion of it was d to the princely house of Conti, o added their name to its designa-n.

After the revolution the vineyard s confiscated and sold to M. Onvard om whom it passed to the ancestors the present proprietors.

JOSEPHINE'S COURT.

No longer can it be said that "art pped short at the cultivated court the Empress Josephine." Two ntroversies are raging in the Paris t journals and the art columns of e newspapers, the authenticity of Gainsborough sketch for the "Blue y" and the new style in portraiture roduced by our own American Romys and Lawrences. The ease and nsurdness of the American mood are ntained, but Paris spares criticism of he unadorned treatment of facial ain in one particular portrait, that f a lady who is somewhat of a figure e our best salons. The lady, herself, indignant at the notoriety given her ckered frown, which the artist ught to the life.

IN PARIS SOCIETY.

Dr. and Mrs. W. G. Younger of San Francisco, the Countess Rene de Goalgon (formerly Miss Blake of Boston,) and the Duchess de la Rochefoucauld (in earlier years Miss Minnie Mitchell and an Oregon belle,) are seen a great deal in the best Paris society. Mrs. Younger has exquisite taste in selecting her toilettes and is accorded an authority as regards the fashions of this capital which radiates fashion's decrees.

What is the best diet for an airman? "Sugar," answers M. Planchard, of the Societes Savantes. "Eat plenty of sugar," says this expert on hygiene, who has been devoting several months to an investigation of food for aerial locomoters. Sugar, in his opinion, clarifies the brain and helps the airman to do his thinking at high altitudes, as he does his walking on land "without thinking."

A RE WELCOME IN RUSSIA.

GREETINGS TO THE EXPOSITION COMMISSION.

Foreign Policy of the Bear Is Made Plain by Sasonoff—Czar Expects to Get in the Far East Advantages Assured by the Peace of Portsmouth

BY GEORGE FRASER.

[The Times Wireless, Cable, Eastern and Overland News Service.]

ST. PETERSBURG, May 18.—Nothing could have been more absurd than the decidedly silly story sent out by the St. Petersburg correspondent of a London newspaper that the Panama-Pacific Exposition Commission would not be welcomed here. As a matter of fact, the passport incident is forgotten here; or, if remembered at all, it is pigeonholed by the innate politeness of theRussian people and their desire to live in amity with the rest of the world. What a pity it is that man's minds love to wander through mazes of misrepresentation. No nation has suffered more from calumny of this sort than Russia, a time-honored friend of the American people.

The "Darkest Russia" of which one reads in England and in other parts of Europe hasnot actual existence. It is a figment of the fancy of writers who love to romance in the key of "G," striking somber notes for weak-minded persons to groan over. The real Russia is a progressive Russia, a country which has a great future, commercially, intellectually, politically. The mistakes of the past are being quietly, patiently rectified. From the White Czar down to the meanest Moujik, patriotism prevails with the will to march forward in the van of the nations.

WORLD PEACE.

Apparently, M. Sasonoff's declaration, announcing as Foreign Minister Russia's attitude on the principal questions of world politics now engaging the attention of the chancelleries of the great powers, has created the impression which was desired by the imperial council. The government of St. Petersburg is seriously and sincerely anxious for world peace. The Franco-Russian agreement is essentially a peace pact. The Czar's visit to Potsdam was a peace visit to smooth the troubled surface of Balkan bickerings. And we have in the Anglo-Russian committee, composed of eminent men like MM. Timariozoff, Zvegnitzeff, Guchkoff, Prince Galitzin and the Mayor of Moscow, an active organization strengthening rapprochement wtih Great Britain, which is of particular importance, just now, in view of the mixed situation in Mongolia, Thibet and Upper India (not to speak of Persia) where interests vitally affecting both nations are concerned. Russia, as M. Sasonoff was frank enough to say, does look for advantagesin the Far East; but these advantages were virtually conceded when the peace of Portsmouth was written under the auspices of an American President.

THE DUMA'S WORK.

With the assistance of the Duma, which is now getting into serious strides as a constructive governmental organization, steps are being taken to improve working conditions among miners and agricultural laborers. Radical provocative proposals have given place to sober practicable plans which have the cordial support of the Czar's Ministers. Thus the way is being prepared for labor legislation of a general sort which will reduce both poverty and crime. Many of the outrages which have been charged against the government have really been the outcroppings of a system of personal despotism applied for profit by individuals working under the shadow of imperial authority, which they abused and weakened.

THE FUTURE OF FRANCE.

A Get-Rich-Quick Mania Has Seized Hold of the People and Lottery Schemes Are Very Popular.

[Rochester Post Express:] Like every other country, France is rapidly changing in this age of transition. Gallic thrift will soon be little better than a tradition. The economic Frenchwoman who used to keep her savings in a stocking has been bitten by the tarantula of speculation. Cynics might say that she has been Americanized. Certainly the get-rich-quick mania has infected her, and the result is that a great portion of her precious hoard has been scattered. Lottery schemes have appeared to her cupidity, and, as her husband, while by no means a good business man, has something of the gambler in his composition, he encourages her to risk a little in the expectation of winning a substantial prize.

There probably has always been a secret penchant for lotteries in the Gallic breast, for all the Latin race find a strange fascination in a game of chance. For a long time frugality has warred with the gambling instinct in France. But a habit does not conquer though it may temporarily minimize an instinct, and now the mirage of chance has obscured the once lucid vision of the French bourgeoise.

This unfortunate tendency, which has of late begun to manifest itself in middle-class France, is not favorable to the prospects of the republic. When people cease to economise their hard-earned money and, having wasted it, are unable to secure all the necessaries of life, they blame the government for the high cost of living. The fact that the government has nothing to do with it does not matter—the average man or woman is rarely logical, and a political scapegoat is useful as a sort of whipping boy.

GREVILLES ARE REJOICING OVER BIRTH OF AN HEIR.

Princess Mary, Only Daughter of King George, Becomes the Subject of Gossip Among the Royal Matchmakers—Brother of the Khedive Gets a Penny as Reward for Saving a Girl's Life.

BY LADY MARY MANWARRING.

[THE TIMES WIRELESS, CABLE, EASTERN AND OVERLAND NEWS SERVICE.]

LONDON, May 18.—There is great rejoicing among the friends of Lord and Lady Greville over the birth of an heir to the title. Lady Greville will be remembered in the United States as the wealthy and fascinating Mrs. Kerr of New York City. While she is English born, her residence in the United States during the period of her first marriage brought her closely in touch with American society; and as she says herself she is thoroughly Americanized. The Grevilles have one of the oldest titles in England, a fine London mansion, a shooting box in the north country, and a grand place at Clonhugh, in Westmeath, Ireland. They have also, thanks to Lady Greville's American marriage, a well-filled purse, and they are most hospitable persons.

SWEET SIXTEEN.

Princess Mary, the only daughter of King George and his Queen, celebrated her sixteenth birthday a couple of weeks ago. But already the matchmakers are marrying her offhand. In the newspapers they have betrothed her to Prince Maximilian of Hesse, also to the Princes Philip and Wolfgang of the same family. Prince George and Prince Alexander of Greece have been honored with the prospective alliance, and I was almost forgetting the German royal family, which, in the person of young Prince Sigismund (who is just five months older than Princess Mary) has not been overlooked. The Princess, however, is in no great hurry to get married. She has much of her mother's temperament and will probably have something to say herself before giving her heart to any man.

Queen Mary intends to go to Germany in July to visit her aunt, the Dowager Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz. This fine old lady is just approaching her ninetieth birthday and they are going to celebrate it in style. All her relatives who can will journey to New-Strelitz to bring her gifts and congratulate her.

STORY ABOUT ALI.

Mohammed Ali, brother of the Khedive of Egypt, is visiting in the United States; and perhaps a little story about him will be read with interest. Some years ago, when the Prince was in England on one of his regular visits, he happened to be standing on the Strand just about the time the theaters commence to disgorge their audiences. A poor young woman, ill-clad and not very attractive, tried to cross the busy street, and narrowly missed the hoofs of the hundreds of passing carriage horses and the wheels of vehicles of all sorts which jostled one another at "Deadman's Corner." The Prince rushed under the horse's head, got his clothing torn into shreds, his face cut, his glasses knocked from his eyes, and several nasty bruises; but he saved the girl. A dear old lady was one of the many bystanders who witnessed the latter part of the rescue. She saw a dark-skinned and disheveled figure helping a girl to the sidewalk. Tears were in her eyes as she put her hand into a reticule of the early Victorian period and pulled out a penny, which she handed to the great-great-grandson of "The Commander of the Faithful."

"Take this, my good man," she said, "and buy yourself a drink. Sure, black or white, it's a brave man you are."

The Prince took the penny and he has since kept it as a sort of Carnegie hero medal, which was certainly conferred with the utmost sincerity.

WORKS OF ART LEAVE OLD SOD.

British Are Striving to Put an End to the Exodus.

Herno Bay Man Has Plan to Augment Army.

Royal Aeroplane Factory Is Turning Out Aviators.

BY PAUL LAMBETH.

[The Times Wireless, Cable, Eastern and Overland News Service.]

LONDON, May 18.—Despite the mournful appeals of British newspapers to Englishmen of wealth, urging them to unite that they may cause a halt in the steady flow of "Old Masters" from the manor houses of Britain to the houses of the American millionaires in the great cities of the United States, the exodus of England's finest works of art still goes on; and Americans are the buyers. A slight check was given at the recent sale of the Wertheimer collection at Christie's, where a New York and London firm of art dealers promoted the price of one Raeburn to $111,300. This portrait, 48 1-2x38 inches (the subject of which was Mrs. Hay, wife of Gen. Andrew Hay) netted the artist $250, so they say. Raeburn, dead, is worth more than Raeburn living.

The sale suggests three conclusions. The first is that the pride of the British Gentry can be touched, because most of the important works were kept by British gold within the three kingdoms. The second that paintings are very much like good wine; the more they age, the more valuable they become. The third consideration, and after all the most conclusive, is that the world at large is gaining a keener and more generous appreciation of art treasures, and artists are now reaping remuneration for their work which they would never have dreamed of asking a generation ago. Even works of doubtful value sell at fair prices.

TO MAKE SOLDIERS.

With the entente cordiale solidly cemented between England and France and her relations with Germany undergoing a radical and pleasant change, Britain has no reason to fear invasion. But they tell us: "In time of peace, prepare for war." Dr. R. C. T. Evans, of Herno bay, has worked out a scheme which promises to England a good strong force of 600,000 stalwart fighters. Dr. Evans's idea is that all boys between fourteen and seventeen, should be compelled to go through a systematic military training. After attaining their sixteenth year, with two years spent learning the duties of a soldier, he believes they would be found as good fighting units as any nation possesses. According to his proposal, which has been forwarded to the war office, when the boys reach the age of seventeen there would be a break of eighteen months in their military service to allow of their settling down to trades and professions; after which they would, in the middle of the nineteenth year, join the reserve and remain with it until they complete their forty-second year, fully matured.

The doctor claims that would give a force of 475,000 always under arms and a reserve force of 5,000,000 men between the ages of seventeen and forty-two. The total annual cost of this plan, after deducting the present expenditure for the territorial force, which of course would disappear, is estimated at $72,500,000. How would Americans like a scheme of this sort? John Bull does not like it, although John Bull's son would not be averse to wearing the "Red" of Tommy Atkins. There is absolutely no likelihood of Herno bay's proposition being ever adopted by parliament in our time at any rate.

TURNING OUT AEROPLANES.

A few days ago I paid a visit to the royal aeroplane factory. It is located close by Farnsborough station on the London and Southwestern railroad. The buildings are equipped with everything that could be desired for the making and testing of aeroplanes, dirigibles and balloons. There is a whirling table of 150 feet radius for testing propellers up to 90 miles an hour. Adjoining the factory is a flying ground on which completed aeroplanes are tested. While the object of the factory is primarily the higher training of mechanics for the royal flying force, soon to come into existence, as well as the manufacture and repair of airships to be used by the army, the private manufacturer in England is benefiting by practical experimental work on a scale which no private capital in England would undertake.

GEOLOGY OF PANAMA.

Is a Formation Unlike the Great Continental Uplift and Its Hills Run East and West.

[New York Times:] As there has been a good deal of talk about the possibility of damage to the Panama Canal from volcanic eruptions and earthquake shocks, the report that a steamship captain had come up from the isthmus to Mobile with a large story about destructive lava flows from Chiriqui Peak doubtless caused some apprehension. This has now been allayed, for it seems that the story was entirely false. Even had the story been true, however, only a little knowledge of Isthmian geology was required to inspire entire calmness as regards the canal, for the chances of any injury to it from seismic disturbances are practically nil.

At each end of the isthmus there are, indeed, mountains of volcanic origin. These are "extinct" in the sense that they have not been active for centuries, but any one of them might wake up. Of these two volcanic regions, the one at the west is a continuation of the range of which our Rocky Mountains are a part, and the other at the east is the northern extremity of the Andean system, but they are separated by the whole length of the isthmus, and in this interval there is set down what seems somewhat like another island of the group to which Cuba, Haiti and Porto Rico belong. It is of a formation wholly unlike the great continental uplift, and its hills, instead of running north and south, run east and west.

It is through this central expanse that the canal has been built, sufficiently remote from even "extinct" volcanoes to be much more than fairly safe. Hence, while the reported eruption of Chiriqui might have been true, had it been so the canal would not have been imperiled. On the other hand, the recent story of volcanic action in the Culebra cut was false on its face, and could have been denied on purely geologic reasons.

There have been earthquakes in the part of Panama that interests us, but they have always been slight—mere subsiding tremors from distant agitations—and the best cure for nervousness as to what may happen to the canal from earthquakes is to see still standing in one of the oldest churches in the City of Panama one of the flattest arches that architects ever ventured to build.

ENGLAND'S STANDARDS.

Her Pound Weight and Yard Stick Are Only Used Once Every Twenty Years, Then Sealed Up Again.

[London Tit-Bits:] At intervals of twenty years the government officials compare the current weights and measures with the precious standards, which are sealed up in the wall of the public staircase in the House of Commons, just by the statue of Barry, the architect. The ceremony is once more due to be performed this year, for the last comparison was made in April, 1892, in the presence of the Speaker of the House of Commons, the First Commissioner of Works, the president of the Board of Trade, and several other important personages.

The standards are two in number, and consist of the pound weight and the yard measure. The standard pound is of platinum, which despite its weight, is no larger than a cubic inch, and, small as it is, the actual metal of which it is composed is worth £40. The standard yard is a bar of bronze thirty-eight inches long, on which a yard has been marked off in thirty-six divisions of an inch.

The most elaborate care is taken of these two important articles. When a comparison is being made they are handled with tongs. The pound weight is weighed in the most delicate of chemical balances, and the yard is measured with a micrometer. When they are done with the pound it is wrapped in a special soft paper and laid in a silver-gilt case, which in turn is placed in a bronze case, this being put in a wooden box, which is then screwed down and sealed. The yard measure is placed on eight rollers in a mahogany case, which is also carefully sealed. Both cases are then put into a leaden casket, which is sealed by soldering.

The packing is not yet finished, however, for the lead case is then placed in a strong oak box. When this is screwed down it is placed in the hole in the wall, which is something like a small tomb. The wall is then built up by a mason, and the standards can only be got at by tearing the wall down again.

Brazil for Sportsmen.

[Baltimore American:] "For the man who loves to hunt and fish Brazil is a paradise," continued Dr. Griffith. "I do not suppose there is a part of the world where game is more plentiful or that can be hunted under more satisfactory conditions than in the State of Minas Geraes, say a couple of hundred miles to the north of Rio Janeiro. The prairies and woods teem with animals and birds of every description. There are tigers and water hogs and wild hogs, and funny little red deer about the size of a goat and tall, red wolves with long but very slender bodies. There are magnificent birds known as the perdix and the coduras, which greatly resemble our quail, only a great deal bigger, with the same flavor and the same delicious white meat. Dogs are used in hunting them, just as we use in quail shooting in this country.

"Then there are scores of other feathered creatures unlike our own, and rivers myriads of wild fowl, including ducks, the squat and the vaunted canvasback. There are wild pigeons in the forests and a big bird that is a fair counterfeit of our wild turkey.

"The native Brazilians are not too keen on hunting themselves, but any one can be found to go with you and then one can be found to make up a camping party, and so plentiful is the game, both on the prairies and in the mountains, that it is always easy to get permission of a landowner to go shooting over his estate."

Every Man With An Education

knows that it is barbarous to look any worse than you feel—that your future and your progress depend more upon you than on circumstances beyond your control—that we judge with our eyes long before we judge with our minds.

Every man with an education knows that we only rise as we appear to deserve—in the eyes of those who observe us.

It all, then, comes right down to a matter of appearance.

You've heard people argue in favor of a certain man, and had all their arguments set aside by the vague expression, "His appearance is against him."

Appearance means more than we like to acknowledge. We sort of smile when any one accuses us of thinking too much about appearances. "Oh, no," we say; "WE don't judge by looks; WE are not women; WE don't care for dress."

What love of self-deception!

N DEFENSE OF FIVE-CENT FARE.

Railroad Man Says Nickel's Too Small to Split.

Passengers Get Long Rides on Expensive Cars.

Declares Present Rate Not High for City.

In discussing the question presented by the proposed ordinance giving the Board of Public Utilities the right to fix rates of fare on the electric railways centering in this city, Vice-President Shoup of the Pacific Electric asked the members of the City Club yesterday, "Do you want to undertake an investigation for the purpose of splitting the nickel? I can show you not only that it is too small to split here in this city, but that there is no demand for a three-cent fare."

The ordinance is one of those to be acted upon by the people on the 28th inst. The paper by Shoup, which was read in his absence by Lewis R. Works, vice-president of the club, opposed the adoption of the ordinance and was in answer to one read by City Councilman Reed in favor of the plan.

PUBLICITY FIRST STEP.

Reed contended that complete publicity, such as would be given by examining the corporations' accounts kept in a prescribed way, was the first step in any effort to regulate public utility companies. After paying for the maintenance and operation of the roads, Reed said, and providing for the payment of bonds, deficiency of service and a fair interest on the investment the rest, he said, should be applied to reduction of fares or paying the city for the franchise privileges. Notwithstanding that the city had no right to raise fares in the event of a corporation's operating its lines at a loss, yet, he argued, the city had the right to reduce them, and he declared that public utility corporations all over the United States would have to admit that right before many years.

Shoup, in his paper in reply, pointed out that nearly half the members of the Council had considered that a broad and fair civic policy would best be sustained by the defeat of this ordinance. Before public utility regulation was attempted, he said, the city, by insisting on a five-cent fare, half rates for children and other privileges, as well as transfers, had regulated fares in a very positive way. The city had made an institution out of the nickel and had said to the purchaser of any franchise that a nickel should pay for a ride, either for a few blocks or for many miles.

BETTER SERVICE NOW.

These franchises, now consolidated into two, he said, were a good many years old, and the nickel limitation has now been spread until it covers all the franchises in one group or the other, with consequent less cost to the passenger. "And during that period," he continued, "all the items of expense, either for construction or operation of a railway, have increased—I think without exception. Wages raised; tracks reconstructed under such rules provided by the city as to make construction far more expensive; old 40 and 50 pound rails superseded by 60 to 67 pound rails and now, by action of the Council, by 114 to 147 pound rails; augmented cost of ballasting and preparing the road-bed; price of ties advanced by 50 per cent, over the price of five to seven years ago. When the nickel was set as the rate, a car cost, with mule to draw it, $1000, while now every car costs from $5000 to $6000. The demand for better facilities has increased, but the nickel fare has remained unchanged.

"Los Angeles has an area equal to that of Philadelphia, but has less population to the square mile than any other large city in the United States except perhaps New Orleans, but the railways here, although they must be constantly called upon for additions to their plants, must abide by the regulation of a five-cent fare. It cannot be raised.

REDUCTION NOT DEMANDED.

"There is no demand for the reduction from five cents. In Cleveland, known as a three-cent-fare city, passengers cannot travel so long distances as in Los Angeles, and the equipment and service are such as would not be tolerated in this city. Los Angeles is the most rapidly-growing city in the country and every time the gross income of a street railway increases a dollar there must be an increase in the capital investment of $3 to $3 for new cars, new generator and new transmission lines. The city will make money out of this city.

"If the policy of shaving the nickel be adopted, it would act as a deterrent on the investor in street railway bonds and would cause the curtailment of improvements. I have not the slightest objection to the Board of Public Utilities being made thoroughly acquainted with the accounts of the Pacific Electric Railway, whenever they desire it, but I do not believe it is well or necessary to cloud with uncertainty at this time the future of the electric railways by a threatened regulation which can be in only one direction and that downward."

THE REAL RIVER THAMES.

Lies Below London Bridge and Is too Small for Traffic Which Is Confined to London River.

[Scribner's:] The Thames that most of us know, says Ralph D. Paine, is a toy river in a fair country of lawns and meadows wonderfully green, of gray manor-houses and parks of ancient oaks, where the levels borrow the locks are crowded with skiffs, punts and small pleasure steamers and every nook and bight of shade has its picnic party. This is unassailingly unlike the Thames that rogues know. Where it meets the brown tide which swirls up from the sea, they call it London River, and as such it was famed in their chanteys when the Yankee packets were storming across the Atlantic and the tall East Indiamen swung abreast of Deptford or dropped down past the Nore. No bright plaything for summer holidays is London River, but a crowded road of empire, the turbid highway of a seaport great and ancient.

Much of this commerce is hidden from the casual eye because the shipping is scattered along twenty-five

Rails have been raised; tracks reconstructed under much rules provided by the city as to make construction far more expensive; old 40 and 50 pound rails superseded by 60 to 67 pound rails and are, by action of the Council, by 70 to 107 pound rails; augmented cost of ballasting and preparing the roadbed; prices of ties advanced by 50 per cent, over the price of five or seven years ago. THE REAL RIVER THAMES.

Its Below London Bridge and Is to Small for Traffic Which Is Confined to London River.

[Baltimore:] The Thames that most of us know, says Ralph D. Paine, is a river in a fair country of lawns and meadows wonderfully green, of deep-wooded hills and parks of ancient trees where the levels between are lush and crowded with skiffs, launches and small pleasure steamers on every week end and night of shaded towpath under the Thames that flows by. Where it meets the sea, they call it London River, and in such it was famed in their chanties when the Yankee packets were beating up from the Atlantic and the bluff bowsprits swung abreast of Gravesend or dropped down past the Nore, to be hove to, plunging for sunset and sea room. But London River, but a fraction of the turbid procession of a seaport great and ancient.

Much of this commerce is hidden from the casual eye because the shipping is stowed along twenty-five miles of the stream. In the heart of the city itself the waterfront contains so many stretches of archaic picturesque dilapidation and such compelling associations with a storied past that Elizabethan England is rather suggested than the age of steel and steam and the wireless telegraph. There is no line of modern quays and wharves, no spacious harbor. The river is a great deal too small for its traffic and large ships must seek the inland docks dug out of the flat landscape far below London.

The coastwise craft and steamers trading with the ports of Europe huddle in the Upper and Lower Pool from London bridge to the reach on the seaward side of Tower bridge, or moor beside dingy warehouses that lip the tide, or are tucked away in secluded, obsolete basins behind walls and tenements where you would never dream of looking to find anything afloat. It is this antiquated part of maritime London which can be seen in glimpses from the bridges or the embankment, the close-packed steamers painted in many colors, the drifting barges, the agile tugs and over all a haze, blended of smoke and mist, which softens and mellows without concealing.

Raid Upon Crops.

ENORMOUS TAX PAID TO INSECTS.

WOULD PAY NATIONAL DEBT IN TWO YEARS.

Bill Before Congress for Protection of Insectivorous Birds for the Preservation of Fruits, Grains and Vegetables Against Loss Equal to the Entire Wheat Crop.

[Washington Star:] As an important measure for cutting down the annual "insect tax" of about $800,000,000 upon the crops of this country, Senator McLean of Connecticut has submitted to the Senate a report of the Senate Committee on Forest Reservations and Game urging the passage of his bill for the protection of migratory game and insectivorous birds.

The report deals with the relation between the decrease in game birds in this country and the enormous multiplication of insects which attack crops of fruits, grains and vegetables.

"Any one who has read recent estimates of the decrease in insectivorous birds and the increase of herbivorous insects," Senator McLean says in the report, "can readily believe that as the mammals succeed reptiles, insects will soon possess the earth, unless some agency is discovered to check their increase less expensive than arsenic.

"We are prone to bear the usual and slowly accumulated burdens with dull resignation and patience. The life and property losses and taxes that are inherited and constant, we take for granted. It is the concentrated and unusual calamities that shock and excite the spirit of opposition and the desire to prevent a reoccurrence.

"By the sinking of the Titanic, 1200 lives were lost and the world was filled with fear and sympathy. Tuberculosis claims 150,000 victims a year in this country, and pneumonia, 160,000, yet we bear this awful loss of life with the passing comment, perhaps, that it is a great pity. The San Francisco earthquake destroyed property to the value of $400,000,000. This loss was the superinducing cause of the panic of 1907, which reduced values by the billions. If it were known today that the country would suffer another such loss within its borders in the year 1912 the wheels of progress the world over would halt in sympathetic fear.

BIG LOSS FROM INSECTS.

"A short time ago the farmers of the country, especially in the Northwest, were much agitated because of the proposed reciprocity agreement with Canada. The loss which they, together with other farmers of the country, will suffer this year and which will benefit no one, will exceed hundreds of millions of dollars, the total value of the entire wheat crop of the nation.

As long ago as 1904, Dr. G. L. Marlatt, basing his estimates on the crop reports of the United States Department of Agriculture, asserted that the loss to the agricultural industries in that year, caused by insects alone, could be conservatively placed at $795,100,000, and this estimate does not include a dollar for the use of insecticides.

"Mr. Forbush, in his most comprehensive book entitled 'Useful Birds,' maintains that the insect pests destroy agricultural products to the value of $1000,000,000 a year. We use large numbers so freely in these days, both in science and finance, that hundreds of millions mean no more to us than hundreds of thousands did a few years ago.

"There are about 600 colleges in the United States today. Their buildings and endowments have been centuries in accumulation. The value of the colleges and university buildings is estimated at $260,000,000 and the endowments at $319,000,000. If they should be destroyed tomorrow—buildings and endowments—the insect tax of one year would replace them and leave a balance sufficient to endow thirty-two new universities in the sum of $10,000,000 each.

"We have in this country today about 20,000,000 school children, and the cost of their education has become by far the heaviest tax laid upon the surplus of the country, yet it costs more by many millions to feed our insects than it does to educate our children. If there is any way in which the vast and destructive tax upon the national income can be prevented, or stayed, or resisted in any appreciable measure, it would seem to be the part of wisdom to act without delay.

VALUE OF BIRDS.

"For many years individuals at their own expense and voluntary societies and representatives of the most civilized nations the world over have studied and investigated and estimated the value of birds to the human race. We call attention at this time to but a few of the estimates made, and such as seem to be fair and reliable, but enough, we think, to prove that in this country, at least, we have ruthlessly disturbed, if not destroyed, one of nature's wisest and most valuable balances between the birds and their natural food, and it is clear to those who know the most about this subject that unless radical and immediate measures are adopted to restore a sure, safe and natural equilibrium between insectivorous birds and their foods, the time will soon come when the annual loss caused by insects to agriculture in this country alone will be counted in billions instead of millions of dollars.

Drink Freely of Pure Water In the Warm Months

It Aids the Heated Blood, But Be Sure Your Water Is Pure.

The old idea that one should drink water sparingly in the hot months, though long disproved, is not without foundation in fact. If your drinking water is not known to be absolutely pure, drink sparingly of it at ALL times, and especially in summer. If your table water IS pure, don't be afraid to drink all you wish in warm weather.

The danger of copious water consumption in summer does not depend on the weather. The danger is in the water itself, and every local resident knows perfectly well that distilled water is the only kind to be depended on as pure. And of all distilled waters, it is generally conceded that PURITAS is the most refreshing and pure, beyond the slightest doubt.

You can drink PURITAS Distilled Water plentifully all day in summer and not feel "logy." The fact is, it is so thoroughly purified by our unique and advanced processes that it cleanses the system instead of clogging it, as is so often the case with the city water. PURITAS is not one of the "mineral waters." It is just pure, aerated, clear, cool water. If you want purity in preference to uncertain minerals, order a demijohn of PURITAS and drink freely of it.

You can serve PURITAS Distilled Water at your home at very little expense. A five-gallon, sealed demijohn will be delivered to your residence for only 40 cents, if your home is within the old city boundary lines. If you live beyond the old boundary lines, a slight charge is added for the longer delivery. Just telephone our main office that you want to try a demijohn of PURITAS — Home 10053, Sunset Main 8191. Or send your name and address on a postal. We make prompt deliveries. Los Angeles Ice and Cold Storage Company.

NOTE—Residents of the county are supplied with PURITAS through our regular agents. If you cannot find an agent in your vicinity, notify us and we will supply you from our main plant.

them, there was one man and one louse, or aphis, so destructive to the hop industry, and many of our most valuable fruits and vegetables, reproduce their kind at the rate of ten sextillion to the pair in one season. This number means 40,000 for every square inch of land that is above water. Placed in Indian file, ten to the inch, it would take light traveling at the rate of 180,000 miles per second 2500 years to reach the file leader.

"The potato bug is less fecund. One pair will reproduce from fifty to sixty millions only in a season. The natural increase of one pair of gypsy moths would defoliate the United States in eight years.

"These estimates I quote from Prof. Forbush, who, in turn, gathered them from the United States biological survey, and we may say that these cases are fair examples of the reproductive powers of the insectile world. Locusts, army worms and chinch bugs, unless checked in procreation, soon become countless hordes, devastating wide areas of the earth's surface.

RAPID INCREASE IN SIZE.

"It is to be remembered that insects live to eat. Some of them increase their size at birth 10,000 times in thirty days. Dr. Lintner of the New Jersey board of agriculture reports 176 species of insects attacking the apple tree. (United States Biological Survey.) About the same number attack the peach, plum and cherry trees. Dr. Packard finds 400 species feeding upon the oak; 300 attack the conifers. The number feeding upon cereals, grains and garden crops is also very large.

"The reports of the Bureau of Entomology show that destruction by some insects is widely spread, and is increasing. Dr. Marlatt estimates that the loss to the wheat-growing States in 1904 occasioned by the hessian fly was about $50,000,000. Dr. Shinar estimates the damage done to crops in the Mississippi Valley caused by the chinch bug in one year as high as $100,000,000. The Rocky Mountain locusts, in years of the greatest activity, caused the States of the Northwest more than $150,000,000 loss. Dr. Lintner estimates the annual loss to farmers caused by cut worms at $100,000,000. The terrible loss of $800,000,000 a year is fairly easy of proof.

"That the worm does not eat everything that grows is due to several causes—weather, parasites, fungi, insect diseases and insectivorous birds, and mechanically applied poisons, which are expensive, unnatural and dangerous. However large may be the share of parasites, fungi and weather in checking the increase of destructive insects, investigation shows that it is lamentably insufficient and the briefs of the bird defenders pretty clearly indicate that the birds have been, are and will be without question one of the most important agencies in staying the inroads of insect devastation. Men who have had this subject at heart and in hand for many years assert that bird life is one of the most indispensable balancing forces of nature.

BIRDS EAT INSECTS.

"We cite a few reasons in support of the foregoing. All birds eat and most of them eat most of the time, and they eat insects and little else. The old bird has just as keen an appetite as the young bird, and he is much larger and his daily ration in almost incredible.

Mr. Treadwell of the Boston Society of Natural History fed a young robin sixty-eight angle or earth worms in one day. Mr. Nash of the Ontario Department of Agriculture fed a robin seventy cutworms a day for fifteen days. A young crow will eat twice its weight a day of almost anything that happens to be brought before him. The State Ornithologist of Massachusetts, Mr. Forbush, by careful and painstaking observation has collected much reliable information on this subject. He has seen two parent grosbeaks in eleven hours make 450 trips to their nests carrying two or more larvae at a time. Sparrows, chickadees, vireos, martins and warblers made from forty to sixty trips an hour with their beaks filled with all manner of insects. Under the supervision of the United States Biological Survey the crops of 2500 birds were examined. Thirty grasshoppers, 250 caterpillars were found in the crops of cuckoos. In the crop of a nighthawk were found sixty grasshoppers and in another 500 mosquitoes. Thirty-eight cutworms were found in the crop of a blackbird. Seventy canker worms were found in the crop of a cedar bird. Prof. Schudi estimates the diet of a song sparrow at 1500 larvae a day."

The name Hamilton has been the strongest factor in the shoe business of Los Angeles for eighteen years. Mr. A. J. Hamilton passes into a well-deserved retirement, while his son determines to carry on the traditions which surround his name. This new shop opens with an entire new stock of America's choicest footwear. Here you will find shoes of individuality, character and style. Tomorrow Mr. Hamilton wants to see his old friends and many new ones at his store to inspect what is undoubtedly the most magnificent assortment of summer footwear in Los Angeles.

A Wonderfully Fine Stock of New Footwear For Women and Men

To show stylish shoes is not so remarkable, nor is it difficult to show shoes of fine quality, and it is easy to sell shoes of meduim price—but to combine the three—that is the problem which has been solved at this store. Come tomorrow and see a mighty array of Summer Footwear—an almost endless variety of new creations in colonials. Oxfords and boots at prices that are unapproachable.

WORKERS SHY AT STRIKE.

by some of the leaders has shown that not only are the unions in a state of lethargy but that several have disbanded for want of interest. The rest are in a demoralized condition. Recruits are coming slowly. There is little or no money in the treasury of the Central Labor Council. The subordinate unions report they have hard work collecting the monthly dues and that new members are scarce.

Satisfaction with the general climate of Southern California, the fact that many of the workers own their homes and the knowledge that a strike would only subject them to long months of idleness without even strike benefits—all these things have cooled the ardor of the rank and file of Los Angeles labor unions, despite the frantic efforts of the bosses to arouse interest.

MEETINGS ABANDONED.

The so-called "get together" meetings of the leaders have been abandoned for lack of interest. Inasmuch as these meetings were attended by the presidents, vice-presidents, secretaries and other officers, the lack of interest even among the high officials is significant.

The series of meetings were organized to keep up interest among the officers and to devise means for stimulating the members to more activity in the work of unionizing this city. The gatherings were well attended at first, but the attendance fell off by degrees until so few came out that it was decided to abandon them altogether.

The Expressmen's Union, which was organized some time ago with considerable membership, has practically disbanded and it is believed to be only a question of time when it will be given up entirely as there is no way of suppressing the number of independent expressmen who own their own horses and wagons and have plenty of chances to get advantageous stands.

The freight handlers', lumber handlers', union of common laborers and bootblacks' unions have been disbanded or else barely hold together with empty treasuries and no attendance at the meetings. The Clerks' Union was revived several months ago by a Miss Sturdevant, who was heralded as one of the best woman unionist organizers in the country, but it has not shown any strength. Should every clerk in the city attached to this union walk out on a strike their places could be filled in an hour with experienced workers. A new laborite walking delegate is on her way here to supplant Miss Sturdevant.

AT WITS' END.

The union bosses are at their wits' end to arouse enthusiasm. They have tried "get-together" meetings, parties and picnics. The walking delegates are paid for actual results and many are on tenterhooks lest they lose easy berths and be compelled to shoulder a pick and shovel and earn a living by the sweat of their brows.

And so as a last resort it has been determined to make one final effort against the open-shop principles maintained by the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association. The referendum vote is supposed to show the exact sentiment of the 5500 nominal members of the Building Trades Council. It is understood by the members that if they vote for the closed shop and a strike, there is no money to pay strike benefits. Their families must go hungry and their children be deprived of the benefits that accrue to every wage earner. But the laborite bosses speciously declare that if a strike of the building trades is called, it would not be more than two weeks before the contractors, builders, lumber mills, etc., would come to terms. This is a gross deception of the members, for statistics compiled by the labor unions show that only 20 per cent. of the general workingmen included in the building trades belong to the unions.

An effort is being made to get more members and the Great Register is being checked off by some of the unionite leaders in order to get a list of non-union men to be approached with a view of getting them into the unions. They will be cajoled, importuned and given all sorts of lying promises, but it is doubtful if under present conditions the fast-depleting ranks of the unions can be recruited to their former strength.

The plasterers, brick layers and masons do not affiliate with the other building trades and their members say they have no intention of joining a hopeless cause.

The labor union movement in Los Angeles is at its lowest ebb. There is a disposition being shown to work in peace and forego strife. Several of the most radical leaders have gone away and the promise of lasting carpenters into the union without the payment of dues has not met with success.

WOULD SHUT OUT FREE LABOR.

LOS ANGELES (Cal.) May 10, 1912.

Dear Sir and Brother: At the meeting of the Los Angeles County Building Trades Council, held on April 25, 1912, the following recommendations, coming from the executive board, were unanimously adopted:

(1) That we submit, by mail, to the entire membership the proposition of making a fight to enforce the Building Trades Council working card in this district and thereby give no man a chance to say that he did not have an opportunity to give an honest expression of his feelings upon this matter.

(2) Upon this proposition no raise in wage to be considered more than can be gained by mutual agreement.

(3) No action to be taken upon this proposition unless there be 60 per cent. vote in favor.

The question to be submitted as follows:

Are you in favor of making a fight to enforce the Building Trades working card and bring about absolute union shop conditions upon the jobs in this city and vicinity?

Vote yes or no. Understanding that upon the completion of the tabulation of the vote, that you will be called upon to act immediately, and it is expected that every man will respond without a murmur to the will of the majority, providing, however, that there is at least a 60 per cent. majority.

Brother: The Building Trades Council has, by its vote, decided that this year is the time to strike the blow that will forever free us from the evils of this so-called open shop.

You know and we know that, so far as the working man is concerned, this policy of open shop is the policy that has held the working people down for years.

Are you willing to shoulder your portion of the load in the fight for emancipation? If so, vote "Yes;" if not, vote "No."

This is the ballot:

Yes. ( ) No. ( ) Place "X" for vote. Local Union No. ——

Vote, fold and place in return envelope and return immediately.

Do not fail to vote.

ENGLISHMAN HARRY JAMES.

AND HIS MUSICAL HISTORY, PAST AND PRESENT.

Tale of Son of an English Lumber Dealer, Who from Altar Boy Became Sir Arthur Sullivan's First Assistant at the Famous Savoy. Would Go Grandoperaing Now.

BY JULIAN JOHNSON.

Of all forms of human description, biography is the dullest; yet in taking my morning text from James, first and last, I deliberately choose biography.

Most biographies are pale gray, rather nauseous in taste, dopey in effect, functionally disagreeable, but constitutionally of no effect, either for bad or good. Very few biographies should be written; instead, they should be forgotten. Yet of some great men, and some much-known men, and some interesting personalities, there should be biographies for the same reason that we put signposts at cross-roads: to prevent people from going astray.

I think Harry James needs a biography.

Therefore, perhaps, at the sacrifice of himself, I shall endeavor to give him one.

The important history of musical comedy on the Pacific Coast may be comprised within a decade, and since Harry James antedates that decade by one year, he figures in the history fro mcover to cover.

To Pacific Coasters in general, Harry James is like the universe: he simply IS. For most of us, he has always existed. And although this would imply that he is in his eleventh century, it is absolutely true that he is still a young man, and has the better part of his career before him, and all of his bigger ambitions.

Harry James is everything the other side of the box-office at Fischer's Lyceum.

The public remembers that once he had a musical company of his own at the Mason.

Those who know anything about the history of amusement affairs on this Coast recollect that he was the original conductor of the Kolb & Dill shows at Fischer's famous little theater in San Francisco.

Yet besides that—

Harry James was born in the city of London.

How many years ago? Between thirty and forty. Neither close upon one limit or the other.

It has been guessed that he was born with a cigar between his teeth, but these guesses are wrong. "Havanas" had not been written at that time. I am permitted to divulge startling facts as follows: He was born entirely destitute of clothing; he had not sufficient command of invective to call even the humblest broiler, and he was gifted with ten little toes and a high soprano voice. He has lost the soprano voice, but as he does no Salome dances we are not able to state whether the toes are still with him.

James pere was in the lumber business, and had a yard and building establishment employing 500 men.

At an early age James fils was beaten to the piano. He preferred cricket, and wept when sentenced to the keyboard. Many another great man of melody has done the same.

Later on, his parents moved to the old cathedral town of Gloucester, and thither went little English Harry. He began to take notice in his music. It is even recorded that he went to practice, on one or two angelic occasions without being thrashed.

He became altar boy in the cathedral, he studied the organ in addition to the piano-forte, and at 12 he was assistant organist in the great church, though to play the pedal manual he had to stand.

While serving as altar boy he learned many religious terms and phrases of which he still makes vigorous use, though in an entirely different way.

Shortly after his twelfth birthday, papa and mama sent the young genius to Taplow, a preparatory school for Oxford and Cambridge. After a very short term here he came back to Gloucester, and papa endeavored to start him in the lumber traffic, aptitude for which he immediately showed by demonstrating a wooden head.

Having petered out "at trade," he was chucked into Trinity College. He went through the artistic courses of Trinity like a whirlwind, and—when Sir Arthur Sullivan was dean—came out at 17, the youngest lad ever to take a diploma from the institution.

Back home once more, and again to the wood yard, but his measure was 4-4 instead of twelve-inch, and as a lumberman his record was rotten.

So he went down to London.

At this time Gilbert and Sullivan were producing at the Savoy, and Harry hied him to Sir Arthur, the same that had patted him on the head when he handed out his sheepskin, and, in polite, but determined language, he requested the famous man to make the pat good by giving him a job that at least carried the English equivalent of coffee and cakes.

Sir Arthur was a sport, and he did; and history records no sorrow upon his part for so doing.

Harry James became the melodious factotum of the Savoy, and everything that was to be done in music he did, from rehearsing stuck-up minor principals to sawing a second violin in the orchestra.

So he stayed through two seasons, and as the Savoy was only doing an opera a year, his full apprenticeship was served on two pieces, whose very names sound utterly strange to us today—"The Gondoliers," and "Rudigore."

The Carl Rosa Opera Company at that time was the premier traveling musical company of Britain. When the great London producers had finished their runs in the capital, the works went immediately to Carl Rosa for the other cities of England.

And, while youth of all work at the Savoy, this young man's superiors one night received a telegram from Rosa, saying that his conductor was suddenly ill, and that he was in desperate need of an able assistant to come on at once. Would they come to the rescue? They did, and the rescue, flying like Blucher to Waterloo, was young Harry James.

So, at 19, James was conductor of a real musical organization.

Here he met Marie Tempest, whom the late Carl Dufft of America wished to sign for a season in "the States." Dufft asked for a conductor, and Tempest, who admired the energy and precision of James, recommended him.

So presently a youth of that name, with a large English accent, a large hope, and a pair of large and eager eyes, steamed up New York Harbor and set a tremulous foot upon American soil.

Tempest's pieces were "The Queen's Mate," and "The Black Hussar," They served to make a pretty thorough-going American of James before the tour had finished.

Thereafter began a period of sturm and drang, which concluded with a fortuitous engagement with Weber & Fields, whereby he went out of New York to make all their out-of-town productions.

One day, so engaged, he went to Chicago, and there met a diffident, but kindly-faced German named Fischer, who came from San Francisco with some money and the belief that Weber-Fieldian comedy would flourish if transplanted to west slope soil.

Mr. James had a few small doubts, and Mr. Weber had large and almost prohibitive doubts, but having carefully and deftly separated Mr. Fischer from a roll of bills—Mr. Weber was the bank which made the great duo a financial success, you know—Mr. Weber ordered Mr. James to accompany the deluded German gentleman to his Golden Gate home, and lull him to rest as tenderly as possible.

Mr. Weber was the deluded one, however, and Mr. Fischer was the only one possessed of clear vision, for the entertainment which he had secretly ordered Mr. James to force for two months, anyway, ran hugely prosperous for two years.

That was in 1901, and with the exception of an Australian trip, Mr. James has been a Coast defender ever since, continuously engaged in some form or other of musical diversion in the Pacific States.

Now for the big ambish.

"When I get money enough," said Harry, biting a bit more than usual from the end of his cigar. "I'm going to Europe and study for two years. Study? You bet I'm going to study! When a man is too old to study, he is at the right age to die. I am going to learn music in every capital. I am going to absolutely master at least a half-dozen modern music-dramas—such pieces as 'Boheme,' 'Tosca,' 'The Girl of the Golden West,' 'The Jewels of the Madonna,' 'I Pagliacci'—and then return to America and produce.

"I want to do the biggest things in music, and I hope to do them in America, my adopted country, and the land I love."

And those of us who know Harry James, feel sure that his ambition will come to full realization.

If fate is against him, he will kick fate in the face till she hollers quits.

That's the sort of bulldog, That's Harry James.

The Week.

"THE WOMAN HE MARRIED."

MARJORIE RAMBEAU TO EXPLOIT NEW DRAMA.

Mission Play Making a Success With Lillian Burkhart as New Feature—Continuances of Bills at Fischer's Lyceum, Belasco and Burbank—Vaudeville.

Marjorie Rambeau will return to the Majestic Theater tonight and will give her many admirers in Los Angeles an opportunity of seeing her in one of the most successful roles she has ever played in "The Woman He Married," by Herbert Bashford. Marjorie Rambeau achieved a wonderful success in the North in this American play. It is a piece that appeals both to men and women. It is not a sentimental, wishy-washy story of a woman who violates the silken conventions of society, but it is a powerful recital of a woman's courage and ability, when she is prompted by love.

Briefly, Bashford's play is a story of a woman who had a wonderful voice and who used this voice as an entertainer in a cafe of the night life to support a mother and her brothers and sisters. When she was married her entrance into her husband's family was not pleasant, as his parents did not receive the bride with any great degree of warmth. Adversity finally overtook the couple. The husband needed money to permit him to continue certain work he had at hand which would insure him great financial returns. That money the wife obtained for him. She posed as a model for a great artist, a friend of her husband. A visit to the artist's studio by the husband led to the discovery of his wife having been a model. The husband misinterprets everything the woman has done, denounces his wife and the artist and finally drives his wife from their home.

In the height of his anger the husband describes his wife as the mistress of the artist. From a shrinking, crying, heart-broken woman, the wife evolves into a woman of courage, who is called upon to defend her honor. Believing that all is over between her and her husband, she turns on him and bitterly upbraids him for his lack of faith and good breeding in judging her unheard. Then she tells him the complete story. He begs her forgiveness, which she refuses for a time, and at this point the artist enters as it is in his studio that the scene takes place, and he lends his support to the wife. Then follows a wonderful piece of lovemaking, with the expected ending, which is a reconciliation between man and wife.

Mission Play.

Hearing all the characteristics of the runs which have made Los Angeles theatrical productions nationally famous, John Steven McGroarty's "Mission Play" will enter yet another week—its fourth—in its own new theater at San Gabriel Mission tomorrow afternoon. The week just closed has been the largest in point of attendance since the play's first presentation.

The coming week will be made notable by the debut of Lillian Burkhart in the principal feminine role. Miss Burkhart, known from one end of the country to the other, a few years ago as the foremost player of serious purpose who had ever entered vaudeville, and latterly as a leading clubwoman, suffragist and exponent of the art of the theater, will be seen in the original third and concluding act written by Mr. McGroarty, which was replaced, during rehearsals, by a new and entirely different scene.

The interpolated scene concerned the tragic fate of one Senora Josefa Arguello, who falls a victim to the stray bullet of a ruthless gringo invader, out shooting Indians. The original McGroarty act is dominated by Donna Dominguez, the incarnation of the old regime, who prophesies the coming glory of California, even as the acts which have gone before have faithfully pictured its early history. This gives the play a logical conclusion, and rounds out the past-and-present scheme of the author.

The original character will thus be first created via the talents of Miss Burkhart, who as a delineator of womanhood past and present, grave and gay, youthful and mature, has seldom been equaled, let alone surpassed.

The principal portion of the remarkably effective cast remains the same. Ban Herning continues his majestic and powerful impersonation of Junipero Serra, and the pictorial and pageant features of the drama are gaining in smoothness and effectiveness with each repetition.

Fischer's Lyceum.

"Tillie-e-e!"

"Yes, maw!"

"You'll have to keep on nightmaring for another week."

"Yes, maw!"

There's no two ways about it; Tillie certainly will, for "Tillie's Nightmare's" the most popular show in town, and the best the Fischerites have ever given. It has packed the Lyceum constantly, and still more have been unable to buy seats to see it. Naturally, they demand an opportunity to witness May Boley's greatest achievement, and "Pop" Fischer has been compelled by public acclaim to permit it, despite arrangements already completed to put on "Little Johnny Jones."

However, it is absolutely necessary to let May Boley and the Fischer Follies continue in "Tillie's Nightmare," and "Heaven will protect the working girl-l-l" another week—positively the last.

Seriously, "Tillie" is really worthy of another week. It is the best of the Fischer productions; it has all the elements to make it strong with the public—wit, bright, snappy lines, beautiful costumes, fine scenery, bright songs and remarkable dances.

With a plentitude of pretty girls, in catchy clothes, lilting ditties cleverly done; catchy comedy songs put over with sure-fire readiness, and comedy bubbling all along the line, it is small wonder that "Tillie" has been a furore. So it will run another week, with the bargain matinee at two bits on Wednesday, the regular Sunday and Saturday performances, and a show every night.

Positively a week hence the presentation will be of "Little Johnny Jones," with May Boley and the full Fischer company in the cast.

Belasco.

The combination of the return of Lewis S. Stone and the first stock production of such a splendid western play as "The Virginian" resulted in crowding the Belasco Theater at every performance last week to such an extent that a second week of "The Virginian" is a necessity.

The presence of Stone on the Belasco stage almost seemed like old times at the north-end house of the Morosco-Blackwood consortium, while the audience included hundreds of typical Belasco "regulars."

Harry James, A.A.M.M.

Players

Following "The Virginian" Stone and the Belasco company will give the first performances on any stage of Wilton Branon's play, "His Father's House," a piece for which much managerial promise is held forth.

Burbank.

It was an unqualified success—one of those unusual, spontaneous outpourings of enthusiasm that came to clever Lillie Laurette Taylor on the occasion of her first appearance in the capacity of a specialty-engaged star with the Burbank company. The more than cordial initial welcome extended to the young actress was repeated with no diminution at each succeeding performance of "Seven Sisters" during the week.

That Miss Taylor achieved a distinct triumph at the Burbank is stating the actual condition but mildly. No actress who has ever been seen at the head of the Morosco-Blackwood company has scored such an out-and-out hit, and while "Seven Sisters" merely permits Miss Taylor to display her talents as a comedienne of a very high order, in the succeeding plays in which she will be seen during her limited stay at the Burbank, she will be called upon to prove her worth and versatility by enacting a wide range of roles that will vary from light, flippant comedy to serious, powerful emotional parts.

The attendance upon the performance of "Seven Sisters" has been so immense and so many persons have been turned away from the box office, unable to get seats, that the piece will be continued for a second week, commencing this afternoon.

Grand.

Commencing Monday evening the Armstrong Follies Company will be seen in a lively musical comedy entitled "Playing the Races," in which the Baby Dolls will be the Ponies in addition to one real thoroughbred famous.

"Playing the Races" is one of the great hits in the Armstrong repertoire. It is a musical comedy, brimful of action, and enough fun to satisfy the most exacting. In addition, there are more than the usual number of pretty and catchy song hits.

Will H. Armstrong and Gus Leonard, the two popular comedians, have exceptionally choice roles and are certain to delight Grand patrons. Ethel Davis, the beautiful prima donna, will be seen in a new part, one that allows her ample opportunity to display acting ability as well as to introduce a number of new song successes, including "I'm Glad I Live in Los Angeles," written by Ed Armstrong, who will also be seen in a prominent part. Clara Howard, Hal Wilson and Will Armstrong will all sing new songs and "Meet Me at the Races," by the Baby Dolls.

Tuesday evening has been set aside for amateurs and professional tryout, in addition to the regular Armstrong performance, and Friday evening the Baby Dolls are all seen in a contest.

A matinee today and this evening are the last performances of the whirlwind burlesque, "Fascinating Flo," in which Ethel Davis is seen in the title role, that of an actress with many admirers. A number of fine musical numbers are heard.

Orpheum.

Bringing a breath of the whispering winds that sigh across Honolulu, comes Toots Paka, to top the Orpheum bill beginning tomorrow's matinee, with her troupe of natives, offering the songs, music and dances of old Hawaii.

Los Angeles has had so-called "Hawaiian" music and musicians galore, of all sorts and grades, from imitation negroes up, but in this case, the Orpheum will offer the real article, for Toots Paka is herself a native of Hawaii, educated there in its peculiarly pathetic music, and learned in its ancient dances, which are ceremonials among the peoples of the islands.

It is an offering of these, the genuine, old-time diversions, uncorrupted by the influx of the whites, that she and her troupe will proffer. The act, of course, is magnificently set, with the weird effects, so noticeable on the islands.

American farce has no better exponent than Edward Blondell, his "rube" is standard. Mr. Blondell comes next week with a typical low comedy, "The Lost Boy," in which he portrays a country bumpkin sought by a children's aid society, which has located him where he doesn't belong. The sudden change of surroundings of the boy is the basis for many odd situations, provocative of the best sort of fun. A capable company comes with Mr. Blondell.

Another sketch, most unusual in that it is played wholly by men, yet is chiefly about women, is "Fear," a story of the real West, with virility, strength and manhood reflected in its every line. The story is unusual, too, and the action moves swiftly, but consistently. "Fear" will be found among those "big" things which the Orpheum is offering so numerously of late.

Johnny Ford, who "can't make his feet kept still," is an eccentric comedian and dancer, who brings Roy Barton to do his piano work, while the Ford brand of song and dance is exemplified. Both in vaudeville and musical comedy Mr. Ford has won a high place, and his clever work has now placed him at the very top. He will afford much chance to laugh, even though one is compelled to marvel at his skill.

Blanche Walsh and her company in her tremendous playlet, "The Thunder Gods," the Van Dyck Trio in the miniature musical comedy, Wormwood's bright dogs and monkeys, and the Mankichi Japanese in their remarkable juggling, balancing and comedy, remain, with an unusual musical programme, and the world's news in motion views.

Pantages.

"The Soul Kiss" will be the feature at Pantages for the coming week. Julian Mitchell staged the original New York production of the big musical play, and is also responsible for the vaudeville version. As seen at Pantages, "The Soul Kiss" will consist of four scenes, including an even dozen big musical numbers, and half a score of spectacular dances, presented by a company of nineteen people, principals and chorus.

Among the principals appearing in "The Soul Kiss" are Diana Bonnar, lately prima donna with the Liberetti Opera Company; Vivian Whitman, lyric soprano; Virginia McAdams, A. P. Starck, dramatic tenor; George Ford and Lew Harris, Hebrew comedians, and Joe Reynolds. The production is under the direction of C. "Bob" Roberts.

The action of the vaudeville version of "The Soul Kiss" commences in the studio of a Bohemian artist, Maurice, in the Quartier Latin, Paris, whence the audience is transported to New York for a brief survey of the illuminated city in a scene on the tower of the Singer building. The Lusitania at her moorings furnishes the next scene, and the closing act is presented at the Bal Tabarin, Paris.

Pretty girls, clever dancing, and good singing, combined with the spectacular feature of the piece should, make it one of the big vaudeville events of the season.

Montie Brooks and Bert Harris, a young couple who will be regular features of the Pantages show if their present success continues, offer "A Mild Flirtation," the scene of which is laid in Japan. Special scenery, costumes, and lighting effects make this one of the prettiest acts recently produced. Bright songs, clever dialogue and some dancing make up the act.

Acrobatics and balancing, a routine exclusively their own, and a sensational finale which places them outside the ordinary acrobatic classifications, are promised by Carpos Brothers. Figaro juggles many novel bits of apparatus, but his best efforts are devoted to fancy manipulation of the Indian clubs.

The sixth and seventh numbers of the programme are to be announced later. In these added events Pantages promises a surprise which will be appreciated by every patron of popular vaudeville.

Empress.

Fred Karno's famous company of English comedians presenting "A Night in an English Music Hall" will be the big headline attraction of the fine new Sullivan and Considine bill opening at the Empress Theater tomorrow afternoon.

This is the second visit of this notable company of comedians to the Empress Theater, where last season they registered the biggest genuine fun of the year, and this visit will mark their farewell appearance in America. The act shows a stage upon a stage, with its two tiers of boxes on each side, where the audience create so much fun with the various performers.

The company presenting "A Night in an English Music Hall" consists of twenty clever players, while Charles Chapin, who is considered as the only rival as a stage "drunk" to the famous Billy Reeves, will again be seen in this role.

The second feature of the new bill will be J. Hunter Wilson and Effie Pearson, late of "The Three Twins" company, who will be seen in their splendid singing novelty "At the Reception."

Those who may remember fascinating Selma Walters, who scored a success here in "Seven Days," will again have an opportunity to see this clever young actress next week with Herbert Frank in "A Woman's Way," a satire on modern society.

El Cleve, late soloist with the famous Kilties, and one of the best-known xylophone artists in vaudeville, will furnish much of the musical portion of the new bill, while Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Reynolds have a combination of clever songs and witty dialogue that has always made them big favorites.

Adolphus.

Another big success is announced for production next week by Frank Morton and his splendid company when "My Cowboy Lady" will be presented, and that it will meet with favor goes without saying, as it will come in the form of a refreshing change after several weeks of burlesque. It is a musical farce of the highest order.

In the cast this week are Frank Morton, Jack Bradshaw, Joseph J. Janscekess, Ed Bellville, Loyd Hamilton, Evelyn Whaling, Gladys Vaughn, Winnie Baldwin, Emerald Green, an augmented chorus and the twenty little dancing Adolphus Kiddies, in new songs, costumes and delightful dances. Commencing a week from Monday, the Alpine Amusement Company with Jules Mendel and an all-star cast of favorites, opens for a special engagement at the theater beautiful—The Adolphus.

The San Gabriel Country Club presented an animated and joyous appearance Friday, when society gathered from far and near to assist either as players or enthusiastic onlookers at the tennis tournament and golf competition.

Yesterday the club entertained another gay crowd.

Little Miss Sevier Honored.

A table bright with Cecile Bruners and pink sweet peas, from which peeped many little fluffy chicks, characterized the pleasant birthday party given by Mrs. Laurence Roland Sevier at her home, No. 1014 Park View, in celebration of the fifth birthday anniversary of her charming little daughter, Virginia. The party was held Thursday afternoon, and to the delight of the small guests places were marked with music boxes. The eleven tots included: Helen Heath, Rowena Thom, Dick Wood, Virginia Guilli, Barbara Stephens, Margaret Wangenheim, Adalaide Wilson, Nidra Halfhill, Alberta Trueworthy and Zada Taylor.

Amateur Players.

The "Scientific American" in Commenting on the Wonderful

Melodigrand Piano

has made the following statement:

"The edge of the sounding board is rabbeted and glued into a continuous laminated rim, built of hard maple veneers or layers, so as to produce an exceedingly strong construction. As a result of this new combination of sounding board, rim, and sounding posts, a small upright piano can produce a tone which is comparable with a small grand piano, and the full round tone of the new piano is preserved because the sounding board is maintained in its original arched position."

Signor Haroldi says:

"I can say unreservedly that the Melodigrand is the most completely satisfactory and artistic piano I have known in my career.

"It is incomparable."

But One Standard of Diamonds

--that Standard Perfection

In making their diamond selections--Brock & Company consider but one standard--that standard is unqualified perfection. Our entire diamond stock is rigidly confined to absolutely perfect blue white and extra white stones. For this reason it is impossible for any one, however unfamiliar with the intricacies of diamond values, to make a mistake in purchasing a gem here.

Our showing of perfect diamonds and gem pieces is pre-eminently the most comprehensive in Los Angeles--embracing an almost infinite variety of fashionable new creations of transcendent beauty--the new combination gem pieces of brooch, locket and lavalliere--the new jabot effect in necklaces--the exquisite diamond-paved lorgnettes--the new diamond-paved flexible bracelets.

We want you to have the pleasure of seeing all these marvelously beautiful new gem pieces. You are cordially welcome to come here as our guest any time at your convenience.

The illustration here shows a magnificent gem-set and enamelled locket watch--value $725.00

Pink Dresden china favors perched on the edge of the water glasses were favors of the occasion. The pink scheme was carried out in the bon-bons, ice cream, which was in the form of Easter lilies, and on individual cakes, which were designed with Mrs. Alexander's initials.

Gold-edged pink cards marked the places for: Mmes. William B. Alexander, Rollin B. Lane, H. J. Whitley, Harwell C. Frost, Alexander B. Barret, Orville J. Eastman, M. Sweet, R. P. Riverside.

ONE of the brilliant social affairs of the week was the reception at the home of Mrs. Harry Hawes on Aurora drive at which Mrs. Hawes, with Mrs. Raymond Cree, received over 200 friends. The gathering was given in honor of Mrs. S. C. Chapman of Minneapolis, who is a guest of her niece, Mrs. Hawes. In the receiving line with the hostesses were Mrs. Hawes's mother, Mrs. Baldwin, her sister, Mrs. H. C. Cree, and the guest of honor, Mrs. Chapman. Assisting were Mrs. Miguell Estudillo and Mrs. W. B. Payton. Exquisite decorations prevailed throughout the spacious home, lavender and pink sweet peas intermingled with ferns brightening the dining-room and screened in veranda and Mamon Cochet roses prevailing in the living-room. In the library, which was also a bower of roses, was stationed the Glenwood orchestra which rendered a varied programme during the afternoon. Other musical numbers were the pleasing solos of Mrs. June Nutting Bernhart of Los Angeles. Refreshments were served from tables scattered about the dining-room and wide veranda, and favors of sweet peas and ferns were distributed among the guests. Mrs. Hawes was again hostess on Friday evening when, also in honor of her aunt, Mrs. Chapman, she received a hundred or more members of the Baptist Church, the denomination with which her guest is affiliated.

Other links of the chain of pre-nuptial affairs which have been a feature of the spring society events have been formed this week in the dinners and showers with which brides-to-be have been feted. Among them was a dinner given by the Misses Hosp at the Victoria Clubhouse Thursday afternoon in honor of two popular brides-elect, Miss Villa Seaton who will be married on May 22 to Thomas Walsh, and Miss Mabel Shields who early in June will become the bride of Clarence May. A fancy basket overflowing with Enchantress sweet peas formed the dainty centerpiece at the luncheon table and tiny pink baskets filled with bonbons were given as favors. Covers were laid for Misses Villa Seaton, Mabel Shields, Frances Seaton, Daisy, Mabel, Mattie, Della and Margaret Hosp, Mrs. Arthur Brouse and Mrs. W. C. Davison.

Another bride-elect, who has been successively feted throughout the spring months, Miss Winifred McDougall, has been the recipient of continued social favors during the past week. On Thursday afternoon Miss McDougall was given a kitchen shower by Mrs. W. H. Rimmer of East Fourth street. On Tuesday afternoon a whist party was given in her honor by Mrs. Gordon Wimpress of Lime street. On Wednesday evening both Miss McDougall and Mr. George Edward Wells, to whom she will be married next Wednesday evening, were entertained at dinner by Dr. and Mrs. W. W. Robles of Orange street. Other guests at the dinner were Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Simms, who were recently married, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Wimpress, Miss Jean McDougall and Mr. Schermerhorn.

Mrs. Retta Geedy of Los Angeles was given a banquet Wednesday evening by the members of the Mission Circle of the First Christian Church. Nearly fifty girls surrounded the banquet table which was spread in the parlors of the church. A programme of toasts followed the dinner and later an address was given by the guest of honor, who made an eloquent appeal for more help in the mission field. Music enlivened the meeting and the closing hour was devoted to informal sociability.

A reception and banquet given at the Mission Inn Thursday evening was the principal social feature of the P. E. O. State convention which con-

A delightful birthday party with the little lady, who is just beginning her second summer, was enjoyed, and the parents were the recipients of many congratulations on their daughter's behalf. A feature of the refreshments was the elaborate birthday cake, decorated with one candle and many pink roses, indicative of a rosey future. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. Walter K. Shaw, Mr. and Mrs. C. Henry Sarwine, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Ryder, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Shrode, and Mr. and Mrs. William Beardsley.

The thirty-five ladies of the Duarte reading circle were hospitably entertained Tuesday afternoon by Mrs. Richard Peer at her pretty home on Falling Leaf avenue. The rooms were brightened by the use of the spring's lovely offerings of roses and other cut flowers arranged in May baskets. Enjoyable readings and music were the forms of entertainment followed by tea. The members of the circle, after enjoying their books, make a practice of donating them to the public school library.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Fowler gave one of the most delightful functions of the week Thursday evening, when they opened their home on Duarte avenue, to the members of the Buena Vista Whist Club, and a few friends. The decorations, which were unusually beautiful, were carried out in yellow and white. Marechal Neil roses were used in the living-room with charming effect and fragrant white blooming and ferns were massed in the hall and dining-room. The same colors were in evidence when the tempting strands of supper were served. Whist was the game that provided the evening's diversion. The list of guests included Mr. and Mrs. John H. Bartle, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Chess, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Slosson, Mr. and Mrs. B. S. Armstrong, Mrs. E. M. Seymour, Miss Munro and Taylor Renaker of Monrovia, and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Buttolph, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Sarwine, Mr. and Mrs. William Beardsley, Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Shaw, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Among the social functions which are being given in honor of Miss Dolly Scott, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Scott, who is soon to become the bride of Bernard Allen of Lamanda Park, one of the most pleasant was the informal card party given Tuesday evening by Mrs. Alexander B. Downs at her lovely country home. A gay galaxy of young people were present to share in the jolly evening's pleasures. Exquisite roses were used to adorn the rooms, where the card tables were arranged, and late in the evening supper was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter K. Shaw and Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Sarwine motored to Mentone for a week-end house party, visiting Crofton before their return, and Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Shrode and Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Ryder were members of an automobile party, whose objective point was coast resorts near Long Beach.

A SOCIETY EVENT of much interest to the large company of friends was enjoyed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Parsons on Wednesday evening, when their only daughter, Harriette Allsen, was given in marriage to James Wesley Bradley of Kewanee, Ill. The home was beautifully decorated in wild mustard and sereens of pepper, and the yellow color-note was observed in all of the appointments. The bride's gown was an exquisite creation of white and yellow, being an imported robe of white chiffon with yellow and embroidered figures, and hung over white satin. She carried a shower bouquet of orange blossoms and wore a long tulle veil, which reached to the end of her train. The bride's cousin, Miss Villa Nye, attended her as bride's maid, and she wore yellow chiffon and carried white sweet peas and ferns, tied with yellow tulle. Promptly at 7 o'clock the bridal music began, played by Mrs. Edwin Eugene Corwin. In the library the bridal party were met by Rev. T. M. Price of the First Congregational Church, who read the Episcopal double-ring service. Mr. Bradley was attended by his friend, William H. Hall. It was a genuine May day ball given in a latticed summer-house of green with a rainbow canopy and decorated with hundreds and hundreds of pink roses intertwined with smilax. The queen's throne was a thing of beauty created from the same lovely flowers, and in it she received congratulations, and the pretty homage of the younger social set, of which she is a popular member. The association feted their young queen and her lovely maidens regally and the function was one of the most delightful events of the year. Smeby's orchestra furnished the music, which was all suited to a May day celebration. Messrs. Charles Davis, Hal Rives and Leslie Renaker were members of the Committee of Arrangements, and acted as the genial hosts of the evening, and as floor managers. About two hundred invitations were extended to Monrovians and their friends, and the floor was crowded throughout the evening. Inglewood.

ONE of the prettiest and most novel affairs ever given by the students of our High School occurred last Saturday evening at the High School building, when the juniors entertained the Seniors and the High School faculty. The dining-room had been converted by the clever juniors, who determined to make this yearly event one long to be remembered, into a veritable Japanese tea garden. The ceilings and walls were completely covered with pepper boughs and masses of scarlet geraniums; beautiful Japanese parasols were suspended from the walls while one very large one draped with wistaria formed the central figure under the chandelier; there were cosy corners hidden by palms, Japanese incense burned in mysterious looking jars and colored lights hung in Jack-o-lanterns shed a soft, pretty glow over this entrancing scene. The invitations to the affair were dainty and contained hand-painted bits of Japanese scenery and the young ladies were dressed as Japanese maidens. Following the grand march in the gymnasium, the guests were seated on cushions on the floor of the dining-room and served a real Japanese dinner from low tables covered with Japanese hand work.

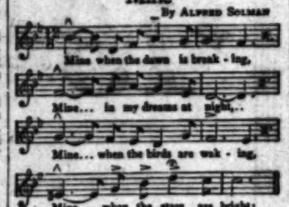
THIS LOVE SONG BROUGHT $15,000

What appears to be the most peculiar song yet written is a ballad just out called "Mine." It has thirty different harmonic phrases. Here is a simplified extract clipped from a sheet of the music just received:



For the copyright of this song, Joseph Morris, a Philadelphia man, is said to have paid $15,000. The words are no better than a thousand others, but the music is of a classical order, apparently written to educate the voice. The few copies that reached Los Angeles yesterday were eagerly seized by the fair sex. The song is out in five different keys.

Fifty Royal Princesses and Grand Duchesses Who Are Colonels of the Crack Regiments of Germany, Russia and Other Countries—Close Upon 60,000 Troops, in Theory, at Their Beck and Call.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

ST. PETERSBURG, May 6.—No longer is the Grand Duchess Olga, oldest daughter of the Czar of Russia, the youngest girl colonel in the world. She has been ousted from her position by her sister, Tatiana, who, in celebration of her reaching the warlike age of 15, has just been made colonel of the Fourteenth Regiment of Lancers, one of the crack Russian organizations, by her peace-loving father. Tatiana's birthday does not roll around until the 29th of this month, but so anxious was she to don the smart uniform of her new position that fond Nicholas could not resist her pleadings to advance the appointment. Whereupon both Tatiana and her elder sister were photographed together arrayed in all their regimental trappings.

Curiously enough, it was the grandmother of the two Russian Grand Duchesses upon whom the incongruous honor of colonel of a regiment was first bestowed. When Princess Charlotte of Prussia, sister of King Frederick William IV, married Czar Nicholas I, the German ruler gave the Russian autocrat a commission as colonel in his famous Sixth Regiment of Cuirassiers. The Czar's Prussian wife was passionately fond of military show and glitter, and attended most of the reviews with her husband, riding at his side as straight and erect as the best officer in the many legioned ranks. When Nicholas I died his widow begged her brother to transfer to her the colonelcy of the Sixth Regiment and, although such a thing had never been done bfore, King Frederick William agreed.

SHE WAS SERIOUS.

The Sixth Cuirassiers was the best regiment in the Prussian army and its strange colonel took her duties seriously. It seldom turned out to an important review without its petticoated colonel, and the sight of the superb line of stalwart soldiers swinging up with the Dowager Empress of all the Russias at its head, never failed to evoke wild enthusiasm.

From this beginning grew the small army of women colonels which is now to be found in Europe. Although it is impossible to keep track of them all, their number does not fall far short of half a hundred. In many cases the honor is an empty one and the woman upon whom the honor is conferred, has no bond of sympathy with the regiment which she, in name at least, commands. For instance, the late Queen Victoria was colonel of the First Regiment of Prussian Dragoons of the Guard, yet she never even saw them. And certainly never donned the uniform.

But in many cases the petticoated colonels are intensely proud of their positions, and are greatly respected by the men whom they command. The Grand Duchess Olga is a striking example. She is the colonel of the Third Regiment of Elizabethgrad Hussars, famed far and wide as the best fighters in the Russian army, with the possible exception of the Cossack regiments commanded by Alexis, her 7-year-old brother. The uniform is a beautiful one, and the youthful Grand Duchess makes a gallant figure as she leads her troops on great occasions.

The Grand Duchess Tatiana, who has just become the youngest of girl colonels, has not yet actually commanded her regiment. It is a crack regiment containing many daring and reckless horsemen, yielding nothing to the famous Cossacks in that respect.

If the mother of these two girls, the Empress Alexandra, took here military honors seriously she would seldom be out of the saddle. For she commands more regiments than any other woman in the world. She is colonel of no less than five, four Russian and one Prussian, made up as follows: The Twenty-first Regiment of Eastern Siberian Sharpshooters, which played a conspicuous part in the battle of Mukden in the Russo-Japanese war; the Regiment of Lancers of the Guard, which is named for her; the Fifth Regiment of Hussars, the Regiment of Crimean cavalry, and the Second Regiment of Prussian Dragoons of the Guard. But it is doubtful, despite all these honors, if she has ever donned the uniforms that go with them. She is a woman of delicate health, with a horror of war and a long-standing presentiment that her husband and her son are to die violent deaths. If she had her way she would abolish all regiments, all warfare, and even all petticoated colonels.

But it is in Germany that the women colonels are seen in their greatest profusion. The Kaiser creates them in batches every time he has nothing to do—which is more often than most people imagine. The leader of the German Amazons is his daughter, Princess Victoria Louise. She does not hold a supreme command, however, being only second head of the famous "Death's Head" Hussars, the Second regiment of Hussars of the Guard, which her brother Frederick commands.

GERMANY'S CROWN PRINCESS.

Probably no other woman colonel takes her position more gravely than does the German Crown Princess. Intensely fond of outdoor life, and of unconventional adventures, she was highly delighted when she received her commission as colonel in the Second Silesian Dragoons. Mounted upon her black charger, her head topped by the great black plume of her regimental hat, she never misses an opportunity of leading her men.

When the Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, mother of the German Crown Princess, rides forth as colonel of the Second Mecklenburg Dragoons, she looks for all the world like some warrior of many campaigns. For, in addition to her bright uniform, she wears, stretching across her breast, a collection of medals and decorations that Kaiser William himself would find it difficult to match. There are crosses and stars and medals and ribbons and sashes of many climes and countries. Unfortunately for her military record, these decorations were not won on the field of battle, but in drawing-room and audience chamber, and represent the efforts of Kaiser and Czar and King and Grand Duke to stand well with the head of one of the oldest houses in Europe.

Princess Eitel Freidrich, the wife of the Kaiser's favorite son and the handsomest and richest of the German Emporer's daughters-in-law, is colonel of the Twelfth Dragoons, while the Princess Adolf of Schaumburg-Lippe commands the Eighty-sixth Fusiliers.

All these German princesses lead their regiments at the annual Kaiser parades, which are held in August and September. The Kaiser takes their military efforts quite seriously, and compliments or criticizes each after the file past. Some of them, to tell the truth, have little sympathy with their work and with these unfortunate royal princesses the War Lord has little patience.

THE KAISER'S SISTERS.

Two of the most enthusiastic women colonels in Europe are the Kaiser's sisters, the Crown Princess Sofia of Greece and Princess Margaret of Hesse. The former was the favorite child of the Emperor Frederick and nursed him during his last illness. When he was about to die he called Sofia to him and said: "That you remain as noble as you always have been is the wish of your dying father." The Crown Princess is worshipped by the men of the Third regiment of Prussian Grenadiers of the guard, of which she is colonel. Her sister commands the Eightieth regiment of Hessian Fusiliers. Like their energetic brother, these two women are passionately fond of all things military. The Crown Princess of Greece, especially, is an authority on the lesser problems of the science of war and she boasts a considerable library of technical books. It is said that her father-in-law frequently consults her as an expert on matters of army organization and that he prizes her advice above that of many of his best officers.

The Kaiser's wife commands two regiments. She is colonel of the Eighty-sixth regiment of Prussian Fusiliers and also of the Hussars of the Guard of Grodno, a Russian regiment. The famous "Carmen Sylva," Queen Elizabeth of Roumania, who won the hearts of her soldiers by her devotion during the war of 1877, is colonel of the Second battalion of Roumanian light infantry. Queen Mary of England, whose thoughts are far removed from the call of arms, is a colonel of the Fifth Prussian Hussars, the crack regiment which is in attendance upon her as an escort when she visits the German court.

QUEEN OLGA, ADMIRAL.

Greece produces the unique case of a royal woman who holds a high command on sea. Queen Olga is the only petticoated admiral in the world. She is a cousin of the late Czar Alexander III, father of Nicholas II, and for many years she has spent much of her time and no little money in assisting Russian sailors who have become stranded in Athens. In acknowledgment of that work and also of the fact that her father, Duke Constantine Nicholaievitch, was an admiral in the Russian navy, the Czar conferred the honor upon Queen Olga. In addition, he gave her the special command of the armored cruiser Admiral Makarov, which is her flagship.

What if these fifty petticoated colonels suddenly rebelled against man rule and called their regiments to their aid? In theory at least they command close upon 60,000 of the best troops in Europe. Kaiser William, especially, would have a few warm moments before he collected the component parts of his "mailed fist." Nicholas the Peaceful would surely seek the safe refuge commonly supposed to exist beneath the family bedstead.

SERGIUS VOLKHOVSKY.

Czar's Daughters as Regimental Colonels.

The Grand Duchess Olga is wearing the uniform of the Third Regiment of Elizabethgrad Hussars, while her younger sister, the Grand Duchess Tatiana, is in the uniform of the Fourteenth Regiment of Lancers.

MEN OVER THE SEA.

Pierre Loti, the famous French author, may come to this country next year to attend the opening of his Chinese play, "The Daughter of Heaven."

Viscount Newry, eldest son and heir of the Earl of Kilmorey, has struck out in what is a new line of business for the more or less impoverished aristocarcy of Great Britain and Ireland. He has joined the Irish herring fleet.

Rev. Dr. Charles William Stubbs, bishop of Truro, who died recently at the age of 67, was one of the distinguished men of the Church of England, and no less noted for his Democratic spirit than for his sound scholarship and literary ability.

Lieut.-Col. Henry Yarde-Buller, D. S. O., the fourth son of the first Baron Churston, has been appointed as British military attache at Washington and at Mexico City. The colonel is 50 years old and has seen considerable service with the British army in various campaigns. He has been military secretary to the commander in chief of the forces in Ireland since 1910 and was the military attache to the northern European courts from 1906 to 1910.

Lord Morley, who had undertaken the task of editing the letters of George Meredith, has reluctantly been obliged to give it up because of the pressure of public duties, and the work is to be done by members of the family.

W. T. Stead, one of the Titanic victims, had, according to a London dispatch, been recommended for the Nobel prize for peace. There is no doubt he would have received it, as no one in Europe had worked more ardently or sincerely for peace and arbitration.

One of the quaintest and best-known characters in London—William Harris, sausage maker—is dead. Starting business at a little stall in old Newgate market, in course of time he opened sixty branches in various parts of London and became rich. He claimed perfection for his wares, and rhapsodized about them on the least excuse.

Prince Paul Troubetskoy, the sculptor, who is now in New York, carries a squirrel about with him in his pocket. He got the squirrel two weeks ago in Cleveland, he says. He was walking along the street, when the squirrel ran up to him and allowed him to pick it up. He took it to the park to set it free, but it refused to leave him, he says.

Robert A. Bishop, a former locomotive engineer, is keeper of the most powerful light in the United States, safeguarding all ships entering or leaving New York Harbor. It is called Navesink Light, is of ninety-five million candle power, and is located on a promontory near Sandy Hook, 250 feet above the beach. The keeper is a Yankee engineer and mechanic, a native of New Haven, Conn., and with his brothers owns a large farm near New Haven, which is said to have been in the family since 1639.

Rear-Admiral William P. Potter, the senior rear-admiral on the naval list, and an officer who established a brilliant reputation during the Spanish War (for which he was advanced five numbers by Congress,) has been placed on the retired list on account of age.

Virgil Connell, a sheepraiser of Antelope Valley, Nev., has invented an electrical device for protecting his lambs from coyotes. The device sets off an explosion every hour and the noise frightens away any coyotes in the neighborhood. Before they can make up their minds to come back again another explosion occurs and drives them still farther away.

BITS OF VERSE.

Perhaps.

Perhaps some day—some distant day—
We human folk will have our way
About most everything;
Perhaps the time will come when men
Will have a say-so now and then,
And humming birds will sing!

There are so many things that we
Would change, supposing we were free
To regulate the world;
Many a flag that floats today
Would droop if we could have our way,
And other flags unfurl.

No curtain lectures would there be.
No sickness on the rolling sea,
No time clocks we must punch;
We'd have no galling debts to pay,
We'd have two hours every day
For dinner, one for lunch.

Our weather would be always right—
No woman then would be a fright
In her curl-papered hair!
Oh, I would fain stop living here
Where everything is dull and drear,
And wait for Then, and There!
—[Baltimore Sun.

"Conquerors."

Ye who ascend into the cosmic blue,
Pledged to the glory of a mighty cause,
Clean-stript of cowardice, of self devoid,
Laughing to see the sudden yearning jaws
Of death below you in the swimming void—
How shall we name a tribute fit for you?
How shall we build a monument whose heigh
Shall match the marvel of your splendid flight?

Soldiers we are, before whose glorious deed
Praise topples prone, and pretty lips are dumb,
Ye gladly forfeit life and all it brings
That in the kindling centuries to come,
Men, free as gods, shall cleave the air with wings,
Shall stride their superstitions as a steed;
Mounting with ecstasy the waiting herds
Of willing clouds, unfettered as the birds.

Brave navigators ye, in ships of air,
Heralds of progress, servants of the race,
Great as Columbus was and yet more bold
Ye plumb the regions of uncharted space
That millions now unborn shall yet be told
How mind has conquered matter, everywhere!
Ye dare, that man may see himself supreme—
Lord of the air, and Master of his Dream.
—[Angela Morgan in Springfield Republican.

The Turn of the Years.

How may we know you, year of all?
You come, as others come,
Night-sandaled, and your flying feet
Set bells aswing in every street—
But you are dumb.

We run, unwearied travelers,
Still on the upward slope
Of life, to take your strong young hand,
To search, to dare, to understand—
Pilgrims of hope.

You lead us on, you lead us up;
We seek your Avatar
By fords of faith, the pass of tears,
Peaks of delight—O year of years,
You take us far!

And then you go. We hear your voice,
We know your name at last. . . .
You were the Future that we sought,
And all the years may bring us naught
But you, the Past.
—[V. H. Friedlander in Westminster Gazette.

The Gifts of Love.

The gifts of love are not for one alone;
Whose love is noble can no need deny,
And in his heart, as in a garden grown,
Are roses free to all who may pass by.

THE HELPING HAND.

"How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

That the good some men do lives after them is proved by the action of Josef Spitzberger of Vienna, who died recently at the age of 83 years. After his death it was found that he had bequeathed 2,500,000 crowns for the establishment of a new children's hospital. This fortune was accumulated by a life of hard work, accompanied by the severest self-privation.

Spitzberger was for many years head cashier of a large flour milling concern in Austria. He seems to have been born thrifty, for at a very early age he gave up taking sugar in his coffee and persuaded his parents to give him the few pennies saved in this way to put in the savings bank. And as he began, so he continued throughout his long life, contenting himself with the barest necessities. Every penny he could save went into the bank.

For many years he lived in a small, miserable room in a poor street in the suburbs of Vienna. The room had neither stove nor light. To keep warm when he was not at business Spitzberger visited the museums and art galleries and to save the expense of light he went to bed when it grew dark. He mended his own clothes and his whole wardrobe consisted only of one suit and one shirt. During his last years he lived literally on dry bread and tea made fresh only once a week. He drank this decoction without any sugar.

Spitzberger was a frequent visitor on the Bourse and made a good deal of money in lucky speculations. He was interested in public affairs, but never bought a newspaper, going at half-past 6 o'clock every morning to read the sheets pasted outside the offices of the Journals.

To all the remonstrances of his friends he replied: "Your pleasure is to spend—mine to save. Leave me my pleasure; it is all for a good purpose."

Spitzberger never married and with the exception of some small legacies to relatives, has left his whole fortune for the children's hospital.

The newsboys of New York City have their friends. The old New York Historical Society building has been purchased for the Newsboys Home Club at a cost of $80,000. A benefit concert in aid of the purchase was held last week at which several of the most prominent theatrical artists in the city appeared. Mayor Gaynor sent his personal check for $100 to help swell the fund. Besides this movement the newspapers of the city have combined to raise a fund of $30,000 to remodel and equip the building in every particular, and a summer camp on Staten Island is planned, where the boys will have a vacation during the summer.

Several years ago William H. Prickett, a circus bill poster at Marion, Ind., risked his life by running into a blazing house and carrying the two daughters of Frank Horch to safety. Last week, while at work on a farm, and with only eleven cents in his pocket, Prickett was informed that he had inherited $25,000 from the man whose daughters he had saved from being burned to death.

Jerry A. Dix, a wealthy wrapper manufacturer of Millville, N. J., made the announcement last week that in a will which he recently made he had provided that at his demise $10,000 be used toward founding a hospital in Millville. He said, however, that on later thought he had decided to donate the money during his life, and that he now was ready to give the amount as soon after a hospital association was organized as practicable. A preliminary meeting has been held and an organization will be effected at once.

She is well known in woman's suffrage circles, having made a recent visit to New York to interest the women of the South in the movement to the question.

Nevada, Cal., has a woman-suffrage editor—Miss Mamie Reddy Taylor. She is a newspaperwoman, who is highly popular. She made a new record this year by hunting up every voter in her bailiwick, spending ten hours a day in the saddle. She took her book to county dances, too, and not a man or woman escaped without registering.

Mrs. George Stwire Waters, wife of the head chief of the Yakima Indians in the State of Washington, has just been raised to the position of chief by President Taft. This is the first time an Indian woman has been honored by appointment to any office on the Yakima Reservation.

Miss Charlotte Rumbold and Miss Mary E. Buckley are the first women to be nominated for places on the executive board of the Civic League of St. Louis. Placing women on the board is the result of a direct primary conducted by the nominating board.

Miss Carrie A. Tennant, a young woman from California, is the secretary of the Hindu Marriage Reform League, which has its headquarters in Calcutta. During the past year Miss Tennant is reported to have visited every province in Indian and to have established thirty branches of the league for men and fifteen for women.

OVER THE SEA.

Ever since the battle of Waterloo the Rothschilds have been the actual rulers of Europe, and the European nations are so in debt to them that it would be impossible ever to pay them off, said David Starr Jordan, president of Stanford University, in a recent address to the student body.

Arrigo Boito, who has just been nominated by King Victor Immanuel of Italy as one of the new Senators, is famous as a musician, and well-known as a composer and writer. He is a native of Padua, but Milan is his home by adoption. There he won his first successes in 1862. His "Mephistopheles" is the work by which he is best known to the general public.

Miss Ann Ansell of Weybridge, Surrey, who recently died at the age of 87 years, was an exceptional example of long and faithful domestic service. Throughout her whole lifetime she had only one "place." At the age of 16 she entered the service of the family of the late Sir Prescott Hewett, and she remained in the same family, as nurse and faithful friend, for seventy-one years.

Rev. S. Baring Gould, author of the hymn "Onward, Christian Soldiers," recently celebrated his seventy-eighth birthday at his home in North Devon, England. For fifty years he has been a prolific writer, handling with amazing ease theological studies, historical researches, romances, novels and sermons. In all that time his clerical work has not suffered.

Gen. Count Nostitz, who has been the Russian military attache at Paris, has been transferred to St. Petersburg, where he will occupy the important post of chief of the general staff, the habitual road for becoming Minister of War, as the Russian Secretaries of War, according to the proverb, "seldom die and never resign." The Countess Nostitz is an American and has entertained so lavishly and successfully in Paris that she will be much missed in the society of the French capital.

THE UNCHLOROFORMED.

Daniel J. Evans of Scranton, Pa., who has observed his eighty-ninth birthday, is known among Welsh people as Daniel Dhue. He is a bard of standing, both in this country and in Wales. For many years he was a prominent member of the old Welsh Philosophical Society. He was born in Tralech, South Wales, and has resided in Pennsylvania since 1852.

John H. Whittier, of Cornville, Me., who is now in his one hundredth year and the second oldest resident of the State, sawed and fitted for two stoves during the past winter all the wood that has been burned by a family of five. He is preparing to help with the spring farming, and he says he is as strong as he was twenty-five years ago.

James L. Cowles, the father of the parcels post movement in this country, is nearly 80 years of age, but is still remarkably active mentally and bodily. He is secretary of the Postal Progress League, with an office in New York. He was graduated from Yale in 1866 and returned twenty years later to take up the law course.

The oldest marcher in the men's division of the suffragists' parade in New York was James T. B. Ives, of Andover, N. H. Mr. Ives is 73 years old, and is declared by his fellows in the movement to be the most enthusiastic of them all. There are said to be more than 1000 men in the Suffrage Club in New Hampshire.

Gen. Benjamin Franklin Tracy, who fought through the Civil War with a regiment which he organized and served as secretary of the navy in the cabinet of President Harrison, celebrated the eighty-second anniversary of his birth by putting in a good day's work at his law office in New York.

John Lee, the negro valet of Gen. Robert E. Lee, is still alive at Lebanon, Ky., where he has made his home for the past three years. He is now 87 years old. He was a constant attendant of the famous Confederate soldier in every engagement throughout the long war, even up to the day that Lee surrendered at Appomattox. He is exceedingly proud of the honor of having been the constant servant of the greatest of Confederate generals.

The Barnes family of Charlestown, Ind., is a strong contender for the twin championship of Indiana. Five sets of twins are now thriving in the family.

When Lafcadio Hearn married his Japanese wife, all of his wife's family accompanied him to his new quarters. He mentions that he had nine lives dependent on him—wife, wife's mother, wife's father, wife's adopted mother, wife's father's father, two servants and a Buddhist student.

William Grant of Northampton, Mass., owns a cat that furnishes him with fresh fish. The cat enjoys sitting at the edge of her owner's ice pond, it is said, and scooping up unwary fish with her paw. The cat has brought fresh fish to the house several times.

Mrs. Frank Ireland of Wilton, Me., has a begonia which she thinks cannot be beaten for size in the State. The plant is seven feet and one inch tall and the stalk is two inches in diameter at the base. It began to blossom in December and has blossomed continuously since. There are now twenty pink and white cluster blossoms on the plant.

Weld is the only county in Colorado in which an entire school district is owned by one man, and the pupils in the district are all his children. This is district No. 94, east of Harding, owned by S. Sanford, where Gladys Gaylar is employed to teach Sanford's two sons. She must walk a mile to the schoolhouse each day and put in the regular school day to secure her wages from the county.

H. W. Hoffman, editor of a weekly newspaper at Seminole, Okla., will be the cause of Atty.-Gen. West passing on a dense legal knot. Hoffman is a justice of the peace as well as an editor. There are two other justices of the peace in Seminole. Business competition among the three is keen. Hoffman recently became inebriated. He knew his contemporaries would be looking for him, so he had one of his constables open his court, where he arraigned himself, assessed a fine of $25 with thirty days at hard work. The next morning he joined a jail gang and put in the day working on the roads near Seminole. The next morning, however, he paroled himself under good behavior and paid the fine. The following day a constable from another justice's office appeared with a warrant for Hoffman for the offense which he claims he had answered. A request has been made of Atty.-Gen. West to determine if Hoffman was in jeopardy when in his own court.

Count Took It Easy.

[New York Sun:] Colonel Alexander S. Bacon, president of the Men's Equal Suffrage League, of Brooklyn, said the other day to the New York Sun.

"Yes, it's true that you won't find many American peeresses enrolled under the suffrage banner. The girl who lets a foreigner marry her for her money is, any way, a rather poor specimen.

"There's a New York man whose daughter, during a winter in Nice, got engaged to a certain Count Beau de Beaumont. The New York man was rich at that time, but, a few weeks before the date set for the wedding, he went to smash.

"'My dear Count Beau de Beaumont,' he groaned that night 'I'm very sorry for you. You are to marry my daughter—you were to have had $35,000 a year—but the crash has come. I'm ruined now. How sorry am, Count!' "

"But Count Beau de Beaumont gave the New York man a reassuring slap on the back.

"'Oh, don't you worry about me, sir,' he said, with an easy laugh, 'With a title like mine, you know, I can find another heiress tomorrow.' "

Never before have Christian women been able to solve the secrets of these oriental beauties, whose faces and forms have been the marvel through the ages. But at last the treasure-trove has been unlocked, and there is set before every American lady who writes immediately, the full knowledge of these methods.

The Princess Tokio Wrinkle Book is a message full of sisterly feeling and sympathy for the American ladies. It tells, without hesitation, all about the Princess Tokio new method of removing wrinkles without harmful creams, pastes, lotions, or plasters, or mechanical appliances.

Reports from all over America prove conclusively the wondrous excellence of this remarkable new treatment and it is simply astonishing the thousands of letters being received from grateful women. A letter today from Mrs. H. H. Campbell states she used this treatment for two weeks and her wrinkles are all gone, and she further states that her face is as smooth as it was when she was a girl and that she is so happy that she cannot say too much in praise of this remarkable new treatment.

Ada Colville of Texas states that she used the treatment eight days and her face is entirely free of wrinkles and she is so delighted that she has found something that will keep her young longer.

A letter just received at this office from Mrs. A. L. Merran, away off in Canada, states that she was delighted with this new combination wrinkle treatment. That it removed all her wrinkles and leaves the face smooth as an infant's and makes the skin fresh and young looking.

Mrs. E. W. Jones in her letter states: "The Princess Tokio Wrinkle Treatment is excellent." She further states that it not only removed her wrinkles, but made her face as soft and smooth as velvet, and that she never before found a remedy which would make her young-looking, and that she tried Chicago and New York treatments without success.

From the glowing letters of praise pouring in, it is evident that this remarkable remedy has created a veritable sensation and furore in the fashionable homes, and prominent society women and actresses adopt this method of remaining young-looking, banishing all signs of age.

ART AND ARTISTS.

BY ANTONY ANDERSON.

...Mystery of Moonlight.

The necromancy of moonlight, its static and transforming mystery, is a theme with which Charles Rollo Peters has occupied his fine artistic talent for many years, winning thereby an international reputation. Over and again he paints daylight objects, but his real successes have been with the green, blue and purple mysteries of the moon.

This well-known San Francisco artist is now holding an exhibition in the Steckel gallery,... No. 256½ South Broadway. The exhibition ...ended on May 5 and closes next Wednesday evening. All who are interested in finished and expert craftsmanship should go to see these interesting pictures. This is Peters's second exhibition in Los Angeles. ...first was held in the Gould gallery several years ago, winning much favorable attention from art lovers ...the press. The present exhibition is stronger than the first, and shows that the painter is a close and untiring student of some of the most difficult phases of nature.

As you enter the gallery you will be struck with the boldness, the originality and the noble simplicity of "To Fade the Works of Man," a moonlight study of the ruins of Corfe Castle, in England. The ruins lop a tremendously impressive round hill, and their broken towers seem to be entangled in the brilliant stars of the night. Below this desolated grandeur a thatched cottage nestles in slumber, and a pool lies asleep.

This picture has a greenish moonlight, and so has "The Tower," with its mysterious shadow overlooking the sinister street of old London. There are cheerful lights in the windows of the quaint houses, and the tower itself is touched with moonlight. From London we go to California. The old adobe in "Souvenir, San Francisquito," is bathed in the light of the moon. The transparent bluish shadows in the foreground are beautifully rendered, with no suggestions of the heavy browns often found in nature's night shadows.

"The Quiet Night" gives us the corner of an old street hidden in a deep shadow. "Tarder" is wonderfully truthful; the roses on the trellis along the porch show their pink even by moonlight, though the color is hidden. "Garcia River" and "The Anchor Light" are both small but effective canvases, differing widely in color scheme, the one hinting blue moonlight, the other green.

There is gravity of handling in "Los de la Luna." The trees lean above the old house as if in loving intimacy. The moonlight falls, blue and beautiful, on the adobe wall of the house. "Golden Moonrise," whose scheme of color reminds you of nothing else in the exhibition, has lovely amber tones through its sky. The same pale gold is drawn over the dusky gray clouds afloat through all the heavens. The picture is charming and poetic.

And now we come to scenes not visited by glimpses of the moon. "Peasant's Gold" is a mosaic of ruddy sunset colors on roofs and walls of a quiet English village. "Embers of Day" has a sky of brilliant orange, and a hill that is modeled with fine simplicity. In "Beyond the Town, Yarmouth, Maine," the red woods in the foreground look like blossoming sorrel on a grass. The same color, greyed, appears in the houses, which are quaint and old-fashioned. Grays are also skilfully handled, contours subtility felt in "La Manana, Tamalpais," while the refinement of color in "The House of the Witch Elms" brings oils to the delicacy of pastels.

The group of houses in "The Clustering Town" reminds one of our own Church of the Angels as it stands in dignity against its background of California hills. The same hills are here, the same trees, and the houses, close together, look oddly like a church. The picture is agreeably mellow in color.

On the whole, an interesting and notable exhibition of pictures painted by a master craftsman, and one which you cannot afford to pass by.

Antonia Melvill is always a serious painter, one who puts thought into her work. And the result, though sometimes a trifle labored, is never uninteresting. In the present exhibition she shows a figure piece entitled "Charity," which has much of the noble religious feeling of the old masters. In composition, too, it suggests those well trained and careful painters, and in its naive sincerity. There are two figures, a woman and a child, and the lavender grays of the flesh tones of both faces are very attractive.

In "The Boat," "Doorway, Toledo," and "Il Sandalino," we have three characteristic examples of the work of Ralph Fullerton Medina, all the canvases, though small, being good. Medina's work has an element of sadness. In a very different mood is that of Raffaello Montalboddi, who shows a portrait of the Countess Vivari, loosely painted in pinks and lavenders, a delicate and refined profile presentation of a high-bred lady holding a fragile tea cup. "Cock," by the same painter, though clever, in a way, has hardly enough dignity for public exhibition. The sketch was painted, someone breathlessly and admiringly told me, from the "leavings" of the artist's palette. This looks highly probable, and it's a pity he hadn't enough paint left to give the brilliant rooster some atmosphere. As he stands astrut before you, he is further away than his background.

There is a fine seriousness in Granville Redmond's three landscape offerings, a competent sureness of hand, that commend them to lovers of good painting. "Where Smiles the Cup of Gold" has plains, covered with poppies, that reach toward a distant sea line. "Early Moonrise" shows us the orb of night appearing over low hills that have the cool tones of late afternoon. "Evening," though a very small canvas, is very complete, very satisfying technically.

Elmer Wachtel's fine landscape of California, "The Silent Hills," mentioned before in these columns, takes the place of honor in the exhibition both because of its beauty and its size. Marion Kavanaugh Wachtel shows her Arizona water color, "Desert Showers," which has also been mentioned before. It is a characteristic example of her work, the shadow in the foreground being wonderfully well painted.

An interesting figure study is Jessie M. Washburn's "The Finishing Touch." A young girl is gazing fixedly into an old oval gilt mirror while she adjusts some violets at her corsage. The difference in values between the real figure and the reflected one is subtlely and skilfully shown. The candles and crystals round the mirror are also dexterously suggested. But the bare arms and neck of the girl seem a trifle hot in the shadows.

There is good painting in Max Wiecsorek's "The Pergola," which gives us the sunlight of California and its riot of flowering climbers.

Estelle Heartt-Dreyfus,

Who will present an interesting "Purpose Programme" of the "Rhymes and Rhythms of the Romany," at the Woman's Club House next Friday evening.

The exhibition remains open till the end of May.

California Art Club Again.

Edgar Keller held a one-man exhibition in the Steckel gallery a month or two ago, and on this occasion, we saw the three fine canvases he now shows at the California Art Club. All are worth seeing again, the October landscape, the Arizona pueblo at sunset, the winter evening at High Bridge, N. Y., for all are the serious efforts of a close student of nature and a skilful painter.

There is majesty in the blue gums that Aaron Kilpatrick pictures on a large canvas. They stand in a row on a height overlooking a valley far below. Ralph Fullerton Medina's "Late Afternoon" has fine qualities of tone. Charles H. Owens, water color, "Desert Moonrise," is simple and effective, in line and color. The moon, directly behind the butte, is seen through a rainbow mist of light. Hanson Puthuff's "Glowing Cliffs" shows cliffs that glow with a somewhat dull saffron light, but nevertheless, it is a fine study of sea and rugged shore. In "Tenacious Oak" this artist makes a really big thing of a simple study of bare earth, some rocks and a tree, in a tawny color scheme that is singularly attractive.

I'll divulge a secret, correctly guessed by me. William Wendt's beautiful, landscape, "Arcadian Hills," comes from Southern California—Arcadia, if you choose to call it so. Certainly, it is noble enough for any poetic title. Note the bigness of its treatment, the harmony of its sky, the subtle atmosphere that broods over the whole picture. Truly beautiful, and beautifully true, is this artist's study of rocks and delicate verdure, "Where a Spring Lies Hidden," also painted, I feel sure, in Topanga Canyon, the scene of "Arcandian Hills." In "A Reminiscence," big sketch done in a big way, we see the sky at the end of a stormy day. Behind cloud racks, the mountains are glorified by light.

There is great harmony of color in Jack W. Smith's "Breaking Wave," truth and close observation in his "Rainy Day," a vista of South Main street. Detlef Sammann's three landscapes, all good, have been spoken of before.

This exhibition, held under the auspices of the Friday Morning Club, remains at the Woman's Clubhouse till the end of the month.

The portraits of Helma Heynsen Jahn are always interesting. Her feeling for character is quite unusual, and she handles oils and pastels with almost equal facility. She has just finished a portrait of a little girl, Katharine Spangler, in pastels. It is sympathetically conceived, and handled with authority and decision. The charming child in white, her bright hair is ribboned in blue. Mrs. Jahn is also working on an oil portrait of Jotham Bixby, Sr., of Long Beach, which promises to be a powerful piece of characterization. The portrait of Mrs. Burton Williamson will follow this—and then the artist will sail for Europe, to be gone a year or more.

Two of Hanson Puthuff's latest landscapes, both painted near San Jose, are now being exhibited in the Daniell studios, No. 218 South Broadway. Puthuff is one of the strongest of our exponents of Southern California landscape. His pictures are bold, vigorous, full of air and sunlight. The hills and mountains have grandeur and weight. The artist's finest characteristics are found in both the new pictures, which are important in size as well as artistic quality.

An exhibition of water colors and monotypes by Helen Clark Chandler will open in the Royar gallery, No. 744 South Hill street, tomorrow, to continue for two weeks. Some work of exceptional charm and beauty will be shown. Miss Chandler studied at the Marks Hopkins School of Art in San Francisco, with MacMonnies and Delacluse in Paris, with Birge Harrison in Woodstock, and with Arthur W. Dow in New York. She was for some time instructor of art in the Normal School of Los Angeles.

The Daniell galleries will close next Saturday, not to reopen till the end of summer. Hugo A. Possner will use two of the rooms as a studio. Possner is a Boston artist who came to Los Angeles about six weeks ago. He has also been instructor of art in Providence, R. I.

Gertrude Estabrooks, known for her brilliant studies of flowers in water colors, has left her studio in the Auditorium Tower, Chicago, and will spend the summer in Los Angeles, the city of roses. Her present address is No. 235 West Adams street.

Following the decision of the Executive Committee made on May 4, the business of the California Art Club will be suspended until September, when the members will be called together to prepare for the third annual exhibition.

Max Wieczorek has just painted a charming pastel portrait of Miss Emily McBride, the young daughter of Dr. J. H. McBride of Pasadena. The sitter wears a pale green silk gown with white pearls, and has a boa thrown loosely round her neck. While catching the youthful freshness and delicacy of her face, the artist has made it fine and individual.

CRANKS.

J. C. Williamson, a Confederate veteran of Louisville, Tex., 73 years old, says he is not too old to marry a Georgia girl if he can find one who will have him. For the twofold purpose of seeking a bride and attending the Confederate reunion at Macon, Mr. Williamson has walked exactly 932 miles. He began his trip from Louisville on February 26. "I've found out that talking and good looks don't always win a woman," said Williamson. "So I am going to do something else. I'm going to station myself right in the principal part of town and see the girl I want. Then I'm going to find out if she wants me."

John C. Hall, a successful builder, who died the other day at Warren, R. I., aged 94 years, on account of strong political feeling aroused at the time of the Dorr rebellion in Rhode Island, in 1842, refused for sixty years thereafter to cast a ballot. Finally, in 1902, he went to the polls to vote for a friend who was a candidate for office.

"I don't want to be free from prison. I expect to die here," declared Charles Johnson, a life-term convict in the State prison of Minnesota, at Stillwater, ten years ago, and he has steadfastly adhered to it ever since. He could go free without a word of petition, but he is content to remain in the penitentiary. Under the law which allows inmates of the prison to do extra work after the daily task, Johnson has accumulated $1228. In addition, he has had money for extra toilet articles and clothing. A friend not long ago offered him a home for the rest of his days on a fine farm near Graceville, Minn., but he declined. Johnson is 64 years old, was never married, and has served the longest time of the 195 life convicts now in the State prison, five of whom are women. All the others have desired freedom.

MILITANT SUFFRAGE.

JULIA FRANCE AND HER TIMES. By Gertrude Atherton. The Macmillan Company, New York.

THE sedentary female, made respectable by ages of honorable employment among the fictioneers of old, is now being abrogated. The style in heroines has undergone a radical change of late. The pallid ages of yore are being lost in oblivion. Come now to the front the emancipated heroines—the Portias of modernity—creatures for whom a skirt seems out of place, whose long hair and polished nails are mere concessions to the conventions. The Manon Lescaults and Anna Karenintas are now but corpses in the fictional ossuary. The modern heroine would not stoop to alluring men by feminine charms, by subterfuge and indirection, by deftly-applied rouge and poudre de riz. Perfumed missives and verbal inanities by moonlight are no more. Silken ankles ingenuously displayed . . . a fluttering fan painted by Carlo Van Loo . . . the petticoat that rustles . . . drooping lashes . . . a sigh—oh, where are the wiles of yesterday?

This change—this modernization and uncorseting of the feminine—started in the Cafe Luitpold. "Love's Comedy" made women restless; and from that day to this all of the subIbsens, pseudo-Ibsens, semi-Ibsens and femino-Ibsens have been hammering away at the bulwarks of romance. The modern heroine is not seldom a lawyer, a physician, or a mercantile proprietress. Where once the blushing bride sought her tatting the modern heroine goes duck hunting, or automobiling, or deep-sea fishing, or lobbying. Our modern novels place emphasis not so much on the physical beauty of their heroines as upon their masculine accomplishments. Conversation regarding pis tins and lase insertion has given way to glib jargon relating to carburetors, ultimate forces and Mendelism.

Perhaps the most popular of these modern women is the political leader, the martyr to the cause of equal rights. Few heroines nowadays can reach the back cover of the novel without having aired their views on inherent rights, poll taxes and pluralities. The most recent and the most aggressive of these super-heroines is Julia France, the principal character in Gertrude Atherton's new novel of politics and love, "Julia France and Her Times." Julia France represents the climax of ultra-modern feminism in heroines. She is a militant suffragette leader. Perhaps she is not to be blamed for she led a trying and unhappy existance before she was driven to mount the oratorical soap box. Julia was only 18 years old when she met Lieut. France, a roue. The captain endeavored to warn Mrs. Endis regarding France. He told her that the lieutenant was dissipated and vicious, that he would rather see a daughter of his in her coffin than married to France, duke or no duke. (France was heir presumptive to a dukedom.) Mrs. Endis, it seems, had not forgotten any of the mid-Victorian formulae: "All young men sow their wild oats," she said, and proceeded to marry the beautiful and spotless Julia to France.

Then the trouble began. France turned out a beast. Perhaps he was not to be blamed. He was obviously abnormal. Julia herself said he was crazy, and if her stories are to be believed he certainly was not a pleasant companion for any young girl. He lectured her regarding her conduct. He thundered and bellowed. He found fault. He almost scared her to death. He locked her in closets. He flourished whips at her. He told her blood-curdling stories. He wouldn't let her sleep at night. It was very trying. But what could Julia do? An insane husband, it must be admitted, is not inspiring nor conducive to a simple and feminine state of mind. The laws of the country would not help her unless her husband both beat her and kept a mistress. She began to think revolutionary thoughts. On page ninety-seven she heard a great deal about woman's suffrage. She realized that the vast majority of her sex had been "toys, jewel-laden henchwomen." Here is another thought which came to her: "Man had despised woman throughout the ages . . . He had the physical strength to wring her neck and the legal backing to treat her as a partner or servant, whichever he found agreeable or convenient." Then she suddenly had a desire to be independent.

Soon after these thoughts began coming to her, pounded in by the fascinating philosophy of Bridget, one of her friends, her husband was looked up as a maniac, whereupon Julia joined the suffrage movement. The real excitement of the book begins here. She developed eloquence as a public speaker. She became a valuable asset to the movement. She acquired militancy and felt like a great martyr.

The book from this time on is a historical tract. On page 255 we learn that in one encounter between the suffragettes and the police, the latter knocked down Mrs. Pankhurst and mauled Mrs. Lawrence, and the police struck and arrested. Others were dragged to the police station. Mrs. Cobden Sanderson, knowing that Mrs. Lawrence was ill, and not without an older woman, managed to get herself arrested." Later Mrs. Pankhurst was finally "flung to the ground," and Mrs. Lawrence was "torn and mauled." On page 287 we find another young girl "bestially assaulted" by a policeman. She struck her breasts repeatedly against the iron paling of a house, who leaped on the man's back and struck him on the head with all her might. The policeman refused to let Julia to kick her down, to trample and tear her. The neglect incensed her, so she flew at another policeman and struck him. "deterring" to go to prison with the others. But even this policeman would not arrest her, and she attacked another. Two other women were thrown to the ground by the police and kicked in the side. They both developed cancer. It was a harrowing mix-up all round, Julia's only regret being that the police refused to drag her to jail. She wanted, above all else, to be incarcerated.

She wrote a description of the riot to her lover, Daniel Tay. He was much younger than she and was inclined towards sentimentality, but Julia put a stop to it. She told him to cease romancing, that she herself was not that sort. Tay greatly admired her suffrage activities and especially her oratory. He was very young. He even made love to another woman, much to Julia's disgust. Tay himself was sorry and said he felt like Don Juan. Julia told him that if she could have caught Fannie in the morning alone she would have twisted her neck and held her under the water until she was dead. Tay was greatly impressed. "By God, Julia," he said, hoarsely, "you are the woman for me!"

UNHAPPILY MARRIED.

THE SQUIRREL CAGE. By Dorothy Canfield. Henry Holt & Co., New York.

DOMESTIC infelicity is the theme of Dorothy Canfield's "The Squirrel Cage." She who suffers is named Lydia, and he who causes the suffering is named Paul. The marriage was not of Lydia's choosing, and, consequently, little could be hoped for—in spite of the scientific doctrines of the eugenists—though this was a social and not a scientific marriage. But the principle was the same. The law of elective affinities had been temporarily suspended.

The book may perhaps be taken as a plea for conjugal eclectics. I am inclined to think that might be a very good way to take it. The purpose is not an unworthy one, and Dorothy Canfield has put sufficiently good work into her theme to justify the purpose. Perhaps Lydia was too well educated. She had studied in Europe, though originally she was from Ohio—from Endbury, O. My gazetteer of the world fails to comment upon Endbury. However, it had considerable social prestige and commercial life.

Paul was an engineer, full of ambition. His whole life was wrapped up in his work. He had the commercial instinct. He devoted little time to his wife, and believed he was doing his duty when he neglected her. Lydia did not think so. Her soul craved other things. She had had a higher education; more or less of the culture of the continent had got into her blood. After Europe an engineer in Endbury, O., was far from fulfilling. Our sympathies are wholly with Lydia. Her life was without purpose, without a goal, without accomplishment. She was forced into the position of a satellitic parasite, or a parasitic satellito. She might have taken up oil painting or even water colors. She might have learned to play Chopin's "Nocturn" on the piano. She might have written poems for the magazines. She might have organized culture clubs and uplifted the drama in Endbury. But Lydia was lonely. She wanted to share in her husband's occupations. She plead with him in this direction, but he would not hearken to her. He was a typical American business man. Then luxury began to pall on her. It accentuated the emptiness of her existence. So she plead with her husband to let down on his work, to lead the simple life, to stay at home and discuss with her. She wanted entertainment, intellectual reciprocity—and she wanted it badly.

Sedentary life, however, did not appeal to Paul. He was too ambitious, and gradually his attitude towards Lydia changed. He told her he was working for her, and when she failed to respond to his sacrifices he became angry. Then one day he was killed. This climax is quite in keeping with the literary care taken by American novelists. After having worked up a situation and having presented a problem which requires skill in its solution, they drag in unexpected catastrophes and upset the literary wagon into the ditch. It is a cowardly evasion of issues. It shows a lack of both literary skill and imagination. But it seems to suffice the average American novel reader. Knowing of no way to straighten out a problem, and being unwilling to meet it fairly—or, what would perhaps be better and truer to life, to leave it unsolved—the average novelist calls upon an avalanche, or a stray bullet, or a stroke of lightning, or a fall from a cliff, or an automobile wreck, with order to kill off the supernumeraries, and to make legal the bumses of the true lovers. This sort of unintelligent denouement is the result, no doubt, of an unintelligent demand for a happy ending. But in real life superfluous husbands are not always accidentally killed just as the wife and the lover are falling into each other's arms. Tragedies do not end things. Climaxes are recurrent. Romances do not end at the altar; and lovers, once they are married, do not always turn out to be paragons of virtue.

In "The Squirrel Cage," when the tempermental incompatibilities of Lydia and Paul have become unbearable for both, kind fate removes Paul, leaving Lydia free to marry Mr. Rankin, the lover. Rankin is a fanatic, something of a mystic, a washed-out edition of Elbert Hubbard, a milk-and-water Socialist, a geyser of platitudes. When Paul dies he comes from his hut in the woods and takes Lydia with her two children.

The book is valueless except as a statement of the overriding ambition of the American business man and the sad straits into which the average American wife will drift if habitually neglected. The end of the book is puerile and gratuitous.

VALUABLE CRITICISM.

OSCAR WILDE. A Critical Study. By Arthur Ransome. Mitchell Kennerley, New York.

THE publication of Arthur Ransome's book on Oscar Wilde attests to the fact, I believe, that the provincialism and Puritanism, which so long have clouded all critical evaluation of this writer, have sufficiently passed by to permit of Wilde's literary measure being justly taken. The book is the first volume of adequate critical study regarding the man and his works that we have as yet had, and as such it is one of the most important critical volumes of recent years. Too long the miasma of Reading gaol has obscured the esthetic issue of Wilde's work. To be sure his true importance was long since sensed by a few men and women who did not permit ethical considerations to bias them. It is unfortunate that the acts of the man have stood in the way of his work. For he was one of the few important literary figures which came at the end of the Victorian era, and the new standards which he set have influenced every line of artistic endeavor today. He gave a new impetus to the drama by divorcing it from morality. His plays mark the first amalgamation of literature and the stage in the new dramatic renaissance. His poetry, despite the murky cloud which hung over it, sounded a new note in the art of prosody, and he was the first of the novelists to drag the Latin temperament across the channel.

In the present book by Ransome, Wilde is given credit for the things he has accomplished. His poems, his estheticism, his miscellaneous prose, his dramatic influence, are all considered by a critic who is capable of looking beyond the man into his works. Nor is it mere eulogy. Ransome is severe at times, and his admiration for the best of Wilde does not cloud his vision to much of the pettiness, the mere freakishness and the attitudinizing of the subject of his essay.

The book is an important document.

HOMELY REMINISCENCES.

THE LURE OF THE PAST. By George W. Bryan. Published by the author.

HERE is a rambling book of historical and descriptive observations and impressions by George W. Bryan. The writer dates the beginning of the history of a family in 1845, goes with them across the plains in 1853 and tells of their hardships and privations and final success in Northern California. The second part of the book begins in Indiana in 1872 and ends in Los Angeles in 1911. The book makes no pretense of being a literary document, but contents itself with the simplest of observations of a man whose paramount idea is the betterment of social conditions through the development of home life.

LITERARY NOTES.

When last heard from, in mid-April, Harry A. Frank, author of that fascinating book, "A Vagabond Journey Around the World," was Canal Zone Policeman No. 38, with an idea of doing some lecturing up and down the Isthmus.

His rather indefinite plans are for an early start by boat and on foot to Bogota, "then almost a year's leisurely walk to Quito, and down the old Inca trail clear to Lake Titicaca and beyond, to Potosi"—a route covering the mountain country of much of the west coast of South America.

An amusing incident of the difference between white and red honesty is told by Gen. Miles, whose book of memoirs, "Serving the Republic," was recently published. "Several years ago Bishop Whipple was sent by the government to hold an important council with the Sioux nation," says Gen. Miles. "The Bishop was a most benevolent man and a good friend of the Indians, having sympathy for and influence with them. It was in mid-winter, and a great multitude of Indians had gathered in South Dakota to receive this messenger from the Great Father at Washington. Before delivering his address to the Indians the bishop asked the principal Chief if he could take off his fur coat in safety. The stalwart warrior, straightening himself up to his full height with dignity, said that he could leave it there with perfect safety, as there was not a white man within a day's march of the place."

It is not often that the work of a living novelist is used as the classics are in university courses. Thus it is noteworthy that Prof. Tombo has just delivered two lectures at Columbia University discussing and interpreting "The Fool in Christ" by Gerhart Hauptmann. His treatment of this work of the great German novelist was no different than if he had been discoursing on a masterpiece of a bygone period.

The Mikado of Japan has written to Arthur Morrison, author of "Tales of Mean Streets," expressing keen appreciation of Mr. Morrison's "Painters of Japan." Though Mr. Morrison was long known only for his fiction, Japanese art has been his lifelong hobby.

Pittsburgh is only one of the dirty cities, as we learn from Julius B. Cohen's new book on "Smoke: A Study of Town Air," to be published at once by the Longmans. From interesting scientific experiments it is estimated that forty-five tons of soot fall each day upon Glasgow, or 320 tons per square mile annually.

How the growth of vegetation is stunted, daylight diminished and the death rate increases in various sooty communities is shown in this book by tabulations and photographs. The economic aspect of the smoke problem is principally discussed, and the book therefore may be readily understood by the non-scientific reader.

August Strindberg's fame seems to be spreading rapidly. Charles Scribner's Sons published a volume of his plays, containing "The Link," "The Dream Play," and "The Dance of Death," parts I and II, earlier in the spring, which has already run into its third printing. But even more significant is the fact that through Charles Scribner's Sons an edition of this volume, fifty copies, is being brought out in Japan by the Publishing Company of Z. P. Moruya of Tokio.

Another of Strindberg's plays is to be published by the Scribners some time in the course of this summer. It is called "There Are Crimes and Crimes," and deals with modern life in Paris. The translator is the same as in the case of the earlier volume, Edwin Bjorkman.

BOOK GOSSIP.

Charles Scriber's Sons have just imported "Paris and Its Treasures," by Mrs. E. C. Bicknell, author of "Venice and Her Treasures." Besides a charming and complete account of art treasures of Paris, it includes a section on the environs of Paris, some notes on restaurants, a diary of fairs, fetes, and other events of the Parisian year, a list of theaters, etc.

It is announced by her publishers, Messrs. L. C. Page & Co., Boston, that Miss L. M. Montgomery's new brook—"Chronicles of Avonlea"—will be issued early in June. It is welcome news to hear that the delightful Annie Shirley of Green Gables fame plays some part in the "Chronicles," which have to do also with other personalities and events of Avonlea.

Announcement is made by Doubleday, Page & Co., of the new book by C. N. and A. M. Williamson, bearing the title "The Guests of Hercules," which is published late this month. The scene is laid in Monte Carlo, and the color illustrations are by A. Buckland and M. L. Bracker. The book is declared by the publishers to be one of the most ambitious efforts of this versatile pair.

Two persons of distinction contribute to the Scribner publication list of May without revealing their identity. One, a novelist of established reputation and popularity, publishes "George Wenders Gave a Party," a novel unusual both in plan and treatment, and exceedingly interesting, under the name "John Inglis." The other is the anonymous author of "The Great Analysis." He is known to every American and Englishman. In presenting the conception of a "world-order" to replace the present world-disorder his thought bores into the future like the searchlight's shaft into the night.

"The Montessori Method," Mme. Montessori's own account of her new system of education, published by Stokes on April 5, has proved such a success that a second large edition was needed a week after publication, though the first was unusually large.

WITH THE AUTHORS.

William Hard, author of "The Women of Tomorrow," just published by Doubleday, Page & Co., recently delivered an address before the Southern Child Labor Convention at Chattanooga, Tenn. Mr. Hard, who is an ardent advocate of the movement to abolish child labor, pointed out that in the future the women who interest themselves with the great civic problems of the day will be the leading factor in the abolishment of the evil.

Mary Heaton Vorse, who was recently announced to have been the author of "The Autobiography of an Elderly Woman," was married last month to Joseph O'Brien, and will spend the summer at Provincetown, Mass.

Brewer Corcoran, author of "The Bantam," just published, is the son of a Massachusetts physician, and was educated at St. Paul's prototype of "St. Jo's," the preparatory school to which the bantam went. It was here as editor of the school paper that Mr. Corcoran began his literary work. He was connected for a number of years with "The Springfield Republican," as reporter, minor editor, dramatic critic, and assistant literary editor. "The Bantam," however, is Mr. Corcoran's first book.

Robert Alexander Wason, the author of "Happy Hawkins," and other popular novels, has taken up his residence in Detroit, after a leisurely and romantic wedding journey in the open spaces of the great West, and is hard at work on a new novel which his publishers, Small, Maynard & Co., will publish early in the fall. The new book is said to be another "Happy Hawkins" story. The original "Happy Hawkins," by the way, is soon to be introduced to our English cousins by Grant Richards, the London publisher.

Harold Bindloss has a peculiar position among authors. His readers know exactly what to expect from him, and in rather large numbers they buy two novels of his every year; novels always dealing with the fresh out-of-doors, in forest or prairie country or the sea. While two novels a year may seem a good deal, it must be remembered that Mr. Bindloss spends no time in grinding out numerous short stories, as do most novelists, and he time in rushing about the country advocating suffrage, vegetarianism or the wearing of cat's eyes for luck, or any other "cause." When he is not writing, he gets another whiff of the real life that he describes. For instance, he has just returned from a bicycle trip through the wilds of Canada. Mr. Bindloss's latest novel is "Vane of the Timberlands," published this spring. Last fall appeared "A Prairie Courtship."

OWEN JOHNSON'S COLLEGIATE QUESTIONS.

Owen Johnson declares that the college men of today have no general knowledge, let alone real culture. Most of the colleges, he asserts, have become mere social clearing-houses, whose students know only a few facts hastily crammed for examinations and promptly forgotten.

In his new novel, "Stover at Yale," which takes up the whole subject of American colleges, Johnson makes a character propose a list of forty general questions to a bunch of classmates. But as the story is laid in 1900, the test is not hard enough for today, says Johnson, though most of his readers admit that they cannot answer the questions in "Stover." Johnson has just prepared a new list, which, he says, every college student or graduate ought to be able to answer. Any man in a French or German university could pass a creditable examination on them. How many American collegians can, he asks.

Recent Book of Sensational Autobiography.

Madame Steinheil Writing Her Memoirs.

"My Memoirs," by Mme. Steinheil, which Sturgis & Walton Company will publish this month, caps the climax of sensational revelations to which Lady Cardigan's "Recollections" and the Crown Princess of Saxony's life story have recently contributed. That Mme. Steinheil—she was accused, and acquitted two years since, of the murder of her artist husband and her mother, it will be recalled—was writing her autobiography was long kept a close secret, but is now made public. The book is a full account of one of the most bewildering "causes celebres" in history, and, more than that, is a human document and a picture of the brilliant society of the Paris of today.

Her story is one of cumulative interest. Starting with her early years on her father's beautiful estate in a country district in France, it passes on to her marriage with the artist, M. Steinheil, and her consequent move to Paris.

The rapid growth of her salon is described, and it is in this portion of the book that we get stories of such famous men as Bonnat, Zola, Massenet, Francois Coppee and King Edward VII.

From the point when she first meets President Faure, we are taken behind the scenes in the government of France through the critical times of the Dreyfus affair and the Fashoda incident—when Britain and France were on the brink of war. So intimate was the relationship between Mme. Steinheil and the President that she came and went to the Elysee at all times of the day, entering and leaving by a private door in the garden.

After a description of the President's sudden death, of which her enemies accused her, the story passes on to the events leading up to and following the "fatal night," when the world woke up to one of the most mysterious crimes of modern times.

On the evening of May 30-31, 1908, Mme. Steinheil's mother and husband were murdered, while she herself was discovered gagged and bound to her bed. For a time the breath of suspicion blew wildly in all directions until it eventually blew with staggering force on her, and Mme. Steinheil, the favorite of a President, and one of the most noted and beautiful figures in Parisian society, stood stripped of all sympathy and charged with the double murder of the Impasse Ronsin.

THE BOOK IN LONDON.

Haggard Changes "King Solomon's Mines"—George Bourne's Activities.
Another Dumas Statue—Kark May, a Modern Munchausen.
Unique Travel Stories.

BY HAYDEN CHURCH.

LONDON, April 27.—Once more the critics are unanimous in praising a new book by a writer whose personality turns out to be uncommonly interesting. The writer in question is George Bourne, and the book is another of its author's remarkable studies of peasant life in this country, and bears the title "Change in the Village."

Bourne, who has now been writing for ten years or more, first came into notice with some striking little sketches of humble life in the rural districts, which appeared in the famous "Cornhill Magazine," and a few years ago made something of a sensation with a work called "The Bettesworth Book," which was almost as careful a biography as Boswell's of a typical specimen of the fast-disappearing type of English peasant—a garrulous, but observant, old fellow, who happened to be Bourne's gardener. Bettesworth had fought in the Crimea and done service in the trenches before Sebastopol, to say nothing of having worked in the open for upwards of sixty years, and the point of view of this unlettered pagan son of the soil was reproduced by his employer in a fashion that critics found masterly. Since that time Bourne has published half a dozen other works, all dealing with rural life, and all really valuable studies. "Change in the Village," his latest work, deals with the modernizing of the English countryside by what its author calls "the country house influence," and which he deplores.

So it was rather surprising to learn from an intimate friend of Bourne's that this acknowledged literary artist is, by profession, a coach builder and wheelwright. When he is not writing his books he sits in an office in the town of Farnham and directs the big carriage manufacturing business founded by his father, but though he originally studied every department of the business and today could turn out a wheel as well as the best of his own employees, his heart is in literary work. Oddly enough, Bourne, who is 47, discovered that he could write largely by accident, as a result of transferring his bachelor establishment, through health considerations, from the family residence in Farnham to a country cottage, some miles from that town. A fondness for studying human types brought him closely in touch with the lives of his humble neighbors, and he began writing about them, and was not a little surprised to discover how ready a market his first articles found. Now a new work by the coach-builder of Farnham is an event in the literary world.

Rider Haggard is not in this country at present, which is a pity, for I should like to have asked him why he made rather a striking and none too happy change in the later editions of the best of all his novels, "King Solomon's Mines." Everybody will remember the famous episode of the eclipse which Messrs. Quartermain, Curtis and Good pretended to have brought off as a sign to the natives who doubted that they really were "wise men from the stars." When I first read the book it was an eclipse of the sun, which came off at midday and produced darkness for about an hour. The cry of the frightened Kukuans, "The sun is dying, the white wizards have killed the sun," has stuck in my memory ever since, though it is no matter how many years ago.

There was, of course, an actual eclipse of the sun a few days ago, and being reminded thereby of "King Solomon's Mines" I picked up a six-penny edition, the latest thereof, at a book stall, and at the first convenient opportunity turned to the stirring chapter which is headed "We Give a Sign." It was difficult to believe one's eyes on discovering that it was an eclipse of the moon that was described, an eclipse that completely "put out" that orb, though the moon was at its full. The more I read, however, the more convinced I became that it had been the sun before, and now, having looked up a first edition of the novel, the impression proves to have been accurate.

Why Haggard made the change is a mystery, which a talk with his publishers has not cleared up, for the episode, as altered, is not half as dramatic as it was at first. Perhaps some one with expert astronomical knowledge pointed out to Sir Henry Rider Haggard, as he is now, that such an eclipse of the sun as he described is not possible in South Africa, but this is mere speculation. Oddly enough, Haggard's publishers, when I pointed the thing out to them, were surprised, too, and up to the time of writing have not been able to discover in what edition the change was made. So, for the explanation we shall have to wait till Haggard gets back from Egypt, where he is at present gathering local color for a novel about the land of the Pharaohs.

Karl May, who died at Dresden this week, was a German De Rougemont. Forty years ago, he was the idol of the Fatherland. Everybody read the wonderful stories he wrote about his travels, his villa was crowded with curios, said to have been gathered on his wanderings, all sorts of distinguished folk dropped in to see his private museum, and he spoke languages of which nobody else ever had heard. He was regarded as one of the greatest travelers that ever had lived. Then the veteran Karl was indiscreet enough to prosecute a man who had called him a born criminal, and the world learned with amazement that, when he wrote his books, the famous Herr May never had been out of his native country.

Parisians declare that the Place Malesherbes will have to have its name changed to that of the Place of the Three Dumas. For to the statues of the author of "Monte Cristo," and his son, who gave us "Camille," which already stand in the historic "Place," a third is being added in honor of their progenitor, Gen. Dumas, who slashed his way through Egypt and half of Europe. Perhaps it was his prowess and dare-devilry that fired the imagination of his son, Alexander the Great, and transmitted enough genius to spare for his grandson.

HAUPTMANN AND SUDERMANN.

Facts Regarding Two Great Leaders in German Literature—Published and Forthcoming Works.

It is a curious fact that the leadership of German literature and drama has been continuously represented for about two decades by Gerhart Hauptmann and Hermann Sudermann. Again and again their supremacy has been assailed and though it seems at times as though aspirants representing new schools would supplant these two figures always withstood the attack and when the smoke of battle lifted they were found calmly pursuing their paths, undisturbed by vituperation, malice and envy.

Quite as strange as that this dual leadership should have survived is the fact that the two men have nothing in common as to aim and method. So, too, their lives have been unlike.

Gerhart Hauptmann was born in 1862 in Obersalzbrunn, a small Silesian watering place, where his father kept, at one time, the three principal hotels. His grandfather was a poor linen weaver. In 1874 Hauptmann was sent to the capital city of Breslau, where he attended a Real school and later studied art. At 20 he was undecided between following the fine arts or literature as his vocation and remained in this state of indecision for a number of years. After a few semesters at the University of Jena we find him at work, now in his sculptor's studio at Rome, now in Germany, drawing and modeling from life. Then again he discovered a still more congenial calling, and entered upon a course of conscientious preparation to become an actor. This he could not continue on account of a lisp, it is said.

At about the same time he married a woman of considerable means, and was freed from the anxieties of breadwinning and the necessity for compromise which poverty is apt to impose upon an artist.

His career as a writer began when he was 23 years of age, when he came in contact with the rising literary generation. His fame dates back to 1889, when his first play, "Vor Sonnenaufgang" ("Before Sunrise") was produced by the Freie Buehne.

Hauptmann's sympathies for the poor are shown in his drama, "Die Weber" ("The Weavers.") in which, owing to ancestry and environment, he was enabled to portray those wretched workers with naturalistic verity.

Hermann Sudermann is the son of a brewer in a village in East Prussia. His father being in straitened circumstances, it became necessary for him to send young Hermann, at the age of 14, to work with an apothecary. He, however, left him soon and was enabled to enter the Koenigsberg University, where he studied philosophy and history. In 1877 he went to Berlin to continue his studies, and since then has made the Prussian capital his permanent home. He was tutor there in several families, and next turned to journalism, as editor of the "Deutsche Reichsblatt."

He published a collection of short stories, then produced his first work of real significance, the novel "Frau Sorge" ("Dame Care,") which revealed him at once as a writer of exceptional force and skill and also as a mature philosopher.

In his numerous novels and plays he has shown himself to be one of the greatest—perhaps the greatest—of the present-day realists.

Hauptmann for almost twenty-five years chose to deliver his message in dramatic form, but the seed for his masterwork had been planted in a short story, which he ultimately used as the theme for his great novel, completed and published twenty years later. It is the remarkable and unique work, "The Fool in Christ," which is now being so widely discussed. This has sunk deep into the consciousness of students of social conditions and religious tendencies for it discloses, more than any novel that comes to mind, the contrast between the religion preached by Jesus and the church of today, and the worth of contemporary institutions in the light of Jesus's teachings. Hauptmann's latest work is "Atlantis," a novel dealing with art and life in America. He writes from personal knowledge, for he visited this country in 1894, at the time of the production of his "Hannele." "Atlantis" will be brought out in book form in the fall and is now being printed serially in three languages — German, Russian and English. A collected edition of Hauptmann's dramas in English translation will be published soon.

Sudermann, on the other hand, though his fame has been achieved through the stage, has built a separate and equally great reputation by his fiction. His rival, Hauptmann, stands at the head of the naturalistic school of literature, while Sudermann is the master realist. He is Gallic rather than Teutonic and combines certain dominant traits of Ibsen, Zola and De Maupassant. When it had seemed as if his zenith had been reached the literary world received a new sensation in the publication of the "Song of Songs," a novel which made all his earlier works pale by contrast. It was as if he had been accumulating power with time and had expended all his reserve force on a single piece of work which would enthrone him forever as one of the great novelists of his day. The din of attack and defense has not yet died down; the book is secure in its high place, yet it continues to be the subject of denunciation by Puritans who cannot or will not realize its underlying significance, but prefer to condemn it because of its frank revelation of the forces of evil that prevail.

Sudermann's latest fiction is "The Indian Lily," a collection of short stories that are masterpieces of condensation, incredibly veracious miniatures of life.

It has remained for an American publisher to devote himself to bringing out the works of these two great men. B. W. Huebsch of New York published "The Song of Songs" and "The Indian Lily," by Sudermann, and Hauptmann's important social drama, "The Weavers," and his novel, "The Fool in Christ." Mr. Huebsch will publish Hauptmann's latest novel, "Atlantis," and the authorized edition of his dramas, the first volume of which will appear in the fall.

An African Lion Hunter's Story.

"A man," he said, "sat before his tent, when a magnificent lion stiffened for the spring, leaped and — missed the man, missed him by jumping three feet too high. It then slunk back into the forest, looking thoroughly ashamed.

"The next day the man came unexpectedly on the lion by a stream. It had upended a log of wood and was practicing low jumps!"

IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Custer-Avenue Intermediate.

Visitors' day will be celebrated at Custer-avenue intermediate school next Friday. The public is invited to attend the exhibit of school work and listen to the programme, which will illustrate the work of the school, features of which are music, folk-dancing, physical training exercises and dialogues in German, French and Spanish. In the hallways are to be stationed students, who will exemplify the work of the commercial department, by taking in shorthand, any visitor's dictation and quickly and neatly transcribing same on the typewriter.

Exhibits of tin work, hammered brass, woodwork—consisting of tabourets, furniture and other models—and of cooking and dressmaking, will be given.

The unique feature of the exhibit is to be home-products show, consisting of chickens and pigeons and garden products raised by the children at home; of mechanical domestic contrivances invented by them, and of the collection of aeroplanes and other flyers made by the boys.

On Wednesday, an entertainment is to be given by the foreign languages department. The programme will consist of Spanish, French, German and Latin songs and dialogues, with folk-dances, typical of the various nations, done in costume. This will be supplemented by songs in Armenian, Hebrew, Italian and Russian, by students representing those nations.

A Plea to the Normal Alumni.

"This is the last opportunity you, the alumni, thirty-five hundred strong, will have to celebrate in the old building!"

That's the earnest invitation sent out by the Normal Alumni Association to its members, to get together on Saturday evening, June 15, for a last reunion in the old Normal School building, soon to be abandoned.

A delightful entertainment has been prepared, consisting of something to hear and something to eat, and it is expected that the old building will re-echo delightful memories on that occasion.

The invitation also says that husbands and wives, and other friends ex-officio, will be welcome.

Tickets are 25 cents, and they can be obtained by writing Miss Burney Porter, secretary of the Alumni Association, State Normal School.

Eighth Grade Closing Exercises.

Superintendent Francis has issued a circular, stating that the concluding exercises of all the eighth grade classes will be held at the Temple Auditorium on Tuesday, June 18, at 1 o'clock. Admission will be by ticket, and as there are only about 3000 or 3100 extra tickets, the extra will be distributed in proportion to the number of pupils in the classes. There will be no reserved seats.

Assistant Supt. Dozier Speaks.

Assistant Superintendent Dozier addressed the Normal School student body on Friday afternoon, on the subject, "Moral Training in the Schools." His plea was for a greater devotion among teachers to this duty.

Avenue Sixty-two Social Center.

Hurrah for the month of May! That's what they say, as they laugh and play every gladsome day at Avenue Sixty-two. According to "Jack and Jill," there is to be a merry wind-up to this glorious month. They ought to know, for over two hundred of them are to exemplify the social center meeting, Saturday evening, May 25. Assistant Superintendent Melville Dozier will present the more serious part of the programme, in his explanation of the use of the planetarium. Besides these offerings, several delightful solos have been promised.

Those on the Reception Committee for the occasion are Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Buck, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Cederstrom, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Carroll, Mr. and Mrs. William Cady, and Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Daley.

From 3 to 5 p.m., Saturday, the Mothers' Circle held a ten-cent tea and food sale at the schoolhouse.

As gifts from the children, teachers and friends are enjoying many delightful "eats" from the bountiful products of the school gardens.

Los Angeles High.

Debaters, orators and just plain, everyday conversationalists dined and talked at an informal little banquet Friday afternoon. The affair took place in the beach-house, where "The Forum," or Los Angeles Debating Club, had for its guests the Debating Club of the Polytechnic High School. A feeling of jolly good fellowship made the various speakers appear at their best. After an address of welcome by Lester Roth, president of the Forum, and a response by Clifford Trusdale of Polytechnic, the following toasts were given:

Dr. Edwards, "Learning to Talk;" Miss Helen Walker, "The Girl Debater;" Dryden Phelps, "Officialdom;" Samuel Smith, "The Rank and File;" Oral Gillette, "The Big White School;" John Brewer, "He or She Who Argues;" Channing Follette, "A Naturalized Citizen;" Miss Juliette Pierce, "The Cause;" Herbert Nichol, "The High School on the Hill;" George Cohen, "Debaters All."

Spelling has apparently come to stay in L. A. High, and the interesting part of the whole thing is that the pupils seem to like the fun of learning to spell correctly. There is intense rivalry between several of the rooms as to which one will receive the highest average for the term's work. One room already has a spelling average of 995 for the season. Twenty words each Friday, at the morning roll call, make up the lesson. These words are those most frequently misspelled in the written English work. They are written on the classroom blackboard every Monday. The papers are corrected by members of the Senior B class. Each room has the same list of words.

Last year, at the close of the term, an old-fashioned spelling match was held between the two rooms that stood at the head of the list. The pupils enjoyed it, and are now training for this year's contest.

Senior girls and girls from the junior college spent Saturday picnicking in Millard's Canyon. The outing was planned and was in charge of Mrs. Susan Dorsey, vice-principal of the school.

Prof. Henry Morse Stephens of the University of California addressed the upper classes on Friday. In his discussion of the early history of California he gave a glimpse of the wonderful possibilities to be found in the study of western history.

Gardena High.

"In the Days of the Padres," the beautiful little comic opera, by Louis Curtis and Agnes E. Peterson, faculty members, made such a success at Gardena last week, that visiting persons have asked it to be repeated downtown. It is possible this may be done. Miss Lucy Powers, as "Dona Pomposa Arguello," and Earl Cook as Jack Fairchild, made special hits, and Mary Brown's Spanish dance was delightfully graceful. Gertrude Purcell, Marion Furber, Florence Granger and Delia Purcell were others of the cast who played their parts especially well.

The musical numbers, "In Old Missouri," "Poppy Lullaby," and "Little Wild Rose," were delightfully catchy, and as for "The Serenade," the boys whistle nothing else these days on the campus.

Polytechnic High School.

Monday morning the students were called to the Auditorium, where they found the May Festival Orchestra, consisting of selected members of the orchestras of all the high schools, ready to give them the selection which is the closing number on the May Festival programme. Directed by Miss Blythe of Los Angeles High School, they played a medley of national and popular songs, which was greeted with a storm of applause from the enthusiastic audience.

On Tuesday morning, Wesley Holler, representing those who were with the float, presented to the school the handsome red and gold banner won as second prize in the floral parade. It was accepted by Norman McPhail on behalf of the student body. Principal Dunn spoke a few words and the members of the committee in charge of the arrangements of the hearty support of the students in the work of construction and decoration.

Five girls, who will graduate from the cooking department, gave the first luncheon held in the two rooms in the newly purchased building adjoining the school, which have been fitted up as a dining-room and kitchen. The girls were allowed to spend only $2 with which they were to provide a luncheon for eight people, having a soup course, meat course, salad course, desert, and black coffee. The girls were Bessie Miller, Wilda Carpenter, Maybel Dahl, Ethel Gilbert and Jeannette Wallace. The guests were the following members of the faculty: Mr. Dunn, Mr. Wright, Mr. Keller, Miss Sanborn, Miss Gridley, Miss Kjelland, Miss Mason, and the instructor in cooking, Miss Owen.

The Senior Ionian Society held its meeting Thursday afternoon present ing a programme entitled, "In Tune with Nature." A very interesting critic's report was read by Frank Kendrick, and the main part of the programme was opened by a piano solo rendered by Dorothea Dunlel. Then followed an amusing dialogue, "Country Life versus City Life," in which Charles Clay took the part of Percy, the city youth just ending a visit to the farm, and Walter Boraker took that of Uncle Hiram, the old farmer. Carl Moseley told of mountain climbing. Edna Meyer gave a reading "The Wind and the Morn," by MacDonald, and George Deming discussed Cellulose and its industries. Blanche Clay and Bertha Heath sang a pretty duet, "Down by the Sea," accompanied by Ruth Robinson. "The Revolt of Mother," by Mary E. Wilkins, was well read by three girls, Caroline Cookman, Jeannette Armstrong, and Cuella McFadden. Methods of Surveying were demonstrated by Walter Humphreys, Augustus Eddy, and Robert Orttys, and this part of the programme was concluded with a trio, guitar and mandolins, played by Howard Pratt, Harold Pratt, and Arthur Hutchason. The society then adjourned to the yard where vines were presented to the school as is the custom annually. Xabie Clark made the presentation.

The Dramatic's Club is working on Clyde Fitch's comedy, 'Captain Jinks of the Horse Marines.' Don Cameron will be seen in the title role, and Eunice Arens will take the part of the leading lady. The play will be presented in the near future.

Manual Arts High School.

The first of the try-outs for the inter-scholastic swimming contests was held this week. Mr. Willis Robb is to have charge of the contest. Besides the diving for form, and the under-water races, there will be events of fifty, one-hundred, and two-twenty yards.

Miss L. Caldwell of the Girls' Collegiate, a graduate of New Haven, is substituting in the physical department for Mrs. Marion R. Morgan, now in New York City.

This week the girls are to have a series of inter-class baseball games, "indoor, on the campus." Following the custom of this department no school team has been formed. While no "stars" will be developed, it is hoped that there will be a lot of healthy fun in which many will join.

The baseball game of last week between Los Angeles and Manual Arts was well attended. Manual held down the boys on the hill-top till the sixth inning, when Markham, the M. A. pitcher lost control and walked seven men, forcing four home. The final score was 8 to 5, in favor of L. A. This is the first defeat dealt Manual by another high school.

The baseball team leaves on Friday night for San Diego, to play a return match with the High School team.

The motorcycling craze has struck the male members of the faculty. Messrs. Armstrong, Hyde and Rae already have machines, while Messrs. Hague, Detrick, Mount, Nihart, Rice and Dr. Hart are said to be approachable by agents. The Gardena High School men have formed a club. It is not impossible that the two schools may combine and this summer awaken the Yosemite with the roar and honk of the enthusiastic motor fiend.

The new building is growing steadily. The eaves are being placed on the north wall. We hope that the brick work will be completed and the roof begun before the summer vacation.

Official returns for Tag-Day are being anxiously awaited by Manual. Great interest was taken in this means of collecting funds.

The latter part of June will bring its visiting day. It is expected that the work of the year and the processes of shop activities will be shown to many of those interested in the school. The foundry may give a run to illustrate this new branch of our work.

Hollywood High School.

The "H" banquet was given in the cafeteria, Saturday evening for the athletes of the school who have won their H. Plates were laid for about fifty fellows, and the invited guests of the evening were Superintendent Francis, Col. Steadman and Mr. Bean of the Board of Education, Carl Ewing, former athletic manager, and John Hoch, student body president. The tables were arranged in the shape of an H, and the school colors, red and white, were carried out in the decorations of the tables, red candles and red carnations. Mr. Kirckhofer made a fine toastmaster, and the following responded to toasts: Superintendent Francis, Fred Coultas, Will Briggs, Meredith Goodwin, Arthur Alber, Ward Henry, Jack Hoch, Sanford Kellogg, Mr. Webster, Mr. Bean, Col. Steadman and Dr. Snyder.

The girls' championship in tennis was played off last week. Ethel Dickey and Florence Muller were in the finals, Florence Muller winning.

SHORT STORIES.

How Fast the Horse Went.

[Boston Journal:] In the Superior Civil Court a little chap was giving testimony in a case where an express team is alleged to have knocked down and injured a boy acquaintance of the witness. The little chap on the witness stand was asked how fast the team was going when he first noticed it. He seemed a bit puzzled, and the attorney suggested a hearse and a fire engine as extremes of comparison. The boy said that it was not going as fast as a fire engine and faster than a hearse.

The attorney ventured again to have the witness state in his opinion just how fast the team was going.

"It was going 'lickity split,'" said the youngster.

From the expression upon the faces of the judge and the members of the jury it was evident that they understood the answer of the witness thoroughly.

Missing the Point.

[Philadelphia Record:] Representative Bucker of Colorado, apropos of a tariff argument about sugar, said to a Washington correspondent:

"Oh, well, those men don't see my point. They miss my point as badly as the old lady missed her son's.

"'Mother,' a young man said, looking up from the Bulletin, 'would you believe that it takes 5000 elephants a year to make our piano keys and billiard balls?'

"'Make our piano keys and billiard balls!' cried the old lady. 'Well! I always understood that elephants were intelligent creatures, but I never knew before that they'd been trained to make piano keys and billiard balls.'"

All That Was Left.

[Ladies' Home Journal:] A large boarding-house caught fire during dinner and much confusion resulted. After the worst was over the landlady, who was a philosophical soul, remarked that it was a blessing that the fire had not happened at night, as some life might have been lost.

A little later the colored boy, who heard this, mysteriously called her aside and cautiously exhibited a great bunch of dark, tangled hair. "Don't say nothin', Miss Nora," he whispered. "Dis fah is worse dan it 'pears. One o' dem ladies in de room ovah de liberry done get burnt up. I ben up dar to see, an' I found her hair."

Excused for Dancing.

[Saturday Evening Post:] Col. G. M. Quarles, a tobacco planter in Christian county, Kentucky, had a negro man servant named Moss. Moss was driving his boss into town one day when he suddenly remarked:

"Marse Quarles, day had me up befoah my church las' night for dancin'."

"I don't suppose you were guilty—were you, Moss?" asked the colonel.

"Yas, suh; yas suh," said Moss. "I was guilty of dancin', and dey proved hit on me, too; but I come clear. My friends stuck to me close; and, after dem other niggers had done testified against me my friends all got up and testified dat, though it was true I danced, I was so drunk at de time I didn't know whut I was doin'. So I came clear—and the preacher scused me!"

Like the Spratts.

[Washington Star:] "England and Germany, spending all their cash on armaments, remind one of Mr. and Mrs. Spratt."

The speaker was Mayor Esterbrooke of Pawtucket. He continued, with a smile:

"England and Germany will arm themselves to the point of bankruptcy, to the point of impotence. It will be a case of Mr. and Mrs. Spratt all over again.

"Mr. Spratt, you know, once told his friends that he would attend a certain 'smoker,' and Mrs. Spratt told hers very firmly that he wouldn't. Well, a non-partisan acquaintance, the evening of the smoker in question, dropped in at the Spratts' to see who had won out.

"The visitor found Spratt and his wife fast asleep in their chairs at the dining-room table. Spratt, you see, had put sleeping powder in Mrs. Spratt's coffee, so that he might slip away, and she had put sleeping powder in his to prevent him from doing so."

Complimentary Exchanges.

[Baltimore Star:] John Newell, deceased, while president of the Lake Shore road, was so opposed to the pass system that he frequently refused to issue passes to railway officials, and when he did he limited such transportation to certain trains.

One New Year's Day he made up a package of exchange passes and sent them out as usual. Across the end of the one he sent to President Caldwell was printed in red ink, the words, "Not good on limited or fast trains."

By return mail came President Caldwell's annual pass on the Nickel Plate to President Newell. Across the face, in flaring red ink and in the bold handwriting of President Caldwell, were the words, "Not good on passenger trains."

The Height She Liked.

[Philadelphia Record:] Dr. Lyman Abbott, who is an opponent of votes for women, was praising on a Bermuda steamer, a young Vassar girl.

"She delighted me," he said, "in a chat I had with her yesterday at tea. We talked about Ibsen and Shaw, we talked about the new morality and the militant suffragette, and finally I said quizzically:

"'And what, may I ask, is the height of your ambition?'

"'Six feet two,' she answered, promptly, 'and he's the best first base Yalevard's had for seventeen years.'"

RECEPTION TO TAYLOR.

Egan to Give Function to Morosco Star Tuesday Afternoon—Visitors at Dramatic School.

Frank Egan will give a reception for Miss Laurette Taylor next Tuesday afternoon, May 21, in the reception hall and library of his school, at the top of the Hamburger Majestic Theater building. Miss Taylor was an Egan pupil in Seattle, and has since remained a devoted adherent of the school. This reception will be given between the hours of 4 and 5 in the afternoon, that being the only time, apparently, left free to the actress, who is not only playing the stellar role in "Seven Sisters," but is, as well, arduously rehearsing her new vehicle, "Peg o' My Heart."

The past week at the Egan school might well be denominated "Guest Week."

Visitors to the classes include Laurette Taylor, Hartley Manners, H. Reeves-Smith, Margaret Anglin, and half a dozen others whose names are almost equally well known.

Reeves-Smith, the celebrated English comedian, expressed himself as especially delighted with the work of the young people.

"It is astonishing to me," said he "to find so many of these beautiful young California girls talking like young Englishwomen. We pride ourselves that in our tight little isle we alone know how to properly speak the world-wide language called by our name, and it does indeed see mstrange to me to discover, out here in the broad, free and quite unconventional Western America, to find a Regent-street accent. I do not wonder that Mr. Cort has taken several of these young ladies for his impending New York productions. Really, I do not see where he could find a better recruiting city than Los Angeles."

Miss Anglin also expressed herself in terms of admiration concerning the work of the young Eganites.

The visitors saw a number of original life-studies—which are entirely original here and are created by the pupils themselves — beheld a very creditable presentation of scenes from "Everywoman," and were given a variety of performances in different lines.

Waltzing continuously for seventeen hours and three minutes, without once leaving the floor, was the record made by Mrs. Isabelle Bass Logan, of Richmond, Ind., one of the participants in the marathon dancing contest held under the auspices of a fraternal order.

WOMEN'S WORK, WOMEN

BY SYDNEY FORD.

"WHO is she? Who is she?" was whispered from lip to lip as a wonderfully sweet and clear dramatic soprano voice floated through Ebell auditorium from the tender throat of a tall, willowy girl with golden Gretchen hair, which somehow deepened the impression that she must indeed be a real daughter of Germany. She sang first the Agathe aria from "Der Freischutz"—and she sang it divinely—and was rewarded with rounds and rounds of applause from the delighted club women, which never ceased till she reappeared and sang a gay little spring song—this time in English—about the primroses.

"I think she's a Los Angeles girl who has just returned from abroad —somewhere," confided my neighbor at the left.

Los Angeles would be glad indeed to claim this song bird for her own, but Texas has a prior right for this sweet singer—Miss Helen Beatrice Degen—comes from El Paso, formerly, but recently from Germany, where she studied under the best masters of music for a period of four years. When she returned to America, she had the good taste to come straight to Los Angeles—with her golden voice, and a letter of introduction, to Miss Ina M. Davids, who by the way, played her accompaniments at Ebell. A few days later she sang before Joseph Dupuy, who recognised on the very first note that here was an extraordinary voice and without further preliminary, she was engaged as soprano soloist for the Orpheus concert.

Miss Degen's appearance before Ebell last week together with the Rondo trio, was her first appearance in local clubdom, and that she made a hit, goes without saying.

Two Tons of Cake.

June, the month of weddings, draws near and I am moved to print, for the benefit of possible brides, a recipe for a wedding cake from a woman who has made and sold, during the past fifty years, not less than two tons of this cake. Think of it! Four thousand pounds of cake! And all made by the hands of one woman. This is how she tells it in the newspaper:

"My recipe for the cake is: One pound each of sugar, butter and meat; one cupful of jelly or strawberry preserves (these I always make myself in their season); one cupful of buttermilk; and one-half cupful of strong coffee; two eggs, one grated nutmeg, two teaspoonfuls of cinnamon, one teaspoonful of cloves, two teaspoonfuls of saleratus dissolved in one-half cupful of boiling water, two pounds of raising, and one pound of currants thoroughly washed, one pound of chopped candied fruit (lemon, orange and citron), six cupfuls of flour sifted before sifting. See that the fruit is thoroughly mixed in the flour before it is added to the balance of the mixture. Turn into well-greased pans and bake one hour in a slow oven. The cake, if properly cared for, improves with age. I usually make loaves weighing about a pound and a half, each cake labeled with the date of baking and keep it wrapped in waxed paper, in stone jars. Year after year I have had the same customers who wanted it regularly for the holidays. It has been a pleasant task and has netted me many dollars."

Biennial Press Session.

A session devoted to women of the press, authors and writers, is announced as a feature of the Biennial convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs to be held in San Francisco the last week in June.

The afternoon of June 25—the opening day of the convention—will be given up to newspaper women and literary folk. Mrs. Charles McMahon of Salt Lake City, chairman of press work for the convention, will preside over the session, and has invited Mrs. Ella Hamilton Durley, forestry of Des Moines, recently of Los Angeles, to assist her in arranging the programme. Mrs. Durley is the author of "My Soldier Lady," a book of verses in response to "The Lady of the Decoration," comprising a series of vivacious letters in reply to those of the blithe little kindergarten teacher in Japan. Mrs. Durley is also a newspaper woman of experience from the Middle West, her work having been done chiefly in Des Moines, and Chicago.

Among the topics presented at the biennial during this session will be "The Club in Its Relation to the Press," by Mrs. Nellie Blessing Eyster of Berkeley. Other subjects announced are "Straight Reporting versus Feature Writing," and "Newspaper Work as a Preparation for Literature."

Mrs. Durley has been named as chairman of an organization known as the League of American Pen Women of Washington, D. C., and as such will give greeting in behalf of the newspaper women of this country.

Again, the Graduating Gown.

Simplicity, spelled with a capital S, will mark the graduating gown of 1912, as last year. No frills and furbelows to detract from the sweet simplicity of the girl graduate if you please. The dean of Radcliffe College announces that the white linen skirt, three inches from the ground, and worn with a button to mar its severe plainness will be the rule there. White canvas oxfords and plain black stockings, white belts and no buckles, no veils or hair ornaments is the further edict of this arbiter of the fate of the fair graduates of this famous institution, which stands for Boston.

It is rumored that the nearest approach to mutiny on the part of the graduates is the threat to appear with hair hanging down the back if their hair ribbons are permitted. And by the way, what could be prettier or more girlish than long braids of hair worn Gretchen style over the "Miss" Remember how charming Gretchen looks in "Lohengrin" with her heavy braids.

It remains however, for the graduating grammar school girls of Alameda to set the pace for economy in graduating gowns. Following the example of the Long Beach seniors (not the same class having distinguished their own graduating gowns at a cost not to exceed $3.50 each, these Alameda maids go them six better by deciding to get up a dress for $1.75 each. The material is to be the soft, pretty gauze of the French neck and sleeves trimmed with an inexpensive lace.

Women Indifferent Politicians.

No matter how you may, women are not natural politicians. It will take generations of suffragists, I estimate, to reach the point where the average woman will seriously consider it her solemn duty to vote.

I arrived at this conclusion the other day as I sat in the audience at Ebell and listened to the report of the chairman of the Nominating Committee as the result of one of the most keenly contested elections in the history of the club.

How many of the women do you suppose cast their votes? Why, a little more than one-fifth of the membership, to be exact, announced with much ostentation, that this was the largest number ever voted before on any question. And this is the "influential woman's club!"

Now, here is the proportion: If we have sufficient interest in the election of officers in our own club, how can we expect them to vote on matters of a woman's legislative program? And this is the reason why we are that the only way to serve the ballot is to use it. This was so astounding a revelation of an Ebell election that I held office for a year, and assured me that, as a rule, very few women voted. "You must," said, "not 250 will vote at the election in June. Do you care to take up the matter?"

Women's Work.

The report of the Missionary Society of the Methodist Church just made at the Conference now in session at Minneapolis, shows a total of $10,173, and the last four years has been $62,600. In the list of considerable attendance at the missions in China, the patients were treated in the twelve hospitals. The Chinese girls are given a medical course to be doctors or nurses. This is giving the missionary who could before and is elevating to official positions of influence to women.

Cost of Living.

"The cost of living is the high cost of living," is the eminent American economic mode of existence. Why this standpoint, I cannot see. Frankly, Jones has a good income, and announced with much ostentation, that this was the largest number ever voted before on any question. And this is the "influential woman's club!"

"The cost of living is the high cost of living," is the eminent American economic mode of existence. Why this standpoint, I cannot see. Frankly, Jones has a good income, and the same but the cost of living is in some cases. For instance, a French butler could be had for $240 a year, whereas he would come at $720. So, a Swiss chauffeur would be had for $1200 as against $1800 a year. Again, a Swiss governess can be had for $240 a year, whereas the governess demanding chauffeur and other luxuries, can be made to cost at a cost of less than $1000. Now, in America the rule is that the establishment on a $1000 a year living would exceed $2000.

The first big difference is the rent of $1200 as against $1800 in Paris. The cost of heat, light, fuel and service is the same but the cost of living is cut in half over there. Even

WOMEN'S WORK, WOMEN'S CLUBS

Mrs. Grant's appearance before the club was another with the exception that this was her first appearance before a club, and that she made a most favorable impression.

Rose Feast of Cuba.

See that the cake is thoroughly mixed in the last when it is added to the balance of the mixture. Turn into well-greased pans and bake one hour in a slow oven. Special Press Session.

A session devoted to women of the press, authors and writers, is announced as a feature of the Biennial convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs to be held in San Francisco the last week in May, the afternoon of June 25—the closing day of the convention—is given up to newspaper women and Fanny Bixby Spencer, Mrs. Charles Kelly of Salt Lake City, chairman of press work for the convention, and Mrs. Ella Hamilton Durley, formerly of Los Angeles, recently of Los Angeles, but now arranging for the coming event. Mrs. Durley is the author of "My Soldier Lady," a book which is supposed to "The Lady of Cawnpore," comprising a series of letters written in reply to those sent by Belle Kindergarten children in Japan. Mrs. Durley is a newspaper woman of experience in the Middle West, her work having been chiefly in Des Moines, Iowa.

The topics presented at the meeting during this session will be given in relation to the "Art of Living." Ruffle Blessing Eyrich, president. Other subjects announced are "Straight Reporting and Newspaper Writing," and "Newspaper Work as a Preparation for Literature."

Mrs. Durley has been named as chairman of an organization known as the League of American Pen Women, of Washington, D. C., and as such will give a greeting in behalf of the literary women of this country.

The Graduating Gown.

Spring, ushered in with a capital S, is the season of the graduating gown of course, and of the graduate. No frills and furbelows for the sweet simple graduate if you would be in the height of fashion. The white linen skirt, short enough to clear the ground, and plain enough to mar its severe lines, is the rule there, and plain black pumps and no buckles. Accessories in the furnishings of this famous school are also simple for Boston.

It is rumored that the nearest approach to the "fancy" on the part of the graduate is the sheer to appear over the back if the gown is cut low. And by the way, the prettier or longer braids of hair are worn in Grecian style over the shoulders. How charming the "Lohengrin" with its long train, for the graduate, after the style of Alaska Yukon Exposition fame for economy purposes. Following the Long Beach seniors will be distinguished by their graduating gowns at a cost of $2.98 each, these are to be worn six times, or until they begin to get up a little at the feet, pretty flaxen lawn with long sleeves and simple lines.

Famous Politicians.

Women are not politicians. It will take strenuous efforts on the part of suffragists, I am afraid, to reach the point where a woman will sacrifice her sewing duty to attend a political meeting.

Cost of High Living.

"The cost of high living—not the high cost of living," is what an eminent American once called our mode of existence, and, arguing from this standpoint, our Consul at Havre, France, James Edmund Dunning, in a very readable article in Review of Reviews, points out that our fondness for luxury is somewhat to blame for the present high cost of living about which there is such a hue and cry. He compares the cost of living in Europe with that in the United States and asserts that average American hoel living is cheaper than abroad, while the expense of running a private house is about equal except in the case of the upper middle classes where France leads us heavily. Below that scale the cost is equal, but the comfort is less abroad than in America. For the man with an annual income of $10,000 or more, it is cheaper and more comfortable to live in France where his rental and domestic service is only about one-half.

By means of carefully tabulated statements, Consul Dunning shows that such a household, consisting of two adults and three children, with governesses and eight servants, including chauffeur and all the modern luxuries, can be maintained in France at a cost of less than $7000, whereas in America the running of such an establishment on an equal scale of living would exceed $10,000.

The first big difference shows up in the rent of $2000 in America as against $1500 in France. The items of heat, light, fuel and food are about the same but the servants' wages are cut in half over there—and even more in some cases. For instance, the French butler could command but $240 a year, whereas the American would come at $750, and the United States chauffeur would draw a salary of $1200 as against the $600 of his foreign competitor. The governess could be procured in France for $180 per annum while over here she would command a salary of $520.

Going to the other extreme, the American class in the lowest social scale leads the entire world within its class for comparative well being. It pays much more for the sheer cost of living, the money difference being about 60 per cent. in favor of France, but in the comforts of life there is 80 per cent. in favor of the United States.

Honor to Chinese Girl.

Among the delegates who left last week for the Y.W.C.A. student conference at Pleasanton was a bright young Chinese girl, Miss Carrie Chan, who was selected as one of the delegates from the Normal School, where she is a student. Miss Chan graduated from the Polytechnic High School three years ago and since then has been pursuing a course at the Normal preparing herself for a teacher. She is a daughter of Chan Kin Sing, the well-known court interpreter.

For Crippled Children.

Perhaps one of the happiest results of the recent awakening of interest in Dickens on account of the centenary of his birth is the formation of the Tiny Tim Fund Organization, affiliated with the Dickens Fellowship branch of St. Louis, its object being to provide for the urgent needs of crippled children. In order not to overlap the work of other societies this organization will co-operate with other social agencies.

Music Hath Power.

Odd how women will flock to the clubhouse when there's a musical programme on the tapis. No matter if most of them cannot tell "Pop Goes the King" from "God Save the Weasel" in the picturesque language of the Williamsons, nevertheless, they go—and, did you ever notice that some of the most appreciative listeners are those who couldn't "raise and fall" the scale of musical notes to save their precious necks?

"Nothing so soothes my nerves as a good musicale," confided the mother of a family as she removed her hat pins and settled down to enjoy herself at a club programme of music. "I just close my eyes and drink it in, and when the concert's over I feel as calm as a sphinx and equal to any domestic emergency that may arise."

Al Fresco Luncheon.

The Matinee Musical Club had a luncheon and election of officers at Senator Dorsey's old home in Pasadena last Thursday. The table, which was set on the large veranda, was decorated with the club colors. After the luncheon the election of officers was held under the spreading oak trees. The same officers were re-elected by an unanimous vote for the new year, and plans for the coming year were discussed.

The next meeting of the club will be a lawn fete, held at the home of Mrs. E. D. Chaddock, No. 1500 West Twentieth street. A musical programme will be given by Misses Ethel Coleman, Zillah Withrow, Barbara Taylor, Mrs. Heinrich and Mrs. Harry C. Underwood.

On Friday evening, May 31, a concert, under the auspices of the Matinee Musical Club, Ebell Club and the Music Teachers' Association, will be given at the Ebell Clubhouse as a testimonial to Mrs. Edith Schulenberg, who is just recovering from an illness extending over a period of six months.

Mrs. Ella Hamilton Durley

Of Los Angeles, who has been named as chairman of the League of American Pen Women to give greeting at the biennial convention in San Francisco in behalf of the women writers of this country.

Cliff Dwellers Climb.

The California Chapter of the Cliff Dwellings' Association met last Tuesday for their annual pow-wow or picnic on the grounds surrounding the beautiful home of Mrs. R. B. Ashley, No. 485 Prospect square, Pasadena. An enjoyable event of the day was a climb up Mt. Jumbo, and, after the bountiful al fresco luncheon, the members of the association turned to the more serious feature of the programme, which included the election of officers for the ensuing year, and resulted as follows: President, Mrs. William E. Riddle; vice-presidents, Mmes. A. J. Eaton, George Barndollar and L. D. Miller; corresponding secretary, Miss Josephine Dryden; historian, Mrs. R. P. Davis; recording secretary, Miss A. Coffey of Sierra Madre; auditor, Mrs. A. M. Lipsey of Long Beach; treasurer, Miss Anna Smith; House Committee, Miss G. Crissey, Mmes. J. R. McKinney and E. L. Baker; Membership Committee, Mmes. C. N. Green, W. I. Alter and George Barndollar; Press, Mmes. T. J. Day, B. F. Grieves and W. I. Alter; Programme, Mmes. L. D. Miller, Clay White, A. S. C. Forbes, J. P. Curtis and Miss M. E. Elliott; Social, Miss M. Elliott, Mmes. E. W. Goodam and Clay White.

Lecture on Panama.

Bernard Noon, who has spent four years in the canal zone, will give a lecture on the Panama Canal before the Cosmos Club next Wednesday afternoon. The lecture will be illustrated by stereopticon views, and a large audience is expected, as members are privileged to bring guests.

The programme the following Wednesday will be in charge of the music section in place of the French department, which was to have given a play, but, owing to the illness of some of the members, the idea had to be given up. Some fine vocalists have been engaged to assist, and Bruce Gordon Kingsley, who has directed the music section this year, will be the guest of honor. A reception to new members will follow. The annual luncheon will be held at Beverly Hotel May 21.

Ruskin Art Club.

"Present-Day Art in Holland and Belgium" was the subject under discussion at the Wednesday session of the Ruskin Art Club, Miss A. E. Wadleigh presiding. Mrs. H. P. Sweet described the work of Emile Claus, whose sunlit canvases have gained him world-wide fame, and that of Frans Courtens, the brilliant colorist and landscape painter. Miss Belle Smith spoke of the "New Impressionism" and of its best-known exponent, Theodore van Rysselberghe. Miss A. E. Wadleigh gave an account of some of the widely varying fads and theories to which the term "impressionism" has been applied, speaking also of the oriental leaven in Dutch art as exemplified in the paintings of Toorop and Prikker. The history of the life and work of Vincent van Gogh, one of the most striking figures of modern art, was given by Mrs. F. A. Stephens. Mrs. H. T. Fensel told of the remarkable work done by Henri van de Velde, founder of the National Belgian Association, in which architects, artists and craftsmen are banded together for the furtherance of municipal art.

EDUCATORS, CHURCHMEN.

George Grafton Wilson, professor of international law at Harvard, has been appointed as Harvard exchange professor to the Sorbonne in Paris for 1912-13. He will go abroad in exchange for Prof. Emilie Legouis, who is professor of English literature at the Sorbonne.

Rev. G. M. Walker, a preacher at several country churches in Howard county, Mo., has walked 18,000 miles since he began his quest for converts in the county sixteen years ago. Once during the past winter he was obliged to wade an icy creek to fill an engagement twenty-five miles away, where the offerings were $3.66.

A second gift of $25,000 to Brown University from John D. Rockefeller, Jr., has been announced. The endowment has now reached $815,000 toward the desired $1,000,000.

William H. Haskell, a plumber, is an instructor in the Wentworth Institute of Boston. When the school incorporated the plumbing trade in its curriculum Mr. Haskell was selected as instructor. The experiment has been successful, having attracted about seventy-five young men. Mr. Haskell has had thirty years' experience in the trade, is well educated, and advises his pupils to remain in school as long as possible, that they may fit themselves for the business competition of the day.

The distinguished anthropologist, Dr. Franz Boaz, professor in Columbia University, has written for the American Association for International Conciliation a strong pamphlet against war, in which he argues that the great increase in the size of nations and the growth of immigration are likely to make possible the abolition of war.

Rev. Dr. Cleland B. McAfee, pastor of the Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn, has been elected professor of systematic theology in the McCormick Theological Seminary, Chicago. He was formerly stationed in Chicago.

Chansonnete.

The joys that we have missed—
The broken tryst,
The friend we never knew,
The harp and lute unstrung,
The song unsung—
A little toast to you!

The joys that we have missed—
The lips unkissed,
The dreams that ne'er came true,
The homebound ships that sleep
In havens deep—
A little toast to you!

The joys that we have missed—
Life's unground grist,
Hopes unfilled—a few!
The days and nights unwreathed,
The love unbreathed—
A little toast to you!

—[Clarence Urmy, in Harper's Bazar.

The Earth Masque.

The majesty and marvel of these souls
Who walk beside us in the common day,
Or hail us like a cry from out the night!
Could we but scan these souls as we look deep
Into the chalice of white hyacinths,
Drawing the perfume from their hidden hearts;
Could we but rend these mystic veils of sense
That hang before the temple's occult shrine
And know the word made flesh, the shaft of light
That masks grotesquely in this mad world dream,
More foolish than night visions in the day,
Dear God, could we remember how to hate?

—[Alice E. Ives, in Harper's Weekly.

Richard De Haven

King of Life Readers

I was born with a strange and remarkable power—power not meant to gratify the idle curious, but to direct, advise and help men and women who are in trouble and suspense concerning the every day affairs of life.

$5.00 Life Reading $1.00

(Reduced fee for this week only.)

I give just as careful and complete a revelation of your business, love and domestic affairs for $1.00 as I do for my regular fee of $5 and $10. I am taking the reduced fee plan to introduce myself and my work more extensively to the people of this city, where I have established my permanent home.

My Work Speaks for Itself

While I have the endorsements of hundreds of the most noted men and women of America, I deem them of little value, since I stand alone upon the merits of my work. Any person who can believe their own eyes and ears cannot help but know that I am a man of high ability and undisputable power excelled by no man on earth in this line.

Master of Strange Powers

There are strange and mighty forces which men and women can use to better their conditions. These forces are called personal magnetism, mental telepathy, hypnotic suggestion, etc. All this I teach to any one who wishes to use it for legitimate and honorable purposes.

What I Do For $1.00

I tell you what condition your business is in and how to promote it. I tell you of any move, journey, position or change of any kind which may be before you, and how to act to obtain the best results. I tell you exactly what your acquaintances think of you, who to trust and who to avoid. In short, I tell you everything you called to find out, and that, too, without asking you a question or you speaking a word.

I guarantee to develop mediumship to its fullest degree in those who have any latent power whatever. If I do not succeed as above stated, I ask no fee for my work and give nothing whatever.

$5.00 Life Reading for $1.00

WHAT 'CUTICURA' DID FOR ONE FAMILY

Boy's Sore Cheeks Cured by Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Also Used Them to Heal Deep Cut and to Treat Ingrowing Toenail.

2120 Vine St., Cincinnati, Ohio.—"My little boy's cheeks began getting sore three years ago. I tried everything I ever heard of but nothing cured him. At last I sent for Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After four treatments his face began getting better and in three weeks' treatment he was cured.

"The first of July my oldest son fell and cut his hand. The cut was very deep. At the time I was in the country and it was impossible to get him to any doctor. I tied the wrist up and put on the Cuticura Ointment very thick, after that I washed it with the Cuticura Soap and continued using the Cuticura Ointment. He had no pain after the Ointment was applied and soon was completely cured of the cut with not a mark left.

"Nothing is better for ingrowing toenails than Cuticura Ointment. For more than eight years I suffered with an ingrowing nail. It almost set me wild. Two months ago I started to use Cuticura Ointment on it. At night I washed the foot with hot water and Cuticura Soap, then I would apply Cuticura Ointment on cotton and wrap the foot up. The ointment softened the hard skin and it could be removed without pain. In a week's time my foot was much better, now it is entirely well.

"For cuts and bruises I think washing them with Cuticura Soap and applying Cuticura Ointment is the best thing on earth. For insect bites if the bite is washed with hot water and Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment applied, one will receive immediate relief. I have tried it and know." (Signed) Mrs. Arend, Jr., Sept. 11, 1911.

Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world. A single set is often sufficient. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. book on the care of the skin. Address "Cuticura," Dept. T, Boston. Tender-faced men should shave with Cuticura Soap Shaving Stick.

The first that 20 per cent. of all Thor motorcycles sold are being used for every-day service, proves positively their supremacy as the most reliable motorcycle you can buy.

The great demand for a better-than-the-ordinary motorcycle to be used for daily, hard service, in the hands of R.F.D. carriers, inspectors, collectors, salesmen, buyers, delivery men and all other professions necessitating the covering of a great deal of ground at a low cost, made it necessary for the Thor factory to design this model as one being especially adapted for these purposes.

That the 4 H.P. model had made quick use have but to point to the fact that it has won every important endurance contest ever held.

Every business man should have a THOR motorcycle, as it is the cheapest, most convenient and economical investment that he can make. It is ready at a moment's notice—rain or shine—to make quick deliveries to any part of the city.

With a tandem attachment an extra person can be carried for long trips, which makes it ideal evenings or Sundays, when you are on pleasure bound. Owing to the practicability of Thor Motorcycles they are classed to a business necessity.

HOLMES MUSIC COMPANY—
425 S. Broadway.

Sole and exclusive agents for the celebrated C. G. Conn band and orchestra instruments.

For Monday only—A Conn baritone silver-plated, complete in case, just like new; in fact, not been used more than a month. This instrument cost $125, and will be sold if taken Monday, at $46

Following is a testimonial from Mr. Eugene G. Labarre, a celebrated eastern cornetist:

Mr. C. G. Conn, Elkhart, Indiana.

Dear Sir:—I want to express my sincere gratification to you for the excellent Cornet which you sent me. I hardly believed Herbert Clarke when he told me about the New Invention Cornet because he told me things about it that were very nearly impossible to believe as no Cornets I had ever used would come up to his explanation of the New Invention Cornet. However, I thought I would try one and the result is that I can do things that I would never have thought of on any other Cornets I have ever tried. My endurance is greater and my register increased to a great extent that I play everything now in public that heretofore I failed to possess nerve to do for fear of falling down on them. Its easy blowing embouchure now to do this because I do not have to strain, consequently my lip stands much longer. Wishing you the best of success, I am

Yours truly,
EUGENE G. LABARRE.

FOR

Achievements of Luther Trant.

Money—2.7 seconds—purse.

"Note," Trant said, suddenly; and "letter" he wrote again in two and six-tenths seconds.

Dr. Joslyn moved impatiently; and Trant brusquely pulled his chair nearer the table. The chair legs rasped on the hard-wood floor. Margaret shivered and, when Trant tried her with the next words, she merely repeated them. President Joslyn moved again.

"Cannot you proceed, Trant?" he asked.

"Not unless we can make her understand again, sir," the young man answered. "But I think, Dr. Joslyn, if you would show her what we mean—not merely try to explain again—we might go on. I mean, when I say the next word, will you take the mouthpiece from Dr. Relland and speak into it some different one?"

"Very well, if you think it will do any good."

"Thank you!" Trant replaced his mouthpiece. "October!" He named the month just ended. The pointer started. "Recitations!" the president of the university answered in one and nine-tenths seconds.

"Thank you. Now for Miss Lawrie, Dr. Relland!"

"Steal!" he tried; and the girl associated "iron" in two and seven-tenths seconds.

"Good!" Trant exclaimed. "If you will show her again, I think we can go ahead. Fourteenth!" he said to the president. Joslyn replied "fifteenth" in precisely two seconds and passed the drum back. All watched Miss Lawrie. But again Trant rasped sawelessly his chair upon the floor and the girl merely repeated the next words. Relland was unable to make her understand. Joslyn tried to help. Branower shook his head skeptically. But Trant turned to him.

"Mr. Branower, you can help me, I believe, if you will take Dr. Joslyn's place. I beg your pardon, Dr. Joslyn, but I am sure your nervousness prevents you from helping now."

Branower hesitated a moment, skeptically; then, smiling, took up the drum. Trant replaced his mouthpieces.

"Blow," he said. "Wind," Branower answered quietly. Trant mechanically noted the time, two seconds, for all were intent upon the next trial with the girl.

"Books!" Trant said. "Library!" said the girl, now able to associate the different words and in her minimum time of two and a half seconds.

"I think we are going again," said Trant. "If you will keep on, Mr. Branower. "Strike!" he exclaimed, to start the pointer. "Labor trouble," Branower returned in just under two seconds; and again he guided the girl. For "conceal" she answered "hide" at once. Then Trant tested rapidly this series:

Margaret, conceal—2.6—hide.
Branower, figure—2.1—shape.
Margaret, thief—3.8—silver.
Branower, twenty-fifth—4.5—twenty-ninth.

"Joslyn!" Trant tried an intelligible test word suddenly. He had just suggested "thief" to the girl; now he named her father's friend, the president of the university. But "friend" she was able to associate in two and six-tenths seconds. Trant sank back and wrote this series without comment:

Margaret, Joslyn—2.6—friend.
Branower, wife—4.4—Cora.
Margaret, secret—2.7—Alice.

Trant glanced up, surprised, considered a moment, but then bowed to Mr. Branower to guide the girl again, saying "wound," to which he wrote the reply "no," after four and six-tenths seconds. Immediately Trant made the second direct and intelligible test.

"Branower!" he shot, suggestively, to the girl; but "friend" she was again able to associate at once. As the moment before the president of the trustees had glanced at Joslyn, now the president of the university nodded to Branower. Trant continued his list rapidly:

Margaret, Branower—2.7—friend.
Branower, letter-opener—4.9—desk.

"Father!" Trant tried next. But from this there came no association, as the emotion was too deep. Trant, recognizing this, nodded to Mr. Branower to start the next test, and wrote:

Mrgaret, father—no association.
Branower, Harrison—5.9—Cleveland.
Margaret, university—2.8—study.
Branower, married—2.1—wife.
Margaret, expose—2.6—camera.
Branower, brother—4.9—sister.
Margaret, sink—3.7—kitchen.
Branower, collapse—4.8—balloon.

"Relland!" Trant said to the girl at last. It was as if he put off the trial for his own old friend as long as he could. All eyes were upon the swinging pointer of the chronoscope, which, at the mention of her father's best and oldest friend in that way, Margaret was unable to stop. One full second it swung, two, three, four, five, six —

The young assistant in psychology picked up his papers and arose. He called in the nurse from the next room. "That is all, gentlemen," he said. "Shall we go down to the study?"

"Well, Trant?" President Joslyn demanded impatiently, as the four filed into the room below. "You act as if you had discovered some clew. What is it?"

Trant was closing the door carefully when a surprised exclamation made him turn.

"Cora!" Mr. Branower exclaimed; "you here? Oh! You came to see poor Margaret!"

"I couldn't stay home thinking of you torturing her so this morning!" The beautiful woman swept their faces with a glance of anxious inquiry.

"I told Cora last night something about our test, Joslyn," Branower explained. "You can go up to Margaret now, my dear."

She seemed to resist. Trant fixed his eyes upon her, speculatively.

"I see no reason for sending Mrs. Branower away if she wishes to stay and hear with us the results of our test, which Dr. Relland is about to give us." Trant handed him the sheets upon which he had written his record.

"Now, Dr. Relland, please! Will you explain to us what these tell you?"

Dr. Joslyn's hands clenched and Branower drew toward his wife as Relland took the papers and examined them earnestly. But the old professor raised a puzzled face.

"Luther," he appealed, "to me these show nothing[Margaret's normal association-time for innocent words, as you established at the start, is about two and one-half seconds. She did not exceed that in any of the words with guilty associations which you put to her. From these results, I should say, it is scientifically impossible that she even knows her father is accused. Her replies indicate nothing unless—unless," he paused, painfully, "because she could associate nothing with my name you consider that implies—"

"That you are so close to her that at your name, as at the name of her father, the emotion was very deep, Dr Relland," the young man interrupted. "But do not look only at Margaret's associations! Tell us, instead, what Dr. Joslyn's and Mr. Branower's show!"

"Dr. Joslyn's and Mr. Branower's?"

"Yes! For they show, do they not—unconsciously, but scientifically and quite irrefutably—that Dr. Joslyn could not possibly have been concerned in any way with those notes, part of which were due and paid upon the 14th of October; but that Mr. Branower has a far from innocent association with them, and with the 25th of the month, on which the rest were paid!"

He swung toward the trustee. "So Mr. Branower, you were the man in the room Sunday night! You, to save the rascal Harrison, your wife's brother and the real thief, struck Dr. Lawrie dead in his office, burned the raised notes, turned on the gas and left him to seem a suicide and a thief!"

For the second time within twenty-four hours, Trant held Dr. Relland and the president of the university astounded before him. But Branower gave an ugly laugh.

"If you could not spare me, you might at least have spared my wife this last raving accusation! Come, Cora!" he commanded.

"I thought you might control yourself, Mr. Branower," Trant returned. "And when I saw your wife wished to stay I thought I might keep her to convince even President Joslyn. You see?" he quietly indicated Mrs. Branower as she fell, white and shaking, into a chair. "Do not think that I would have told it in this way if these facts were new to her. I was sure the only surprise to her would be that we knew them."

Branower bent to his wife; but she straightened and recovered.

"Mr. Branower," Trant continued then, "if you will excuse chance errors, I will make a fuller statement.

"I should say, first, that since you kept his relationship a secret, this Harrison, your wife's brother, was a rascal before he came here. Still you procured him his position in the treasurer's office, where he soon began to steal. It was very easy. Dr. Lawrie merely signed notes; Harrison made them out. He could make them out in erasable ink and raise them after they were signed, or in any other simple way. Suffice it that he did raise them and stole one hundred thousand dollars. When the notes were presented for payment, the matter was laid before you. You must have promised Dr. Lawrie to make up the loss, for he paid the notes and entered the payment in his books. Then the time came when the books must be presented for audit. Lawrie wrote that last appeal to you to put off the settlement no longer. But before the letter was delivered you and Mrs. Branower had hurried off to Elgin to see this Harrison, who was hurt. You got back, Sunday evening and read Dr. Lawrie's note. You went to him; and, unable to make payment, there in his office you struck him dead—"

But Branower was upon him with a harsh cry.

"You devil! You devil! But you lie! I did not kill him!"

"With a blow? Oh, no! You raised no hand against him. But his heart was weak. At your refusal to carry out your promise, which meant his ruin, he collapsed before you—dead. Do you wish to continue the statement now yourself?"

The wife gathered herself. "It is no so! No!" she forbade, "no!" But Branower turned on President Joslyn a haggard face.

"Is this true?" the president demanded sternly. Branower buried his face in his hands.

"I will tell you all," he said thickly. "Harrison, as this fellow found out somehow, is my wife's brother. He has always been reckless, wild; but she—Cora, do not stop me now—loved him and clung to him as—as a sister sometimes clings to such a brother. They were alone in the world, Joslyn. She married me only on condition that I save and protect him. He demanded a position here. I hesitated. His life had been one long scandal; but never before had he had been dishonest with mone. Finally, I made it a condition to keep his relationship secret, and sent for him. I myself discovered he had raised the notes, weeks before you came to me with the evidence you had discovered that something was wrong in the treasurer's office. As soon as I found out, I went to Lawrie. He agreed to keep Harrison about the office until I could remove him quietly. He paid the notes from the university reserve, just raised, upon my promise to make it up. David had lost all speculating in stock. I could not pay this tremendous amount in cash at once; but the books were to be audited. Lawrie, who had expected immediate repayment from me, would not even once present a false statement. In our argument his heart gave out—I did not know it was weak—and he collapsed in his chair—dead."

Dr. Relland groaned, wringing his hands.

"Oh, Prof. Relland!" Mrs. Branower cried now. "He has not told everything. I—I had followed him!"

"You followed him?" Trant cried. "Ah, of course!"

"I thought—I told him," the wife burst on, "this had happened by Providence to save David!"

"Then it was you who suggested to him to leave the stiletto letter opener in Lawrie's hand as an evidence of suicide!"

Branower and his wife both stared at Trant in fresh terror.

"But you, Mr. Branower," Trant went on, "not being a woman with a precious brother to save, could not think of making a wound. You thought of the gas. Of course! But it was inexcusable in me not to test for Mrs. Branower's presence. It was her odd mental association of a perpetrator with the news of the suspected suicide that first aroused my suspicions."

He turned as though the matter were finished, but met Dr. Joslyn's perplexed eyes. The end attained was plain, but to the president of the university the road by which they had come was dark as ever. Branower had taken his wife into another room. He returned.

"Dr. Joslyn," said Trant, "it is scientifically impossible—as any psychologist will tell you—for a person who associates the first suggested idea in two and one-half seconds, like Margaret, to substitute another without almost doubling the time interval.

"Observe Margaret's replies. 'Iron' followed 'steal' as quickly as 'cat' followed 'dog.' 'Silver,' the thing a woman first thinks of in connection with burglary, was the first association she had with 'thief.' No possible guilty thought there. No guilty secret connected with her father prevented her from associating, in her regular time, some girl's secret with Alice Seaton next door. I saw her innocence at once and continued questioning her merely to avoid a more formal examination of the others. I rasped my chair over the floor to disturb her nerves, therefore, and got you into the test.

"The first two tests of you, Dr. Joslyn, showed that you had no association with the notes. The date half of them came due meant nothing to you. 'October' suggested only recitations and 'fourteenth' permited you to associate simply the succeeding day in an entirely unsuspicious time.

"I substituted Mr. Branower. I had explained this system as getting results from persons with poor mental resistance. I had not mentioned it as even surer of results when the person tested is in full control of his faculties even suspicious and trying to prevent betraying himself. Mr. Branower clearly thought he could guard himself from giving me anything. Now notice his replies.

"The twenty-fifth, the day most of the notes were due, meant so much that it took double the time, before he could drive out his first suspicious association, merely to say 'twenty-sixth.' I told you I suspected his wife was at least cognizant of something wrong. It took him twice the necessary time to say 'Cora' after 'wife' was mentioned. He gave the first association, but the chronoscope registered mercilessly that he had to think it over. 'Wound' then brought the remarkable association 'no' at the end of four and six-tenths seconds. There was no wound, but something had made it so that he had to think it over to see if it was suspicious. When I first saw that dagger letter opener on Dr. Lawrie's desk I thought that if a man were trying to make it seem suicide he must at least have thought of using the dagger before the gas.

"Now, note the next test, 'Harrison.' Any innocent man, not overdoing it, would answer at once the name of the Harrison immediately in all our minds. Mr. Branower thought of him first, of course, and could have answered in two seconds. To drive out that and think of President Harrison so as to give a seemingly 'innocent' association, 'Cleveland,' took him over five seconds.

"I then went for the hold of this Harrison, probably, upon Mrs. Branower. I tried for it twice. The second trial, 'brother,' made him think again for five seconds, practically, before he could decide that sister was not a guilty word to give. As the first words 'blow' only brought 'wind' in two seconds and 'strike' suggested 'labor' at once, I knew he could not have struck Dr. Lawrie a blow; and my last words showed, indeed, that Lawrie probably collapsed before him. And I was done."

Dr. Joslyn was pacing the room with rapid steps. "It is plain. Branower, you offer nothing in your defense?"

"There is nothing."

"There is much. The university owes a great debt to your father. The autopsy will show conclusively that Dr. Lawrie died of heart failure. The other facts are private with ourselves. You can restore this money. Its absence I will reveal only to the trustees. I shall present to them at the same time your resignation from the board."

He turned to Trant. "But this secrecy, young man, will deprive you of the reputation you might have gained through the really remarkable, method you used through this investigation."

"It makes no difference," Trant answered, "if you will give me a short leave from the university. As I mentioned to Dr. Relland yesterday, the prosecuting attorney of Chicago was murdered two weeks ago. Sixteen men—one of them surely guilty—are held, but the criminal cannot be picked among them. I wish to try the scientific psychology again. If I succeed, I shall resign and keep after crime—in the new way!"

CARPET FOR ROADS.

An Improved Surface Binder Required That Will Be Elastic, Silent, Dustless and Form No Puddle Holes.

[Baltimore American:] A lecture was recently delivered by a member of the Road Board before the Royal Institution of London on "The Road, Past, Present and Future." The lecturer said the problem was to find the best mode by which a road should be constructed so that its surface would not be broken by traffic, so that the transit might be easier for both passengers and goods, a road which would form neither puddle holes nor exude mud from vehicles, and create no dust when the weather was dry.

One thing was universally recognized, that the road of the future should be a truly bound road in which, whatever kind of stone was used, the stone should be held together so that it would form a crust. The lecturer, according to Consular and Trade Reports, suggested that what he called a carpet or an elastic skin should be adopted as the covering.

The carpet, he thought, should be made of bituminous material mixed with sand and placed on the roads in various thicknesses according to the nature of the traffic. It should go on in liquid form, solidifying quickly, but always remaining resilient and compressible, and so integrating with the crust of the road that there could be no shifting of the surface below.

The advantage of such a carpet, it was said, would be to permanently protect the crust, and just as a carpet on the floor softens the step so would this carpet for the roads silence the noise and reduce the shock of rolling vehicles. It was admitted that the original cost of a road so laid would be more than that of a mud-bound road, but spreading the cost over a series of years it would probably not be so great, since the crust of the road itself would not have to be renewed.

The Sea.

How I long to roam o'er the bounding sea,
Where the waters and winds are fierce and free;
Where the wild bird sails in his tireless flight
As the sunrise scatters the shades of night;
Where the porpoise and dolphin sport at play,
In their liquid realm of green and gray,
Ah, me! It is there I would love to be,
Engulfed in the tomb of eternity.

In the midnight hour when the moon hangs low,
And the stars beam forth with a mystic glow;
When the mermaids float o'er the rolling tide,
And Neptune entangles his beaming bride;
It is there in that phosphorescent wave,
I would gladly sink in an ocean grave—
To rise and fall with the songs of the sea
And live in the chant of its memory.

Around the world my form should sweep
Part of the glorious, limitless deep,
Enmeshed by fate in some coral cave,
And rising again to the topmost wave
That curves in beauty its snowy spray,
And kisses the light of the garish day,
Ah, there let me drift when this life is o'er,
To be tossed and tumbled from shore to shore!

GODDESS OF PLEASURE LURING MODERN LONDON

Continental Criticism of British Dullness Spurs John Bull to Livelier Capers—Even Sunday Is Losing Its Terrors for the Cosmopolitan Visitor—Londoners Are Demanding Open-air Restaurants.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LONDON, May 2.—Spurred by foreign criticisms, London is trying to "get a move on" and gain fame as a socially-sprightlier city. Did you ever hear London referred to as a city of pleasure, where the joy of life runs riot in the streets? Travelers, tourists, Londoners and all will agree that the answer is in the negative. If there is anything dear old London has not a reputation for it is gaiety.

To the American or colonial traveler this makes little difference; he comes to London to see the capital of his civilization. He comes as a pilgrim to the central scene of the sturdy history of his race. Open-air restaurants, Bals Tabarin, or the spirited motley of the fashionable French Sunday would mostly grate on him in London and distract him from the really serious purpose of his visit.

But continental visitors are not so magnanimous. To them London, in the words of Mr. Polly, is "a 'ole: a beastly, blooming wheeze of a 'ole." Their complaints cover a wide field. You can't get a meal on Sunday. You can't eat in the open air and engage in brotherly conversation with your neighbor. If he is an Englishman he freezes up behind his paper. And the Londoner at lunch hour seems to dislike the light and air with unnatural hatred. He eats in holes under the ground, in stuffy, inhospitable teashops. The place resounds with the clatter of dominoes, and endless groups of grim clients gaze mournfully at chessboards. The detestable concentration of the expert discourages conversation. Most of the customers read, taking in food for the body and food for the brain with unattractive industry.

Even a New Yorker, mindful of the anarchy of Childs's, demurs at the unsociable atmosphere. At Childs's people may bolt their food, but they do talk to each other. The place is alive. But a teashop in London is dull and dismal. The warmer side of humanity is absent. Apart from the maidens who banter the waitresses, ally smirking that has no real part in gaiety, most of the customers look grave or positively dejected. Truly, says the Frenchman, if London is to be judged by the way she takes her food, she is the most dreary city on earth.

How about the other meals? When Parliament is sitting, for instance, where does the member betake himself during that respected period referred to in next morning's papers as the "dinner interval?" Does he repair, as does his German confrere in the Reichstag, to some spacious public dining place as the Cafe Stadt or the Cafe Opera, where he may dine luxuriously among a gay and gorgeous crowd of pleasure-lovers? Does he hurry away, as does every good deputy in the French chamber, to seek out his favorite cafe, thronged as a rule with his friends, there to indulge sociably in good food and partake of an atmosphere which overflows with brilliant wit and lively imputation? Does he meet "the boys" at some obscure little oyster-house or "hash emporium" just as a few Washington legislators still solve their country's problems according to the best traditions of American democracy? Does he emulate the bright jollity of the stylish Viennese, say at the Tivoli Cafe at Schonbrunn? Generally, sad to say, he does nothing so human as these.

London is the city of brilliant dinner tables, but they are exclusive and stately functions. "Dining out" is the rage of bachelor M. P.'s, but such private gatherings as surround the dinner tables of London should much rather be called for truth's sake, "dining in." At the National Liberal Club, or the Carlton Club, the House of Commons dinner interval finds many Liberal or Conservative members dining in groups amid a reasonably convivial chatter, but here again the privacy of club life strips the scene of any broadly public character of joviality. The House itself has appeals to the taste of the economical. It serves a 25-cent abundant dinner at a loss to the State. There is no jollity about it, but there is ample fare and cheapness—and both count to the modern democratic, serious-minded M. P.

As a matter of fact, the gaiety of present day London only admits of one way in which a man and his wife may spend the evening in public—that is, dinner and the theater afterwards. In all the great continental capitals the cafes, the beer gardens, the roof gardens, the street restaurants and other such attractions offer an infinite variety of pleasant evenings. And if you wish to realize today how much London is lacking in this regard, you should go, not to Paris, but to Vienna. Paris is not quite the city of joyous and spontaneous pleasure it was within the memory of our generation. The curious and money-laden Anglo-Saxon has brought increasing disingenuousness to the capital of the French. The city's modern temper, too, is sophisticated and sardonic; the fresh, youthful gaiety of "the wickedest city in the world" lives chiefly on its reputation.

Vienna, however, is not yet vulgarized. Her civic temperament is still one of unaffected gaiety and lightheartedness. Straus and Lehar are sufficient witnesses of her artistic freshness and originality, which have produced the "sparkling vaise" of the Viennese. It is in Vienna today that public and spontaneous dancing is really an art, and not a garish display prearranged to gather in "ze dollairs Americain." At the "Dummer Kerl," the "Susses Madel," the "Tivoli" or other of her resorts there gathers a throng of gay revelers every night to respond to the lively Tyrolean airs of a real Tyrolean orchestra. At this time of the year visitors could probably find more color and vivacity, and high spirits among the gay young folk of the Austrian capital than Paris could give when her season is "le plus tip-top."

Recently the London corporation had plenty of opportunity to lean what the life of Vienna was like, for the members enjoyed an elaborate and magnificent junket to the Austrian capital. There they tasted the superb beer which the city of Vienna brews for its citizens, and partook of a succession of banquets which taxed the unrestrained appetites, even of those grand diners who have made the Guildhall famous. The good breeding and the savoir faire of the citizens of the Hapsburg capital have always tempered their feasts with a distinction which must have taught the corpulent Londoners the superior pleasures of public banqueting, the conviviality which depends not on viands, but on conversation and natural high spirits.

All this is tending to make John Bull a little discontented with himself. He seeks consolation in the fact that it is not only in its fashion of eating and drinking and amusing itself that the natural gaiety of a city may be displayed. The warm good cheer of the British host is not a public thing, but it is a warm attribute of a very hospitable people. It is a disposition which is not at all incapable of enjoying itself properly, but it needs to be loosened from the strict privacy which keeps it out of the sight of the more volatile continental visitors.

There is plenty of evidence in the activities of present-day London that the old English good cheer is really being thus brought out from its parochial reticence into something that might almost be called gaiety so far as a fitful northern climate will allow. The wish, at least, is very clearly in evidence. In the matter of clothes, for instance, the developments of the last few years have been incredible. The old gentleman of the white woolen socks and the bulgy black suit has given place to a new generation of city man, who when he is not wearing the conventional morning coat and "topper," blossoms out in colored shirts, dove waistcoats, and socks to match his tie. London milliners and dressmakers are fast coming to rival those of Paris in devising smart creations in gay and tasteful colors. Color is in fact coming in everywhere, and there is no better sign of a people's improving sociability and good spirits than warm shades and harmonious varieties of hue.

London has long been famous for having the best-tailored men in the world. Now she has deliberately set out to have the best-dressed city. She is smartening up all the gray old buildings left over from a dowdier age. The majestic new government offices up Parliament street, the distinguished group of museums which have lent their graceful decoration to South Kensington, the broad thoroughfare of Kingsway annihilating the grime and muddle of a slum area, new railway depots and hosts of other improvements have laid the foundations of a new London of far more splendid proportions than the dwellers of the old had ever conceived. Hammerstein's new opera-house on Kingsway has helped; so have the colonies with their new government offices. Hardly a year passes but sees the dedication of a new theater to the pleasure-loving section of London, while in places flaring frontages of picture palaces recall in pale reflection New York's Great White Way.

Even the London Sunday is losing its stiffness. You can't get much of a meal or any sort of liquor in London for a great part of the day, but you are no longer short of honest diversion. The picture galleries are open, bands play in the parks, the town at night affords a choice of many concerts of a high order. For that London has chiefly to thank the National Sunday League, whose president, ex-Lord Mayor Sir William Treloar, has devoted long years to wearing down the opposition to healthy amusements on the day of rest. Today few are to be found to deny that the results of his efforts have been all to the good of the community. The critics, in fact, would nowadays be found more often in the saloon-keepers than among the clerics.

This growing provision for London's rising spirits is also serving to bring out some of her unique characteristics and fascinations. London is the most international city in the world. Far more intimately than New York can ever be, she is still the central home of a great nation. Paris, if Victor Hugo is not forgotten, holds a nation within her faubourgs in a similar manner; but the attitude of cynical self-contemplation which lives in modern Paris does not leave the invading provincials uncorrupted. No such effect as this comes from association with London, however. The spell which London weaves fills the mind with the rooted traditions of London's earth. You turn down a chance side street, look up casually at the sign—it may be Watling street. Of a sudden the majesty of the past grows up around you; the tramp of Roman legionaries resounds on the road, the footsteps of Chaucer's pilgrims clatter past; England is about you and around you. So near is the old London to the new.

The international aspect of modern London cannot be seen better than among the streaming crowds that throng Leicester Square and the district east of Piccadilly Circus just after theater time. Here may be seen the dark-skinned Hindu jostling elbows with Taffy come up from Wales for a week-end's rampage. The gutterals of the Teuton are cut across by the sharp staccato tones of the elegant Japanese and filled in with the braw burr of the hefty Scotsman. A big negro swings along. Colonials weave their way in and out of the crowd looking at the cosmopolitan array of pleasure-seekers—and sellers — with boyish curiosity. There is hardly a nation in the world unrepresented in it, if you seek for it. Omnipresent on the pavement is the keen-eyed American, most curious and most interested of all, and ready to say "hullo" or lend a match to anybody.

Surely London is becoming gay. Londoners are even proposing nowadays that Hyde Park should be graced with outdoor restaurants where there could be music and dancing of an evening. They are universally sorry that the attempt of a French syndicate to construct a "Paris in London" in Aldwych, with street restaurants and open-air theaters, has been abandoned. Enterprising promoters have proposed street cafes even for the seething vortex of Piccadilly Circus. And Londoners have made up their minds that such things are inevitable in the near future. They are keen to figure as citizens of a city known to all the world as "gay."

HUNTING THE "TIP."

A Commercial Traveler's Experience With Hotel Employees Who Get Their Wages from Guests.

[Commercial Travelers' Magazine:] "Arrived at Mansion House 6:45—house full. Drew back room over kitchen. Only one chair and one window. Bum bed. Bellhop moved chair twice, opened, then closed window as hint for tip. Next asked if I wanted anything else. Felt like kicking him out of window, but gave up a dime. He didn't even say 'thank you.' Washed and went down to office. Nother bellhop jumped for me with whisk-broom. Chased me clear across office. Gave up nickel. Hiked for hotel cafe. Supper slip 95 cents. Got two halves and nickel back from $2 bill. Felt ashamed to leave nickel on plate. Left half and cussed self for it. Hat-rack boy outside brushed hat. Got nickel. Got shaved next. Barber glared at me; tipped him a dime. Brush boy grabbed my hat. Brushed it some more. Nickel again. Wrote orders and wifey. Got chased with brush-broom hornet again. Stung for 'nother nick. Played pool two hours. Pool-keeper kept glaring till I tipped him. 'Nother sting. Back to office. Fresh whisk-broom hornet got after me. Gave up 'nother nickel. Got woke up 4 a.m. by clatter of garbage cans. Dressed and gave boy who brought it quarter. Was all I wanted. Got nickel from him no. I wanted to see him go down seven flights of stairs. Did it fast bill just 76. Got change only from dollar. Left it for the bill, two-fifty. When hunt for me came three bellhops grabbed things. One got grip, one coat and third my coat. Nother chased out with whisk-broom. Was on to by now didn't tip any of 'em. 'em matter 'tight-wad' when I hack door myself. Posted up in of tips on way to depot. sixty!"

TABRIZ'S ANCIENT CITADEL.

Known as the Ark, but Known a Protection Used to the Execution for Criminals.

[Baltimore American:] The outstanding feature in Tabriz is the citadel, locally known as the Ark. It is said to keep over a hundred days' supply of solid burnt brick, which, it is said, have been raised by All Sheik Ali.

The citadel itself is a massive structure on top of a mound, commanding looking the town. The walls are 40 feet thick, loopholed throughout, and there is room for commodation within for a thousand men. A hundred feet deep traditions attach to this ancient monument. It is said that the king from which it is fashioned was thrown to the masses by an Assyrian slave who was filled with admiration at his prowess he displayed.

In this connection the method of execution in Tabriz is interesting. Criminals condemned from other parts of Persia commit of the Ark.

The Russian colony is a large one in Tabriz, and the Consulate-General is a big affair. The Russian Consulate also is a very considerable institution, besides which there are numerous engineering and telephonic features connected with the Tabriz-Julfa railway service, which is a Russian-owned highway.

Tabriz is also the point of entry from Hindustan to which the British army supplies a garrison. The British Consul-General at Tabriz is a commissioned officer and has a small force of Indian cavalry.

Tabriz is chiefly known in the East for the excellence of the carpets manufactured there. These rugs have a texture and coloring all their own, and the agents of European countries resident in Tabriz are in the ranks of the diplomatic corps, consisting officials are engaged in the carpet trade.

IMPERIAL VALLEY—

FOR SALE — JOHN I HAVE BEEN TO Mr. Lloyd at 4th Front Bldg., and he is selling a good 40-acre ranch in that fine Imperial Valley for $4000, and only asked from cash, and the balance to run three-and-a-half a year. He will also stock this with dairy cows, horses, chickens, or turkeys if we want them. I am reading up on Imperial Valley, and those people are certainly making the money. They are making from $40 to $60 per acre on alfalfa. Grapes are getting $60 per acre, apricots $60 to $80 per acre. Why, they are shipping apricots now, and are getting $1.60 per box. With the increased cost of living and the citizens having to be clothed, housed, and fed all the days of his life, we cannot afford to stay here in the city and work hard all of our lives on a small monthly salary, so I want you to go right down there and buy us a ranch before they are all gone.

FOR SALE—

I believe in advertising the truth, and I mean what I say when I tell you that I have a neighbor who owns 160 acres of land in that state of cultivation, three and a half miles from Rockwood, and is the best boy in Imperial Valley. I have been located in the Valley for eight years, and know every condition. I know what I am talking about, and if my statement is not true it will not cost you a cent to see the ranch. It would take about $100 buys 10 acres of property. Investigate; you cannot afford to miss this. Come and see me at once.

FACT AND COMMENT.

The Mitchells have come and the Shrimers have gone—part of them—to spread in all parts of the continent the glad news to hold high carnival in the City of the Angels. It would be impossible to pry some of the Northern folks from their anchorage in the Los Angeles. Others, now back home, will never know another moment of peace until they have returned with their souls and earthly possessions to abide as a permanent residence here.

There is a lesson for this city in the great Shrine meeting, a lesson which should not be lost. Every convention visitor to Los Angeles learned the things that constitute an influence to draw him back to become one of us. First, he found out that Los Angeles has really superior advantages to offer to the business man and the man with capital to invest. The material evidence of our prosperity thrust themselves before the visitor. Secondly, he learned that the life is truly worth the living. The next national convention is worth more to Los Angeles in an advertising way than may be reckoned in dollars and cents. No effort should be spared to make this the greatest convention city in the country.

Kindly Criticism.

An visiting Mariner, a well-to-do man who has traveled all over the world, delivered himself of a criticism of Los Angeles which was none the less friendly because frank. "Do you know," he said, "that I think Los Angeles, with all her got up and style, is slow in one important respect? Your city, the natural playground and pleasure resort of the Western Hemisphere, is actually so wedded to commercialism that it is being signally to realize the fullness of one of its greatest assets.

"People come out here many of them with the idea that Los Angeles is of climate and resort life only and not up to the average Angeleno is so wrapped up in money-making and things that he has no time for pure or healthful recreation. It is only when some great convention like that of the Shriners comes here that the city relaxes. The rest of the year it is business, business, business—sky-scrapers, bank clearings and manufacturing statistics seem to impress the mind of your people as the only things worth while. Nothing like this should be. For it is nothing but the good business, this among the pleasure-seeking world to your city.

"The resorts of Mediterranean Europe, on, believe me, they have no such charms as that of Southern California, are absolutely alive to the commercial possibilities of the tourist trade and spare no effort or expense to attract the traveler. Los Angeles ought to have the finest municipal band in the world and a beautiful place where thousands upon thousands of people might gather to hear them. She ought to have an annual fiesta that would make those of Spain and other Old World centers look like the 10-cent concert after the show by comparison. In a word, Los Angeles ought to wake up to the advantage of a neglected asset. It means added prosperity and added population."

Plaudits for the City Council to the effect that a committee of architects and engineers carefully go over the building laws is one to be heartily commended. There are in the construction ordinances many provisions that are of questionable merit and a few that will not bear close inspection. It is the consensus of opinion that a number of the sections are unnecessarily stringent. For example, the roof tests here require that the builder of a downtown office block prepare his roof structure to withstand a strain that could never by any stretch of the imagination be expected in this part of the country. In Minneapolis and Detroit, where high winds prevail and where snow and ice several feet in thickness pile upon the tops of buildings over night, the roof test is actually less severe than it is here. This section of the ordinances, together with others that are in question, will be carefully considered by the Revision Committee.

The question of revision comes right home to every builder in the city, however, in one respect. Many a man in contemplating the erection of a house has had cause to wonder that the laws should require him to build walls of brick or concrete so thick as to make the cost of a house of fireproof or semi-fireproof construction almost prohibitive. The chief inspector of buildings is insistent in his contention that this clause of the ordinance works a real hardship upon the people and that it should be completely revised.

There is no possible excuse for such thick walls in a small building like an ordinary dwelling-house or flat. Were the laws in this respect made to conform to reason, it would be possible for the builder to erect a house of brick or concrete almost as cheaply as he could construct one of wood. The erection of the more substantial type of dwelling, too, is most certainly to be encouraged rather than discouraged.

Far in Lead.

For the benefit of the misinformed San Franciscans mentioned in last Sunday's comments, the authors of the "market letter," which bewailed the "building depression in Los Angeles," the Fact and Comment man appends a few additional figures that are calculated to still further allay any anxiety that may exist in the Bay City on that score.

From January 1 to May 1, inclusively, the chief inspector of buildings issued 4923 permits for new buildings in this city. The total valuation of these improvements was $8,947,076. The figures for the corresponding period of last year were 3597 permits and $6,650,503.

From January 1 to May 1, 1912, San Francisco's permits numbered 1721 and represented a building valuation of $8,077,268. For the same period in 1911 the Bay City issued 2553 permits, with a valuation of $7,645,283.

In the number of permits issued Los Angeles shows a gain of 1326, or 36 per cent., while San Francisco shows a loss of 827 permits, or 32 per cent. In valuation Los Angeles gained $2,096,573, or 36 per cent., while San Francisco advanced $1,032,000, or 14 per cent. The figures, both in magnitude and in percentage reckoning are entirely with Los Angeles, even overlooking the fact that San Francisco officially adds 25 per cent. a month to her building cost "to allow for undervaluation."

The writer has no quarrel with San Francisco and would never consider such a subject as this editorially if it were not for the constant effort of the Bay City publicity mediums to claim for the northern metropolis a supremacy in coast activities which the facts will not warrant. Even this wouldn't be so bad if they would refrain from misrepresenting conditions in Los Angeles.

Los Angeles has already issued this year over 2200 permits for new residences alone, or 500 more permits than have been issued by the Bay City for buildings of every size, shape and description. All the previous records for construction in this as well as in every other respect are being completely discounted by this year's activities here. Even were San Francisco ahead of us it would be ridiculous to say that Los Angeles was falling off in building, for the record of the past three years has been one of constant climbing.

In the national building column Los Angeles holds her regular position of fourth place, after New York, Chicago and Philadelphia, in point of construction outlay and of third, after New York and Philadelphia, in the number of permits issued. This city, in fact, is closer than ever upon the heels of Chicago and Philadelphia and may even outstrip the latter place before the end of the year.

IOWAN BUYS FINE TRACT.

Wealthy Middle West Cattleman Acquires Acreage on Washington Boulevard.

A noteworthy acreage deal was concluded during the past week by H. G. Holabird & Co., who sold for Charles Rapp to a wealthy cattleman from Iowa a thirty-six-acre tract lying between Washington boulevard and the Playa del Rey line. The consideration is given at $1000 an acre. The buyer will hold the property as an investment.

Yesterday's Times reported the organization by Mr. Holabird of a corporation known as the Sunnybrook Company and the taking over by this company of eighty-six acres on Washington boulevard at the junction of that thoroughfare with West Adams street. The property is accessible to two car lines and will in all probability be subdivided at an early date.

A creek of clear water runs through the tract and the natural contour of the property makes feasible an elaborate and attractive landscaping scheme. The officers of the Sunnybrook Company, which includes among its stockholders some of the most prominent men of the city, are H. G. Holabird, president; D. E. Llewellyn, vice-president; M. S. Hellman, treasurer, and Francis Marshall, secretary.

CHURCH IS IMPOSING.

Roman Catholic Edifice for South Main Street to Follow Gothic Lines. Bids Now Being Taken.

With the foundations practically completed, bids are being taken by Architect A. C. Martin for the construction of the superstructure of the imposing new Church of the Holy Cross on the west side of South Main street, between Forty-sixth and Forty-seventh streets. The edifice, which is being erected for the Roman Catholic bishop of Monterey and Los Angeles, will be of the Gothic type and of brick construction, the trim being of stone.

The church will be finished throughout in oak, with a pointed arch plastered ceiling. A tall spire at one corner will be a striking architectural feature. The seating capacity will be about 600.

The building will be ready for occupancy about the last of November. The Rev. Father Thomas F. Fahey is the pastor.

BUY CLOSE-IN CORNER.

Syndicate Acquires Site at Seventeenth and Georgia—Secures Lease on Valuable Seventh-street Holding.

Black Bros. report sales as follows: Site 148x175 feet in size, north side of Seventeenth street, between Georgia and Cherry, T. A. Parker and others to L. Ephriam, consideration, $18,000.

Thirty lots, 57x150 feet each, in Huntington Park, for the Wesley Land Company to Adolph Galland of Spokane, Wash., consideration, $21,000.

An eight-year lease on the Eschman block on the north side of Seventh street, between Broadway and Hill, was concluded by the same company for the R. D. Bronson Desk Company as lessor, and the Watson & Middleton Company, as lessee. The transaction was handled through Horace J. Prince, manager of the leasing department of Black Bros., the total rental is given at $135,000.

The sale of the southwest corner of Eighth and Los Angeles by a local syndicate to the Union Trust and Realty Company, for $100,000, through the same agency, was reported in yesterday's Times.

SYNDICATE BUYS ACREAGE.

Property on Wilshire, Opposite Windsor Square, to Be Cut up into Home Sites—Other Sales Reported.

J. W. Wilkinson & Co. have sold for the Title Insurance and Trust Company ten acres on the south side of Wilshire boulevard directly across from Windsor square, to a syndicate represented by Walter G. McCarty. The consideration is given at $60,000. The buyers will subdivide the tract at once.

The same firm has sold the southeast corner of Western avenue and Hollywood boulevard for the John C. Marble Company to H. M. Haldeman, who is now improving the site with a building containing six stores. The sale of the northeast corner of Adams and Main streets, 60x140 feet, for a local capitalist to Frank Shaw, who also purchased the northeast corner of Sixteenth and Arapahoe streets, is reported. The total consideration in the two deals is given at $65,000.

The same firm reports the leasing of the quarters formerly occupied by the Los Angeles Athletic Club at No. 534½ South Spring street, for the L. Harris Realty Company, to George V. Blake for a term of years. Blake has sublet the third floor to William H. Hart, and the front portion of the second floor to Mr. Fletcher.

CAMDEN COURT SALES.

Sales in Camden Court, in the Oneonta Park section, are reported by the Lyons Investment Company as follows: H. L. Metcalf, $2750; John M. Marble, $2150, and Ralph Cunningham, $1650. Both Metcalf and Marble will improve their sites with handsome homes and a fine dwelling is now nearing completion on the Cunningham lot.

TO DUPLICATE HOME.

On a sightly little knoll in the new Michillinda tract, in the San Gabriel Valley, C. B. Judd, former head of the Bissell Carpet Sweeper Company of Grand Rapids, Mich., will soon begin the erection of the first of the many fine homes projected for that subdivision. Because of his wife's sentimental love for her old home in Michigan, Mr. Judd will in the Michillinda dwelling exactly duplicate the eastern house. Plans for the place have been prepared by Grand Rapids architects and have been turned over to Architects Needham & Cline of this city, who will have charge of the construction work. On an adjoining lot James B. Forbes, sales agent for Michillinda, will soon start a handsome residence.

NOT SAFE TO TAMPER HERE.

Burglar Proof Device Is Installed in Hall of Records, Protecting Vault Against Crooks.

If a safe-cracker were to tamper with the big vault in the County Treasurer's office in the Hall of Records, he would start something truly alarming. Before he could get within several feet of the gold stored within the massive steel walls five great gongs in and near the Hall of Records would set up a clamor that would bring on the run a score of patrolmen and deputy Sheriffs.

To make it possible for such a furore to be raised, electrical engineers have been installing an alarm system in the Hall of Records for the past three months, which is said to be the most extensive affair of the kind in the country. The work was completed yesterday. It is the device of local men, and the county will pay $5000 for the protection.

The device was tested for the first time yesterday, and worked with apparent perfection. Several men connected with the County Treasurer's office were instructed in the working of the system.

By a series of wire cables, connected with various parts of the vault and leading to the five gongs, any tampering with the vault between the hours of 5 o'clock in the evening and 8 in the morning would result in all the gongs being sounded. Their din can be heard for blocks.

The cables are in a lead armor, from which the air has been pumped, creating almost a perfect vacuum. A hole in this armor no larger than a needle point would set the whole device in operation. Any burglar who tried to put the cable out of business before attacking the vault would only be giving labors the widest, most blatant kind of publicity. Any crossing of the wires, grounding or short-circuiting would have the same result—a perfect pandemonium. The wires leading to the gongs are encased in solid cement, and not to be tampered with recklessly.

There is one gong over the vault, another in the hallway in the third floor, that can be heard throughout the great building, a third at the Broadway entrance, over the fresco, a fourth over the portico of the New High street entrance, and the fifth in the County Jail office.

The system is controlled by a time clock, and, unless otherwise adjusted, is on duty only during burglars' working hours.

The Safe Vault and Protection Company of this city devised the system and installed it. The Board of Supervisors will be asked to inspect its workings this week and accept it.

LEASE NEW QUARTERS.

Through the agency of Edwin J. Bowes, Jr., president of the Bowes Realty Company, the R. D. Bronson Desk Company has taken a lease, covering a term of years, upon a double store building to be erected by the I. N. Van Nuys estate on a sixty-foot lot on the west side of Spring street sixty feet south of the new Van Nuys block at the corner of Seventh and Spring. The Bronson company will have the new site fitted up as one of the finest office and sales rooms in the city. A balcony extending fifty feet from the rear of the building will be approached by a grand staircase. The new quarters, it is expected, will be ready for occupancy on July 15.

MIKADO TICKETS TOMORROW.

The sale of tickets for the production of "The Mikado" will open tomorrow at Bartlett's music store. Many local people will take part in the performance, which is for the benefit of the boys' choir of St. Paul's Pro-Cathedral. A full rehearsal will be held on Monday night at the parish-house, and a few more good voices are needed in the chorus, and any persons who have sung in the opera before are particularly urged to report on Monday night. R. M. Castle, No 403 Ferguson building, is business manager for the committee.

Want the Best.

BRICK TAKING PLACE OF WOOD.

Substantial Materials Gain in Popularity.

Apartment Dwellers Demanding Better Buildings.

Model Structures Planned for Close-in Sites.

The truly metropolitan character of the present-day progress of Los Angeles is in no other way more clearly revealed than in the constant demand upon the part of the people who dwell in apartment-houses or better buildings of this type. Brick and concrete are everywhere supplanting wood in the construction of the newer and more modern apartments, and it is a noteworthy fact, too, that most of the late structures of this kind, even in the districts which a year ago were regarded as a bit far out, are being extended to a height of four stories instead of three, as formerly. The logic of this is plain. It is unlawful to continue a frame apartment over three stories and the builders are permitted to carry a class C brick structure to four stories. Therefore, when a builder decides upon brick construction he at the same time plans to get the largest possible income return from the area of his site.

Two interesting examples of the newer and more substantial construction were planned by Frederick Noonan and Charles H. Kysor, associated architects. Bids are now being taken for the construction of both improvements.

The apartment-house for Robert A. Fowler is being erected at the southwest corner of Washington and Union and will represent an investment of about $90,000. The building will occupy the west half of a site that fronts 142 feet on Washington street, by 140 feet on Union and will be 71x150 feet in size. The east half of the ground, fronting seventy-one feet on Washington by 140 on Union will be beautifully laid out as a formal garden, with stone seats, a fountain, flower beds and a summer-house, the whole being surrounded by a low brick wall.

The building itself will be four stories in height above a high basement and will be handsomely faced with ruffled brick, laid in patterns and with wide joints. The entrance vestibule will be in marble and the lobby will be finished entirely in mahogany and elaborately decorated after the Renaissance style. The structure will contain 110 rooms. The basement will be given over to a large amusement-room and billiard rooms and the roof will contain both a roof garden and sun parlors.

The interior arrangement of the structure will be absolutely unique in this city, being patterned after New York models. The different apartments on each floor will be finished in mahogany, oak and white enamel, giving variety and choice to the guests. The suites will be large and adapted to family use. The rooms will be divided into fourteen five-room, two four-room, four two-room and eight three-room apartments. All will be rented unfurnished.

SIXTH AND PARK VIEW.

The apartment house planned for Jacob Morris will be four stories in height and will occupy site fronting 100 feet on Sixth street by 170 feet on Park View and at the northwest corner of these thoroughfares. The building will be 100x150 feet in size and will represent an outlay of approximately $100,000 upon the part of its owner. The property was purchased by Mr. Morris from Richard Beebe about six weeks ago, the sale being reported in this department at the time. The Beebe home, a fine old house of fourteen rooms, will be removed from the site at once.

The building will contain 120 rooms, divided into two and three-room apartments, together with a large and elegantly finished lobby, sun parlor, amusement room, billiard and card rooms and roof garden. The structure will face directly upon Westlake Park and will overlook the whole of the Westlake district.

The exterior will be faced with gray concrete brick, a manufactured product that has never before been used in this city. This brick will be laid over common brick walls and will have wide joints, giving an artistic effect not possible with ordinary brick. The structure will be four stories high above a high basement.

A beautiful feature of the improvement will be the main court entrance on Sixth street, which will open through an ornamental stone gateway onto the sidewalk. The floor of this court will be paved and will be made charming by the use of palms and potted plants. Most of the apartments will be provided with ornamental concrete balconies. The finish throughout will be in hardwood and the baths will be in tile. The improvement is one of the most noteworthy of the many projected this year in the Westlake section.

REPORT RECENT SALES.

Hildesheim & Schiller report the following recent sales: George H. Rector, to F. E. Harris, twelve-room residence on Westmoreland boulevard, between Wilshire and Seventh street, $15,000; Nichols & Stansberry to J. B. Jacobs, eleven-room residence on Gramercy place, between Fifth and Sixth streets, $14,000; M. Parmlee to L. Nomen, 52x151 feet on West Ninth, between Stewart and Garland, $12,500; Peter Haack to Mrs. J. Powers, 55x148 feet, at Ocean Front and Park avenue, Ocean Park, $27,000. Mrs. Joseph Copp, 90 feet at Horizon avenue and Trolleyway, Ocean Park, $9500.

ACQUIRE FINE TRACT.

Charles C. Middleton and associates have bought from Mary E. Wilson forty acres on the north side of Olive street, half way between Compton avenue and Central avenue. The property is located about three miles north of the harbor. It is the intention of the new owners to subdivide the tract into eight five-acre parcels for the market. The purchase price is given at $24,000.

BEAUTIFUL HOLLYWOOD HOME.
LARGE GROUNDS—UNUSUAL HOUSE.

Within a twenty minutes' ride of Los Angeles, in the most beautiful part of Hollywood, where the view of the hills and mountains is superb this very attractive villa is located. The grounds—150x200 feet, are laid out in superb landscape effect, and at least $2000 has been spent for flowers, trees and shrubs alone. The house, which was built by the owner for his home, is distinct and individual, containing many attractive features never to be found in the built-to-sell houses.

House is very attractive in style of architecture, the lower front is of brick and the rest frame; cement steps and large cement porch with glass enclosed end. Nine rooms in the house besides two bathrooms, large halls upstairs and down and a fine cement cellar. The woodwork is a very special feature, and is simply rubbed to a piano finish in all rooms but bedrooms. Oak in the dining-room, curly birch in the reception hall, mahogany in the living-room and den. The rooms are paneled high with those magnificent woods and have beamed ceilings. Hardwood floors throughout the house and windows—well, there are windows everywhere. Every room is lined with glass, which makes the house so bright and cheery and sunshiny. The front window in the dining-room is 5 feet and in the living-room 10 feet. Elegant and massive center lights in dining-room and living-room, the buffet is 11 feet wide, there are built-in bookcases and a large Grubby tile mantel in the living-room. Bedrooms are all in white enamel, perfect in finish, having several coats of paint. Walls are all in delicate flowered papers, one closet is the full length of room and has two doors; another bedroom has two closets, there are closets in the halls, in fact, about a dozen closets in the house. Bathroom downstairs has tiled floor, oval lavatory, a full length mirror and a smaller oval one. One of the upstairs bedrooms has bookcases, window seat, fireplace and full length mirror. The buffet kitchen is in cedar with rows and rows of closets; sink and boards the full length of room, hood over stove. Linoleum on floor. Den completes to the most minute detail. All window curtains, draperies and portieres are up and are included in house.

You will go wild over the grounds—such a bower of flowers and trees. The most expensive palms, firs, pines and ornamental trees of every kind, together with vines, make a beautiful floral parade, gorgeous with every shade and coloring. The pergola and summer house are twined with vines and blossom-rose, and the honeysuckle. In the garden there are such fruits as orange, lemon, apricot, guava, fig, tangerine, apple, plum, peach, nectarine, etc. The unique garden fence is twined with garlands of roses and beautiful hanging baskets. This yard is like the floral parade—beyond description—you must see it. The place is ready for immediate occupancy, and the fortunate buyer of this property will own one of the most beautiful homes in California. House is open for inspection every afternoon between 2 and 4 o'clock, including Sunday. Address it to 126 MORGAN PLACE. Take Hollywood car, get off at Morgan place. If the picnic did not fit in and your lunch out of the bins of the city of wonderful beautiful fruits, where you trample grapes, bottles sizzling and where sunshine smiles out in a surrounding panorama, wouldn't you be glad?

If you could devote a chapter to find in the 40th Semi-Tropic land hundred million dollars of real gold to keep the grass very rich, wouldn't your blood tone a little faster?

If you dare splice fortunate from this world-famed kingdom, health, freedom from Wilson's nightmare, the cost re-ceipt-wouldn't you shudder? Wouldn't you say, "Sweet Juice!"?

Wouldn't you be glad if some one pleased such a nice little easy trip and said, "Come on. Join us and see a part of glorious Los Angeles, the beauty of which you have never dreamed. Bring your babies and your lunch baskets, and make a real better day of it." Sure. Well, let's go, then. This is the way.

We want to close out a few remaining lots in one of the most beautiful tracts located in the city of Los Angeles. Just off Huntington boulevard leading to Pasadena. High, dry and stately. The air is good and healthy. Remember the size of the lot and remember, too, that property in this section is high class and increasing in value. Further, that anything on the Pasadena Short Line and on the boulevard will be worth double its present value in five years.

Remember that in this section you see the most beautiful homes in Southern California.

Remember this lot can be sold on easy terms of $10 down and $10 per month and interest.

Remember, also, that if you want us to build a home on this lot we will do so and furnish the money. These lots are all clear. There is no mortgage on them, and we can handle a home for you built to suit, furnishing the money for from $1000 to $2500.

We only want a small payment down and the monthly payments to run like rent. There is absolutely no necessity to be under any obligations to the landlord.

Buy your own lot and build your own home. If you have not the money let us undertake the obligation for you.

Here are four lots, the corner lot being 50.75x112, the adjoining lots 42x112, 46x112, 50x127. Lots 42x112, 46x112 have double three-room strictly modern bungalows with the completest and most unique arrangement are bringing 18 per cent. on the money invested. THE LAW OF SUPPLY AND DEMAND.

The same reason governing the increase in price of butter and eggs, causes increase in land values.

There is an abundant supply of the low, flat, lands around Los Angeles, but a very limited supply of the high, balmy, foothill mesa land. This class of land is more in demand than any other, and yet there is only a very limited supply, therefore the increase in value will be far greater—in a much shorter time.

VERDUGO is located 11 miles from Los Angeles, at an elevation of 1200 to 1400 feet above the sea, with that rare balmy atmosphere that people are seeking who come to Southern California. Here you look out between the perpetually green foothills, over Glendale, across Los Angeles clear out over the blue shimmering ocean to Catalina Island.

It might be well for you to find out why Lieut.-Gov. Wallace went up into this undeveloped region behind this Verdugo Heights town site and built an $8,000 residence.

It might be well for you to find out why Edwin T. Earl, owner of the Tribune and Express, has made his country home up there.

And also to inquire what attracted Bissell, the carpet sweeper folks to locate tributary to Verdugo Heights town site.

And why former Senator Frank P. Flint acquired 1400 acres nearby to put in the greatest country club in the United States.

There are some local climatic, scenic, and arboreal reasons for this action by these men.

If you have the inclination combined with an hour and half of time, we have the automobile, and as we glide along we can talk it over.

Autos leave the office at 9:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. daily, (except Sunday.)

Our folder fully explains the plan.

FOR SALE—

FIVE GREAT DISTINCTIVE FEATURES OF THE VERDUGO PROJECT.

—ONE—

The greatest profit in Southern California land is in transforming the raw land into high-class retail property. The profits are tremendous when the land developed is a "center spot" or a natural townsite.

The VERDUGO project embraces the formation of a club of homemakers and investors who will buy up this land at a low wholesale figure. They will also improve it. The homemakers will build. The trolley line is already being extended through the property. The result will be enormous enhancement in value because "raw land, plus population and improvement, plus transportation," absolutely coins wealth.

—TWO—

The homemakers and investors secure their home sites at the lowest wholesale figure. Besides this, they participate in the large retail profits of the adjoining land. You receive two profits from your one investment—the increase in value on your own homesite and your share in the subdivision profits. Your citizenship asset earned for you a homesite free.

—THREE—

The location of the VERDUGO project is the natural "center spot" of the west Sherkill district. It is not an addition to some other tract, or community, but is a townsite proper, and the profits accordingly will be far greater. It has a predestined location as a truly important commercial and social center. VERDUGO, the "THRONE CITY" is an absolute certainty.

This is the spot that your heart has yearned for. A great sloping mesa, 1000 feet above the sea, looking out between perpetually green foothills, over Glendale, across Los Angeles, and clear out over the shimmering blue ocean to Catalina Island. There absolutely is not another location like it in Southern California.

—FOUR—

Safety is an investment is even more important than the amount of profit. VERDUGO is a guaranteed 6 per cent. investment. There is absolutely no way to lose money, and yet you are bound to secure handsome profits, through your share in subdivision profits. The First National Bank holds your money in escrow until the club is formed. We do not go ahead with the project until the money is all subscribed to pay for the land in full, and cover all improvements. The homemakers joining the club absolutely assure population, and the ultimate success of the whole project is absolutely predetermined.

—FIVE—

This plan is not an experiment. Nine thriving California communities are live, substantial, testimonies to the overwhelming success of this, the Western Empire's Land Banking and Home Securing Plan. Opposite such as this means action. The club of homebuyers is nearly formed. The doors will soon close on this opportunity. A visit to Verdugo Heights will convince you of the remarkable location. Personally conducted auto trips to the property daily (except Sunday) at 9:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. Our folder will explain frankly the plan.

We contract to care for the acreage for five years without cost to buyer. You can clear $1000 per acre at the end of five years. FOR SALE—

MR. FARMER.

If you want to investigate one of the cleanest, high-grade farming and fruit propositions in Southern California, come into this office and let us explain to you the merits of Dewey.

This property has been formerly owned by a Chicago millionaire, who made it a pay-thing. He has developed it along the highest lines—spent thousands of dollars in improvements that are worth nothing to anybody except that they beautify the place—has developed a wonderful amount of water. Since his death the estate has ordered the property sold.

We are now in a position to offer it in small tracts, all the way from five acres up. We are satisfied that this is a high-grade apple land. It contains every requisite necessary to grow apples. It has an elevation of 1800 feet—it has gravity water from the mountains which is owns outright, and plenty to assure beautiful crops. It lies perfectly, with a slope to the west. The soil is a gravelly loam which insures perfect drainage. There is not a suggestion of hardpan or adobe on the property. We are able to offer this at prices ranging from $60 up to $200. We have many choice pieces at from $120 to $150 which we firmly believe are unusually attractive in price; and the way values are going up in California, with bang-up land close to a good city, with excellent road, telephone service, etc., railroad station right on the property, such land cannot remain long at this price.

Cut this ad out and call at our office. We will show you photographs that we think will be very convincing. If you want to see the property you can go and come the same day at a few dollars' expense, and at least satisfy yourself as to whether this is or is not the kind of land you are looking for.

NEW JERSEY ESTATE FOR CALIFORNIA.
Bank appraisement, $45,000.

Located eleven miles from Philadelphia, on main boulevard running through the State of New Jersey, comprising a tract of land 232x1450, about 9 acres, with the entire grounds landscaped and arranged with a choice selection of vines, flowers, trees and lawns, with a well-kept hedge enclosing the whole.

Improvements consist of an eleven-room, full two-story residence, with three bath rooms. Colonial furniture has been closely followed and caried throughout. Every room designed for beauty and comfort and is decidedly modern in every particular.

Just to the left of the main entrance and extending 250 feet is a pergola overhung with vines and flowers, constructed at a cost of $5000. This pergola leads to a summer house which was designed and constructed for a place in which to entertain, having a large dining and ball room.

A driveway leading from an ornamental entrance extending along the right of the house to stables and garage in the rear. This building is fully two stories; on the first floor there are six box stalls. The garage will accommodate four large machines; the second story is arranged for servants' quarters, having eight rooms with baths.

The improvements on this place alone are worth the price asked, and would suggest that if you want to acquire eastern property that you see me at once.

MR. THEATER BUYER—
When you buy or lease a theater you want the BEST proposition in the market.
The only SURE way to get a COMPLETE list of available theaters is to see me, because I am exclusively a theater broker. Putting all my energies in the one line, I naturally know more about the local situation and have a larger and better list than is possible for a person who makes the theater business a mere side line. I am the best posted man on good theaters in Southern California. I have been in the business for years, I buy, build and sell more theaters than all brokers combined on the Pacific Coast. I have the largest list of good theaters to select from. It does not cost you one cent for my services. You will receive the benefit of my knowledge and advice along the theatrical line.
SPECIAL BIG BARGAINS on three theaters THIS WEEK. One for $7000, clearing $700 per month. One for $9000, that will make $1000 in the next few months. One for $12,500, that is clearing $200 per month. I have also a fine beach theater that can be bought at a big sacrifice.

LONG LEASES PAY BIG PROFITS.

The highest percentage of sure profit combined with absolute safety is the history of 50 and 99-year leases in growing cities.

LOS ANGELES IS AHEAD OF ALL OTHER CITIES IN SUCH OPPORTUNITIES.

An investment company composed of men who have made a success in such leases right in the heart of this city has several options on long leases with annual rentals based on a nominal interest on the valuation of today.

IF PROPERTY SOUTH OF SIXTH STREET BETWEEN MAIN AND GRAND AVENUE IS SURE TO INCREASE IN VALUE THESE LEASES WILL PAY BI GDIVIDENDS.

If you have money to invest and want to get in with successful men on big deals you will do well to look into this proposition. Address for interview, A, box 128, TIMES OFFICE.

PROPHECIES OF BANKHEAD.

Senior Senator Who Is Managing the Campaign of Oscar Underwood for the Presidency—Rare Politician of Alabama and His Life Story.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Young Capt. John Hollis Bankhead of the Fifteenth Alabama Infantry, was in an alarming situation at the battle of Chickamauga. A minnie ball had broken his arm. Shock and the loss of blood had so weakened him that he could not stand up. More than 50 per cent Federals and Confederates had been killed, or wounded. Men were writhing in agony and calling for their mothers, and the air was full of whistling lead.

Near by was a brook fringed with brown reeds and long, dry grass. It caught fire near where Capt. Bankhead lay upon the ground. The flames were roaring across the tinderdry grass in his direction. Close by was John Custer, a private soldier, still able, but wholly incapable of self-help. Coming over to Private Custer's side showed the pain he was in. Capt. Bankhead, after much struggling and management, took him on his back. Crawling away on his hands and one hand, he saved the life of John Custer and himself.

Capt. Bankhead is now Senator Bankhead. The slender boy has become an old man. In spirit, however, he has been no change. Moreover, the blue, kindly eyes are the same. And the warm blood runs as free and fierce as ever it did. There were other fights at Shiloh and Peach Tree creek, to Senator Bankhead the most of the merit. He it was who organized Underwood's campaign for the Presidency. Also he issued "Underwood," he declared in printed bulletins, circulars and letters, "is Democracy's best asset. His battle cry to the nation that are to center at Baltimore."

SWEETS AMONG THORNS.

Sentimental men cannot always analyze the nature of incidents or of the beams that light up life as it is observed by them. All matters of the sort, by the manner of their being, come within fixed rules. There are persons who are dry and unimaginative, uncommunicative and otherwise inhospitable and unattractive. Senator Bankhead will gather violets and apple blossoms while traveling amid the stones of Pelion. He catches the unusual tone in the strange voice and perceives in the manner of an act or an occurrence. He is a big man bodily, hands and the tail of his gray coat, tramping back and forth across his office, he is restless, buoyant, sagacious and gay.

"Let me tell you a story of Mr. Cleveland," he said, referring to Mr. Cleveland, the President. "Two Alabamians were candidates for an auditorship in the treasury. One of them was a small man, with red hair. I'll call him Brown. The other man—I'll not say his name was Jones—was tall and heavy, and had a long head of hair. The delegation in Congress met and voted unanimously for Brown. John G. Carlisle, Secretary of the Treasury, said Brown was satisfactory to him. We thought that was the end of it. Some time had been made and closed. Then one morning, however, that Cleveland had appointed Jones. Two of us—Gaston A. Robbins of the Birmingham District and myself—went to the White House to voice our protest in the best way we had been turned down.

"'I didn't like your man,' the President explained. 'I didn't like his looks. He looked pompous, and indeed, on repeating a speech he said he had delivered in Alabama, 'but our candidate,' I told the President, 'hasn't been in Washington.'

"'Must be a tall man, with a dropping voice,' the President asked. 'They spoke up Robbins; 'he is a tall man, with red hair.'

BERNARD WHISTLED IN AMAZEMENT.

Mr. Cleveland looked at Robbins and Jones for a moment and then arose from his chair. Thrusting his hands into the pockets of his pants, he walked to a window. He gazed across the Potomac River for a long time and whistled so vigorously that I thought he would blow a hole through the glass. By and by he turned and walked back. 'Gentlemen,' he asked, 'is it possible that there has been such a damned ass?' I don't put it that way,' Robbins said, 'but you certainly confirmed and appointed the man.'

"Mr. Cleveland said, and he sat down as a lamb, 'It's done, and I'll see that it stand.'

"I'll tell you a story about Underwood," Senator Bankhead began to say, as he marched to and fro. He smiled to himself. "A Democratic vote was to be chosen, and it was all for Smith. It was known that a large and dignified number of Smith's friends should put on their best coats and go to the White House to see Roosevelt. On the way one gentleman remarked that it would be close to the throne. As the sitting, then,' everybody else had up in front of the White House. The President's reception. Wanted to get at him, and the instant he appeared many other persons did. Presently the room was full. Others were talking in support, just as they do at receptions. Suddenly the doors were thrown open and Roosevelt sprang into the room. 'Mr. President,' our spokesman said, 'we are here in behalf of Mr. Smith, whom we hope to see the vacant judgeship filled.'

"Roosevelt shouted in his high, shrill voice, 'I've heard about you before. Good-by.' Then he made straight for a trapper, cowboy, or miner who was standing against the wall in a corner. 'Howdy, old man,' he shouted. 'I am de-lighted to see you.'

NEW VOTES FOR ROSENFIELD.

Senator Bankhead's own frock coats shrunk up around his wamuses. The latter looked as if he had been run through a wringer. He was next to the last man in the procession of elephants. We had been standing down and eyes on the ground. Thinking about Roosevelt as the strongest man of old Dan, who had been stumping the country, back of Jasper, Texas, and has been a Democrat, Populist and Republican, Populist and Democrat from time to time. I said to him 'Mr. President, I want to know what command you have for me.'

"'After dinner, I started toward the next precinct and the farm of Mr. Tidmore. 'Tell him you are fighting the ring and it will be all right,' Parker counseled me as he said good-by. I hollered and Mrs. Tidmore came to the door. Her husband, she said, was over the hill plowing cotton. I found his mule, but he was nowhere in sight. So I turned the mule between two rows and plowed across the field. Then I plowed back. Tidmore had returned and was sitting on the fence. I pretended not to see him. No man in Alabama could do a better job at plowing than myself. I was proud of the work I was doing. Tidmore, I felt sure, would be impressed. 'Whoa,' I yelled at the mule when I got to the end of the rows. Innocently I looked up. 'Mr. Tidmore,' I said, letting on I was surprised, 'I am a candidate for Congress, and—'

"'Well, by thunder,' he yelled, in the hearty voice of the country, 'I'm for you agin' all comers.'

"And right there I gathered in another precinct. Then I traveled on into the zone of Josephus Wallace, an old Confederate soldier, and of Col. W. B. Gear, a Federal officer from Ohio, who had remained in Alabama and taken a wife. They were bitter enemies, politically and personally, though both were Democrats. I negotiated and conciliated and wore my mare out going back and forth, and on convention day Wallace, Gear, and myself rode to Livingston in the same wagon. The natives were dumbfounded. Some of them said I was a mesmerist. In the end, I was nominated. I was elected to the National House of Representatives ten times, using the title I brought home from the war. 'Maybe so, but I'm going to vote for Rosenfield, so that cotton will go to 15 cents a pound.'

"As it happened, cotton went down after the election that year. Ben sold a bale at 7 cents.

"'But,' I said to him, 'you predicted that cotton would go up after Mr. Roosevelt's election.'

"'That's so, cap'an,' he replied, 'and t'would only I hear that Rosenfield ain't a buyin' any just now.'"

When young John, aged 15, was ready to leave home for the war, his grandfather said: "My boy, no matter what happens, maintain the honor of the Bankhead family and don't get shot in the back." The advance to the front was made in a wagon. "I had my own horse and vehicle," the Senator related, "a large supply of food, a big trunk full of clothing and a negro servant, even though I was nothing but a private. We crossed Tennessee and camped for the winter in Southern Kentucky. I built a hut of split logs and was very comfortable for a soldier. About the 15th of January, 1862, I took Isom, my black boy, and went out in the country after a personal load of cabbages and chickens. I got fifty fat roosters and hens and penned them in the corner of my hut.

ALMOST SHOT IN THE BACK.

"Four days later my regiment marched down a long decline into a considerable force of Yankees concealed behind earth and fallen trees. Then followed the battle of Mill Springs, or Fishing Creek, as the Confederates call it. We got a volley of musket fire at close range. Gen. Zollicoffer, our commander, was killed. After 350 of our men were on the ground, we gave way. Coming right to the point, we ran. I went back up the decline faster than I had ever traveled before. I heard two musket balls pass my head and saw men stop, stagger and fall. All at once I recalled what my grandfather had said, 'Here goes the honor of the Bankhead family,' I repeated at every jump. 'John's going to be shot in the back.' But I wasn't. Somehow I escaped.

"Late that night orders came for us to move. We were to retreat, everybody said. Then I thought of the chickens. I couldn't do much to revenge the injury the Yankees had inflicted on us, but I could at least turn the chickens loose in the woods and make the Yankees chase them, if they wanted a little poultry to season their fat pork. Knocking the roof off the coop, I drove away in my wagon. Thus ends the story of my first battle and my first retaliating blow at the North. Fishing Creek doesn't figure large in history, but it was a bloody conflict in my amateur opinion. I was wounded in the side at Shiloh. My arm was broken at Chickamauga, and I was shot through the leg at Peach Tree Creek. The wagon, the Saratoga trunk, and Isom had long since vanished. I had become a veteran and a captain.

"I found everything gone but the land on returning home at the close of the war. The negroes and mules had disappeared. Hard manual work was absolutely necessary. I went into the fields, and there I remained, forty miles from a railroad, until I was 45 years old. Now and then I went to the Legislature, but I was a working farmer just the same.

RIDES AWAY ON BLACK MARE.

"I was married in 1866, during my first term in the Alabama House of Representatives. The little girl who became my wife had not lived in the country, but she went to the farm, and never complained. More than half the success that has blessed my life can be justly attributed to her." Senator Bankhead stopped his steady pacing up and down and looked at me. His eyes, I saw, were moist with love and emotion.

"She made me hustle," he continued with a smile. "I had the strength and she supplied the energy. She is over at the hotel now and is the youngest looking woman you ever saw. The time came, however, when I thought it was my duty to serve my country in Washington. I had helped to make laws in Alabama and had been warden of the penitentiary. But the organization—in the South it is known as the Courthouse ring—was opposed to me. I threw my saddlebags over a black mare and headed for Sumter county. Men whom I had known in the Legislature were glad to see me when I rode into Livingston, but they said my efforts would be in vain. 'Well,' I replied, 'I'll go out into the country a piece and look around.' It was a terribly hot day. Along toward noon I stopped in front of Matt Parker's house. He was a power in the community and was short and fat, weighing, I should say, about 300 pounds. I saw him sitting in a rocking chair on the front porch fanning himself with his straw hat. I hollered to him, as is the custom among farmers, and he hollered back: 'Get down,' he said, 'tie your horse, and come in.'

"'I am John H. Bankhead of Lamar county,' I told him, 'and am a candidate for Congress.'

"'Though I have never seen you before,' Parker said, 'nor heard of you, either, Mr. Bankhead, you can count on my help. I am against the Courthouse ring. Don't worry about this precinct—it's yours.'

HOW HE CAUGHT TIDMORE.

"After dinner, I started toward the next precinct and the farm of Mr. Tidmore. 'Tell him you are fighting the ring and it will be all right,' Parker counseled me as he said good-by. I hollered and Mrs. Tidmore came to the door. Her husband, she said, was over the hill plowing cotton. I found his mule, but he was nowhere in sight. So I turned the mule between two rows and plowed across the field. Then I plowed back. Tidmore had returned and was sitting on the fence. I pretended not to see him. No man in Alabama could do a better job at plowing than myself. I was proud of the work I was doing. Tidmore, I felt sure, would be impressed. 'Whoa,' I yelled at the mule when I got to the end of the rows. Innocently I looked up. 'Mr. Tidmore,' I said, letting on I was surprised, 'I am a candidate for Congress, and—'

"'Well, by thunder,' he yelled, in the hearty voice of the country, 'I'm for you agin' all comers.'

"And right there I gathered in another precinct. Then I traveled on into the zone of Josephus Wallace, an old Confederate soldier, and of Col. W. B. Gear, a Federal officer from Ohio, who had remained in Alabama and taken a wife. They were bitter enemies, politically and personally, though both were Democrats. I negotiated and conciliated and wore my mare out going back and forth, and on convention day Wallace, Gear, and myself rode to Livingston in the same wagon. The natives were dumbfounded. Some of them said I was a mesmerist. In the end, I was nominated. I was elected to the National House of Representatives ten times, serving twenty years altogether. About five years ago I was promoted to the Senate, taking the place of John T. Morgan, whom we call 'the grand old man of Alabama.'

Senator John H. Bankhead.

"Yes, sir; I am managing Oscar Underwood's campaign for the Presidency. What reason, you ask, have I for the belief that he will be nominated by the Baltimore convention? I answer by saying that he is Democracy's best asset, because he is the first constructive statesman we have had in twenty years. He knows how to do things and when. He is level-headed, pacificatory and a natural leader of men.

EVERYBODY'S SECOND CHOICE.

"Furthermore, after having named some of his elements, I would add that he is, in my opinion, the second choice of all the Democrats in the country who at present seem to favor the other candidates. They realize that he alone has made the election of a Democrat to the Presidency possible. This he has done by his brilliant leadership in the House of Representatives. And the Democrats over the creek, meaning the boys in the woods, understand what he has accomplished.

"Our party came into the Sixty-second Congress split into disagreeing groups with respect to the tariff. There is no use to catalogue the differing views of the Democrats. They are known to everyone who is interested in politics. Prophets said that the Democrats in the House would quarrel and ruin the chances of the party for the campaign of 1912. Their unwieldy majority of sixty-seven and their conflicting opinions would, it was said, make harmony of action impossible. They would fight, as heretofore, and their fat would go into the fire. But the country did not know Oscar Underwood. His party did not understand his personality or his powers. He had been sitting in the House for sixteen years without making an effort to get into the newspapers. Meanwhile, however, he had been working. He gave up his law practice several years ago, and thereafter devoted all of his time to the work of making himself a skilled legislator.

"During the time that Joseph W. Bailey of Texas and John Sharp Williams of Mississippi, both of whom are now in the Senate, and Champ Clark of Missouri, were leading the Democrats on the floor of the House, the quiet man from Alabama served them faithfully and intelligently. They did not know it, and he did not know it, but he was patiently and thoroughly preparing himself for the day when the Democracy of the nation should need his expert services. He burned the midnight oil, to quote an ancient expression. Moreover, he perceived the errors of his party.

UNDERWOOD'S POLICY.

"No mob ever carried a well-defended breastworks. Teamwork is an essential in legislation as in baseball. Underwood, elevated to leadership a year ago, when Congress met in special session to discuss Canadian reciprocity, immediately by his genius brought the 229 Democrats of the House into a cohesive and aggressive body. They stood together in unity. Suddenly, overnight almost, Underwood became a national character, and Democracy ceased to be the party of opposition and became the party of construction. Boiled down to half a dozen words, Underwood's tariff policy is simply this: 'Stop protecting the profits of manufacturers.' He wants the manufacturers to compete among themselves in the matter of their profits and to be scattered to the four winds of the commercial heavens by outside competition whenever they combine among themselves to overcharge the public.

"I have heard it said that Mr. Underwood's geography is unfavorable to his candidacy," Senator Bankhead continued, running his hand through the rim of outstanding hair that half circles his head from ear to ear. "For my part, I think there are hundreds of thousands of voters who are impatiently waiting to show that the line run by Charles Mason and Jeremiah Dixon has been tramped out by the men who fought the Civil War, and has been washed out by the bloodshed in our war with Spain.

"When Worth Bagley of North Carolina, the first naval officer killed by the Spaniards, lay dead on the deck of the torpedo boat Winslow, off Cardenas, no one asked the name of the State from which he came. His uniform and the flag over him were enough for any American. When Victor Blue located the Spanish fleet in the harbor of Santiago, climbing the hills in an enemy's country, no one stopped to inquire whether he was from the North or the South, though he, too, was born in the State that wrote and passed the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence. Old 'Joe' Wheeler of Alabama, fighting at El Caney, was in himself an answer to the question, 'Is sectionalism dead?'

"Why, sir, Oscar Underwood's geography will strengthen him all over the land. We Americans are longing for an opportunity to prove by our suffrage that there is no North, no South, no East, no West, but only one nation and one flag, from the Gulf of Mexico to the Canadian boundary, and between the waters of the two great oceans."

CHILLY HOSTELRIES OF SPAIN.

Best Hotel in Burgos Did Not Have a Fireplace and Impossible for Guests to Get Hot Water.

[Harper's Magazine:] It appears to be the use in several minor cities of Spain for the best hotel to send the worst omnibus to the station, as who should say, "Good wine needs no bush," writes W. D. Howells. At Burgos we were almost alarmed by the shabbiness of the omnibus for the hotel we had chosen through a consensus of praise in the guide books, and thought we must have got the wrong one. It was, indeed, the wrong one, but because there is no right hotel in Burgos when you arrive there on an afternoon of early October.

We asked nothing of it but two rooms in which we could have a fire, but the best hotel in Burgos openly declared that it had not a fireplace in its whole extent, though there must have been one in the kitchen. The landlord pointed out that it was completely equipped with steam-heating apparatus, but when I made him observe that there was no steam in the shining radiators he owned, with a shrug, that there was truth in what I said. He showed us large, pleasant rooms to the south; he showed us his beautiful new dining-room, cold, with the same sunny exposure. I rashly declared that all would not do, and that I would look elsewhere for room with fireplaces.

I had first to find a cab in order to find the other hotels, but I found, instead, that in a city of 38,000 inhabitants there was not one cab standing for hire in the streets. I went back foiled, but not crushed, to our hotel. There it seemed that the only vehicle to be had was the omnibus which had brought us from the station. The landlord calmly (I did not then perceive the irony of his calm) had the horses put to and our baggage put on, and we drove away. But first we met those charming travelers from Chile coming to our hotel from the hotel they had chosen, and from a search for hearthstones in others, and we drove to the only hotel they had left unvisited. There at our demand for fire, the landlord all but laughed us to scorn. He laid his hand on the cold radiator in the hotel as if to ask what better we could wish than that. We drove back, humbled, to our own hotel. Then there was nothing for me but to declare myself the Prodigal Son returned to take the rooms he had offered us. We were so perfectly in his power that he could magnanimously afford to offer us other rooms equally cold, but we did not care to move. The Chileans had retired, baffled, to their own hotel, and there was nothing for us but to accept the long evening of gelid torpor which we foresaw must follow the effort of the soup and wine to warm us at dinner. That night we heard through our closed doors agonized voices which we knew to be the voices of despairing American women wailing through the freezing corridors. "Can't she understand that I want boiling water?" and "Can't we go downstairs to a fire somewhere?" We knew the one meant the chambermaid and the other the kitchen, but neither prayer apparently was answered.

A MIGHTY TASK.

[Chicago Inter Ocean:] Twelve Cornell students solemnly met in the Dutch Kitchen at the Ithaca Hotel last week and formed a club to reconstruct the religions of the world.

The object of the club in its own terms is to study, investigate and criticise the existing religions and creeds of today with a view of reconstructing religious thought and setting it upon a basis of fact and truth, instead of meritless faith and traditional superstition and to consider and discuss with a view of theological enlightment of the world such phases of ethics and morals as may assist in the discovery of truth and throw light upon the main subject of religion.

About a dozen undergraduates are members. Charles N. Whitman of Chicago, a sophomore, is the organizer. He declared that it had always been his ambition to organize a club which would reconstruct the religious views of the world.

Judge Had the Real Show.

[Cosmopolitan Magazine:] Judge Richard B. Russell, of Georgia, is known in politics as "Plain Dick" Russell. On the recent election of Gov. Hoke Smith to the United States Senate, Russell announced himself as a candidate for the soon-to-be-vacated executive office for which he is now running with all his might—which is saying a great deal. Besides being a Justice of the Court of Appeals, a well-known politician and a prosperous farmer, Judge Russell is the proud father of fourteen children. Having fourteen children already, and being superstitious by nature, he was unwilling to risk the unlucky thirteen, so his last two were twins.

On one occasion Judge Russell took his fourteen children with him to a State fair, where, among other things, they were exhibiting a two-headed calf as a side attraction. Judge Russell cautiously inquired the price of tickets.

"Ten cents for whole and 5 cents for half tickets," explained the showman.

Brightening perceptibly, "Plain Dick" handed out the money. "Give me one whole and fourteen halves," he said.

The showman eyed him curiously. "Have you fourteen children," he asked.

"I have that," replied the Judge.

"Got em' all wid yer?"

"Plain Dick" pointed proudly to the long row of human steps rising back of him. "There they are," he said, "count for yourself."

Lifting his finger, the showman counted, one by one.

"Mister," he said, "keep yer money. Suppose you sell me a ticket and I'll bring the calf out to see you."

Summons.

Rouse thyself, soul! Forget the sweet
Or the sad murmurings of the desolate seas!
As winged, upward turn and beat
Resistlessly against the breeze!

Greet the cold vigor of the winter air
Rushing from out the hollow, clamorous caves of hills,
To smite and backward blow thy hair
And sting thy slow pulse till it thrills!

Fight on! The soil shall nerve thy wings;
Thine the vast pregnant, lonely plains and starlit skies,
And rushing winds that bear great things,
And thoughts in which great quiet lies.

THE CHARM OF PERSIA.

Country Where the Horses Play With the Children and the Muleteers Speak in Verse.

[London Standard:] "Persia is essentially a land of the sun," said Sir Mortimer Durand, "and I noticed when I was in Persia that Europeans who had lived there for a time were always anxious to go back. There is no need, and little incentive, to travel fast in Persia. For one thing there are no opportunities to do so, and when one becomes used to camping with camels and mules one prefers that to railway luxury."

Why build a road, was the question of an amazed tribesman, whose soul recoiled at the thought of a straight line of beaten track. It was really a nuisance, for "there were no stones where the feet could hold on by," he explained.

Among the Arabs of the plains the reason for the docility and gentleness of their horses is easily discovered. The animals play with the children, know them and understand them, with the result that there is a bond between man and beast rarely seen elsewhere.

"In Simla," said the lecturer, "my wife had an Arab horse which used to come walking into the house. He would walk in at a dinner party and put his head over your shoulder for a bit of bread quite naturally. But it may not have been good for the carpets." On the mountainsides the horses are as surefooted as goats, and will leap from rock to rock with their riders with cool assurance.

There is no need for a "back-to-the-land" movement in Persia. The people have never left it, and the Persian peasant is one of the happiest in the world. Some of the tribes know no other bread than that made from acorns. They steep the acorns in running water for a time, and then break them up and manufacture their bread with the same deliberation as they murmur their poetry.

One is led to the conclusion that the country creates poets automatically. Only a churl would refuse to be a poet in a land where a blue sky looks down on winter snow and oxen tread out the corn. Even in the night the traveler has the chirp of the little owl for a lullaby and the bells of the mules for a solace.

But by a peculiar law, which is past comprehension, Omar Khayyam is almost ignored. His poems do not find such ready response among his modern countrymen as they find in the West. Even the late Shah repudiated them and laughed when his name was mentioned by Sir Mortimer Durand.

"I was asked by the Omar Society," he said, "to see if the Shah would cause Omar's grave to be set in repair, but when I spoke to the old Shah during an audience he sat in his chair and laughed. 'Why,' he cried, 'do you mean to tell me that there is a society in England connected with Omar Khayyam? The man has been dead a thousand years! I can tell you of many better poets than he.'" But the admirers of Omar have the satisfaction of knowing that, thought the Shah laughed at the poet, no one ever laughed at the Shah.

Perhaps the most fascinating part of the lecture was a rapid outline of a Persian year. At the end of February the garden is full of violets, and after the violets pass away the water channels are lined with white iris, and after the iris comes tiger lilies, and after the tiger lilies come roses, with the roses come the nightingales, which sing while the sleeper sleeps.

Every known flower may grow in Persian soil, and most of the European ones do, while the early summer is a riot of color. The autumn tints are more vivid than any in the world, except perhaps those in America. The snow of winter is delightful. "What is the charm of Persia?" asked Sir Mortimer Durand. "One finds it in the great contrast between everything about him and all that he has left behind."

A Trial Engagement.

[Washington Star:] Trixie Friganza, just before the celebration of her wedding, said to the "woman's page" editor of a newspaper:

"Now that the summer is approaching, why don't you begin a campaign against summer ethics—against flirtations carried on at seashore and mountain camp by summer girls and college boys and by older people as well?"

The young actress smiled and added:

"Summer ethics are aptly illustrated by a conversation that was once overheard on a moonlit beach.

"'Dearest,' murmured a male voice, 'when shall we get married?'

"'Oh, Jack,' a female voice returned, 'why do you insist on taking our engagement so seriously?'"

The Logic of It.

TELLING BLOWS FOR CITY HALL.

Civic Center Committee Takes Opposition to Task.

Issues Statement to Voters at the Coming Election.

Support of Five-cent Levy Warmly Urged.

The reasons why a new and adequate City Hall should be at once erected on the Temple Block site are set forth in a statement issued to the voters of Los Angeles by the Executive Board of the Civic Center Committee, of which Marco H. Hellman is the chairman. It is the intention of the committee that the logic of the City Hall project shall be brought home to every voter in the city, between now and May 28, on which date the people will be asked to go to the polls and advise the City Council as to their opinion on the proposition of setting aside a five-cent tax for the carrying out of the proposed municipal undertaking.

The Civic Center Committee has gone deeply into the subject and has worked earnestly and with zeal to the end that its report might be an intelligent and comprehensive one. Solid arguments have been prepared to convince the honest opponent of the City Hall scheme.

"The few active opponents of this measure profess to favor the Civic Center and City Beautiful," says the committee statement. "They base their opposition on the sole ground that to take this first step toward the building of a City Hall at this time might, in some way, interfere with other important contemplated municipal projects. They do not make the positive statement that it will, but state that it might."

The committee declares that the city is doing a business involving an expenditure of bonds and tax money to the extent of over $12,000,000 a year. In a City Hall built when Los Angeles was doing a business of less than $1,000,000 a year. It cites the fact that the municipal business has so far outgrown its original quarters that the city has been forced to scatter its departments all over the business section, in rented offices, and that the original City Hall and its many annex are both hopelessly overcrowded.

"It requires no argument," states the committee, "to prove that there must be a great waste under such conditions. If the waste amounts to 1 per cent. on the total expenditure, it is in excess of $120,000 a year; if it amounts to 2 per cent., it is in excess of $240,000 a year; if it amounts to 3 per cent., it is over $360,000 a year."

LOSS IN EFFICIENCY.

The committee goes on to state that no important administrative branch of the city government reports a large loss in efficiency as a result of the conditions under which the city employees work. Some say that this loss amounts to more than 25 per cent. Most of the city's business requires a constant reference to all kinds of records and the co-ordinance and co-operation of several departments. The lack of counter room and of convenient storage space makes it necessary to handle books many times, where under a proper method of doing business in many cases they would not have to be moved at all. The committee cites the illustration of the street superintendent, who has his department scattered over three floors. Employees who are well paid for their skill in difficult computation and in making estimates or drawing plans are forced to work in the open, subject to constant and disturbing interruptions.

"The loss to the general public in time, resulting from delay of service and difficulty in finding all departments with which they have business, is at least as great as the loss to the municipal government itself," says the committee.

RECORDS ARE UNSAFE.

The committee emphasizes the fact that the records of the city, although having a monetary value of millions of dollars, are scattered everywhere and unprotected from fire and in constant danger of destruction. The loss of these records, it is pointed out, would be immeasureable, would cause ceaseless litigation and jeopardize public and private property rights. It is shown that the $40,000 a year paid as rent to private landlords and annually lost forever would be saved by the construction of a new city hall.

The committee straightens out the erroneous belief that a bond issue is necessary to carry out the City Hall project, pointing out that the money required is to be derived from the sale of the present City Hall site and the levy and collection of a 5 per cent. tax on each one hundred dollars worth of taxable property. This, it is pointed out, is equal to a two-thousandth part of the assessed value of any property and means the diversion of tax money now wasted in rents and loss of efficiency in the city's departments into a paying investment.

"Our assessed valuation for 1911-12 is $300,000,000," continues the statement. "We have a legal right to issue bonds to the extent of 15 per cent. of the assessed value of our property. We could issue on the assessed value of the city of a year ago about $15,000,000 more in bonds. The assessed value of the property in the city is increasing at the rate of $60,000,000 a year. The assessment for 1912-13 will probably show a valuation of approximately $400,000,000. If our past percentage of growth indicates anything to us at all, it indicates that the assessed value of property within the present city limits of Los Angeles will reach $500,000,000 at the beginning of the fiscal year of 1913-14. This means that we will have a legal power to issue by that time a total of $75,000,000 in bonds, or $40,000,000 of our total present bonded indebtedness, which is more than two-thirds made up of the expenditure of the aqueduct.

"In view of these figures, is there anyone who has any knowledge of business who is willing to put himself on record as saying that the city should not have a proper building as soon as possible in which to transact its business? If the need for municipal projects should grow in the next two years, so as to require the issuance of an additional $40,000,000 in bonds, or $30,000,000 in bonds, or $20,000,000 in bonds, will not the great need which already exists for a proper place to transact this business grow in correspondence with this growth of municipal business?"

The committee's report is concluded with the following summary:

"There is no denial on the part of any one of the following facts:

"(1) That the city almost three years ago accepted a gift of $125,000 from property owners, and is under a moral obligation to proceed without delay with the building of this city hall.

"(2) That it was the understanding and agreement with the donors of the funds that this work should go on at once, and that failure to do so would be a flagrant breach of faith.

"(3) That the experts on the City Beautiful, Civic Center and Transportation plans, Mulford Robinson and Bion J. Arnold, have given enthusiastic approval to the building of the city hall on this site."

EFFICENCY AND HOW TO GET IT.

EDUCATOR GIVES POINTERS TO FELLOW CRAFTSMEN.

What Principal and Teacher Should and Should Not Be and Why—Final Session of Supervisors of Education for Southern California—Catechism.

An educational clinic was conducted by the Supervisors of Education for Southern California in their concluding session at the State Normal School yesterday that went to the very heart of the scheme of child-instruction and demonstrated the fine points of the system.

Dr. Jeremiah H. Rhodes, principal of the Pasadena city schools, was the chief demonstrator, and the manner in which he wielded the pedagogic scalpel was an eye-astonisher. He championed the poor, downtrodden teacher and her method. He said she suffers adverse criticism in silence, and offers no defense unless invited to do so. He thought if more teachers were given an opportunity to expound their devices for cramming the young idea, such exposition would be of considerable benefit to the teacher's critic, as well as to Miss Schoolma'am herself.

Discussing the subject of school visitation, Dr. Rhodes showed that it required a good degree of skill on the part of the visitor to get any benefit from witnessing another teacher in action.

The work of parent-teacher associations throughout Southern California was outlined. The speaker also dwelt on the work of the principal. A principal should not be ostensibly a great man, he said, but one who is able to discover, or create, and keep a good teacher. He should be not only an executive in the office, but a dynamo on the playgrounds and in the whole community, in touch with all environmental forces that mould the character of the child. He must be a man of genuine sympathy, integrity, adaptability and vision. He must be able to command, but be above scolding or criticising a teacher or parent in the presence of a child.

"Know thyself," is one of the apothegms of the pedagogue. Dr. Rhodes says a teacher should have a catechism like this:

"What am I teaching this subject for?"

"What is to do for the child?"

"Where is one going to apply it?"

"Can he make money out of it?"

"Why?"

"Is it mental growth and power you are getting?"

"If so, why?"

Superintendents, principals of high schools, supervising teachers, leaders of parent-teacher associations in this and other cities heard Dr. Rhodes's address and complimented him on the manner in which he handled his subject.

FRIENDS GREET THE MISSES WOOD

YOUNG SOCIETY WOMEN RETURN FROM GLOBE TRIP.

Have Stirring Adventures on Sea and Land, Buffeted by Typhoon, Run from Chinese Rebellion, Escape Smallpox Infection—Los Angeles Best.

The Misses Elizabeth and Florence Wood, popular Los Angeles society girls, arrived home last evening after a tour of the world, which was replete with many interesting and stirring adventures.

They arrived over the Salt Lake route at 6 o'clock and were accompanied by their mother, Mrs. Charles Modini Wood; a sister, Mona; their grandmother, Mrs. W. H. Perry, and Miss Edith Kirkpatrick, a cousin.

A host of admiring friends were at the station and gave them a hearty welcome.

The sisters, accompanied by Mrs. Perry and Miss Kirkpatrick, left Seattle last September on board the Minnesota of the Pacific Mail Line, and found life on the ocean uneventful until the vessel was near Japan, when a typhoon caught her. They remained two weeks in the land of cherry blossoms before they mustered sufficient courage to go down to the sea again.

They found China in the throes of a bloody revolution, but saw no fighting, although they were advised by the American consular representatives to leave Canton.

They made their way to India and narrowly escaped infection from smallpox, which was raging in that country. Master Goodrich, a member of the party, succumbed to an attack of small pox while in India, casting a shadow over the uncompleted tour.

They visited Cairo and other places of interest in Egypt and were met by Mrs. Wood and her youngest daughter, Mona, at a point on the Mediterranean, and the party enjoyed a leisurely season in Europe before taking passage for home.

"We are mighty glad to get home," said Miss Elisabeth Wood last night at her father's residence, No. 20 St. James Park. "We had a fine time, but Los Angeles is the best spot in all the world. We visited nearly every country in the world and tried to see everything of interest. We didn't remain long in China, for the revolution was in full blast and the country near Canton was filled with fighting Republicans and Manchus. We were warned to depart by Americans, and didn't lose any time in obeying."

Good Investment.

THEY SHELLED OUT THE COIN.

Heavy Cost to Entertain Money Well Spent.

Visitors Expected to Return to Seek New Homes.

Those who marveled at the cost of the great electrical and floral parades during Shrine week may be sure that it was money well spent, say local officials who had charge of the entertainment and pageants.

Between $30,000 and $35,000 was expended by the committees to produce the brilliant spectacles, but the ordinary spectator might well presume $1,000,000 had been lavished.

It is estimated that the 30,000 visitors expended $5,000,000 in the eight days they were here.

The full returns to Los Angeles from that period of festivity and pageantry can never be calculated. It will be cumulative, and in years to come when the Noble of the East has arranged his business matters to his satisfaction he will fold his tents and turn eagerly toward the Oasis of Los Angeles which he will always have in his mind. The advertising benefit to the city in this respect cannot be estimated in dollars and cents.

TO OVERFLOWING.

Some days there were many times 30,000 visitors here, as for instance, during the electrical pageant and the floral parade when there were close to half a million persons on the streets.

But it is from the 30,000 strangers that the enormous financial returns came to the city.

It is estimated that over $1,000,000 was paid to the twenty largest hotels and apartment-houses by the visitors for lodging and board alone during the eight days of the conclave and attendant festivities.

Strange to relate, but the next in importance financially was the money expended for photographs from professional photographers and in money paid out by amateur photographers for supplies. Almost every third stranger had a camera and a half dozen rolls of films which he recklessly snapped at the slightest opportunity. Miles upon miles of films were exposed by the visitors as they photographed the wonderful sights and the pageants as they passed before their eyes.

The item of souvenir postal cards would stagger the ordinary individual if the exact number could ever be known. In the hotel mailing boxes extra racks were placed at every vantage point to accommodate the postal souvenir fiend. Tons of these souvenirs were mailed East and to every civilized part of the globe.

GIFTS OF ORANGES.

Then it is the time-honored custom of every tenderfoot who comes to California to send a box of oranges to some favored friend in the East with his compliments. Oranges were at their best during Shrine week and the thousands of big boxes sent to men of Los Angeles, this, in the eyes loads.

The curio stores came in for a tremendous rush of business. Their choicest wares were eagerly seized upon and especially those articles that are peculiarly of Los Angeles were purchased galore and sent flitting to friends who were not lucky enough to be on the spot. California gems which are just now becoming the rage in the East were eagerly purchased by thousands of visitors and the total of money spent for this one item would equal a king's ransom.

There were enough cigars purchased by the Shriners and their friends to keep the factories working a month at double time.

The Nobles are as a rule well-to-do, "want what they want when they want it," and generally get it no matter what the cost.

But while the visitors spent their money freely and left sackful of it among the merchants and business of the committee in charge of the great spectacle, was the smallest part of it. They have paid no attention to this feature, but say that all they hope for is that every blessed stranger who was here during that wonderful week will return or send a friend as a future citizen of Los Angeles.

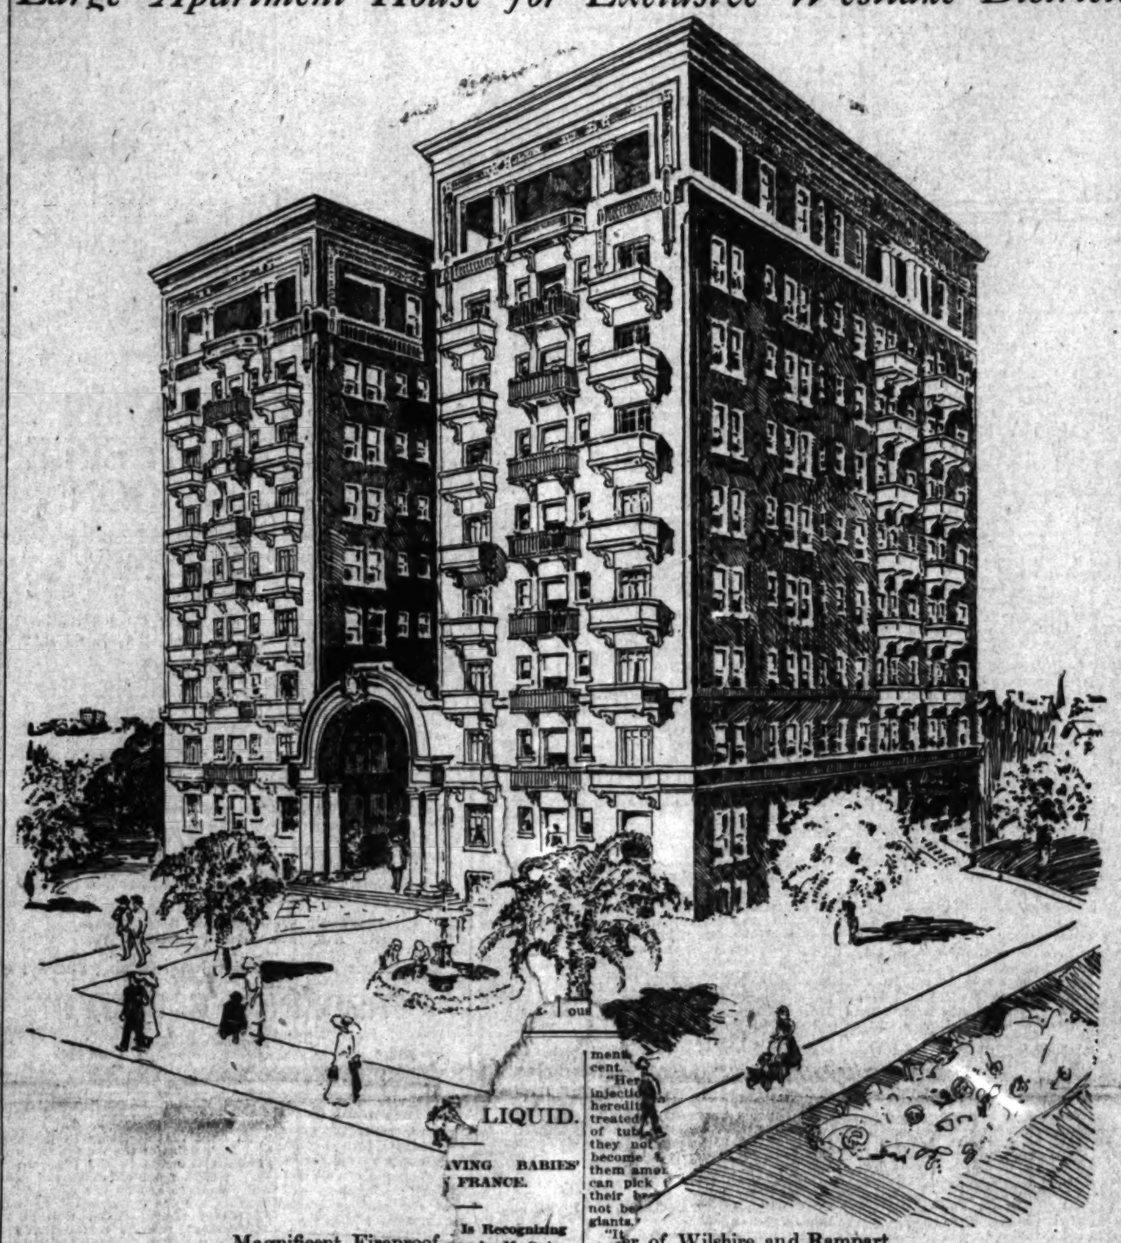
Large Apartment House for Exclusive Westlake District.



Magnificent Fireproof [illegible] Corner of Wilshire and Rampart.

Modern improvement planned by Architects Frederick Noonan and Charles H. Rysor for Hugh W. Bryson, and construction on which has been begun by the F. O. Engstrum Company. Originally designed for [illegible], the plans have been changed to call for the splendid nine-story structure pictured above.

Metropolitan.

FINEST WEST OF NEW YORK CITY.

New Apartments Combine Luxury and Comfort.

To Occupy Corner of Wilshire and Rampart.

To Be Nine Stories High and Absolutely Fireproof.

Construction upon what will probably be the finest structure devoted exclusively to apartment-house purposes west of New York City was begun during the past week by the F. O. Engstrum Company, contractors for the magnificent nine-story reinforced concrete structure projected by Hugh W. Bryson for the northwest corner of Wilshire boulevard and Rampart street. The building as originally planned by the architects, Frederick Noonan and Charles H. Rysor, and a perspective of which appeared exclusively in The Times several weeks ago, has been changed in recently revised designs from a six-story and basement structure to an apartment-house of nine stories and containing a total of 320 rooms.

The owner originally contemplated constructing the building almost to the sidewalk line, but readily yielded to the wishes of the residents of the district that the structure be set back to conform to the line of improvement on Wilshire boulevard. Under the new plans the apartments will be set back 100 feet from the center of Wilshire boulevard and fifty feet from the center of Rampart street. By the addition of the extra stories Mr. Bryson has more than regained the space sacrificed. The architectural design of the building has been materially altered as the result of the change.

The building will have a frontage of 114 feet on Wilshire boulevard and of 110 feet on Rampart street. A court 24x50 feet in size will open from the boulevard frontage through an arch of classic design, executed in concrete. This arch will be an imposing and distinctive feature and will be supported by concrete columns of ornamental design.

A fountain, stone seats, flowers and plants will add charm to the court and afford a pleasant outlook for the apratments facing it. The building, towering high above all the neighboring structures, will present four finished faces to the world. The ornamentation will be almost entirely of colored tile, which material will be utilized for all the friezes, insets and bands.

AFTER NEW YORK MODELS.

It is the expressed intention of the builder to make of the building one of the finest apartment-houses in the United States, a structure that will compare favorably with the great improvements of its type in the Riverside drive section of New York City. To that end he is finishing the building throughout in the finest of hardwoods and using only marble and tile in the bath-rooms. Eighty-eight apartments in all are provided for, these ranging from two to five-room suites, every one with an outside balcony, a private bath, kitchen and dressing-room. Many will be provided also with breakfast-rooms, an innovation in apartment-house construction in this city. Eighteen bachelor apartments, consisting of a single room with bath each, have been planned. The corridors throughout will have a width of eight feet.

The lobby will be on the main floor and will be 30x50 feet in size. It will be finished entirely in marble, tile and mahogany and splendidly appointed. The top floor will have an unusually high ceiling and will contain a luxuriously finished ballroom, together with an amusement-room, billiard-rooms, reception hall, writing-rooms and three loges. The ballroom will be provided with a stage for private theatricals, and will be 61x42 feet in size.

The ground floor will be given over to the quarters for the help, maids and chauffeurs, together with space for the heating and power plants and storerooms. Two elevators will be installed. Every suite will have telephone and vacuum cleaning connections, steam heat and hot and cold water.

SERVICE FURNISHED.

The improvement is designed to meet the requirements of those who want all the comforts and luxuries of a mansion without any of the inconveniences that necessarily go with the maintenance of such a place. Those living at the apartments will be provided by the proprietor with such service as may be required, servants being regularly employed to attend to the washing of dishes and the keeping in order of the various rooms. All rooms and closets are to be larger than those ordinarily found in apartment-houses here, no stint having been made in the space arrangements.

The total amount represented in the investment in site, building and furnishings is given at approximately $450,000. Mr. Bryson regards the project as a most conservative one basing his opinion upon his experience in the construction of the Rampart Apartments at Sixth and Rampart streets, over two years ago. The Rampart, which was sold several months ago to Robert Marsh for $350,000, was the first absolutely fireproof apartment-house ever erected in this city and is today one of the finest in the West. Its instantaneous success has led to the construction of a number of similar structures in the past two years.

Mr. Bryson believes that a great deal of the property in the immediate vicinity of Westlake Park will in the next few years be improved with fireproof apartments and apartment hotels of the type that he is now erecting and that this is destined to be one of the most noteworthy districts of its kind in the United States. The proximity both to the park and to the exclusive residential district on and near Wilshire boulevard makes of the section an exceptionally attractive neighborhood for this class of improvements.

San Diego.

COMMISSION TO CONSIDER TAXES.

REALTY MEN URGE THAT RATE BE LOWERED.

Board Declares Raise Gives City Black Eye Abroad—Four-story Hotel—Latest Building Project. Landmark Razed to Make Way for Skyscraper.

SAN DIEGO, May 18.—A commission, to be composed of real estate men who know land values, to make assessments, is to be recommended to the City Council by the realty board. The subject of assessments has been under discussion by realty men for several weeks. Opinions of members of the board expressed are that the entire city should be reassessed and that there should be a more equitable valuation placed on improved and unimproved property. Members of the board declare they are willing to stand a raise in the assessed valuation of the city, providing the increase is equal all around.

Under the present assessment plan the Council has been forced, in order to raise money to operate the government, to increase the tax rate. Realty men believe an increased tax rate is more of a detriment to the influx of homeseekers than any other method of taxation. Consequently, they believe it would be better to raise the valuation more in proportion to the market value and lower the tax rate in proportion.

Building projects continue to spring up as if by magic. One of these is a four-story and basement building to cover an area 100x100 feet on the west side of Ninth street, between D and E, and to be erected for Quince Crane at a cost of $70,000. The material will be brick. It will be used as a hotel. Work will begin June 1. Another building on which work will begin June 1 is to be a one-story brick, 50x100 feet, to be erected for L. Gerlinger at the southwest corner of Fourth and E streets.

C. H. Arthur will begin work this week on a residence of the Italian villa type at Twenty-ninth and Nutmeg streets, to cost $7500. The People's State Bank of Chula Vista will erect a one-story concrete and tile building, 25x65 feet, to cost $5000. The bank will occupy the entire ground floor.

The value of building permits issued the first two weeks in May was $232,739, the number of permits being 180. Since January 1 the value of permits to date is $2,805,000. This amount is twice as great as for the same period last year.

Removal of a frame house, a landmark, from the northeast corner of Second and D streets, is preliminary to the beginning of the erection of a ten-story, fireproof office building by L. J. Wilde and a syndicate. Reinforced concrete and tiny child material will be reinforced [illegible] and the structure will cover a space 50x100 feet.

A. T. Crane, a local capitalist, has bought of D. C. Reed 100x100 feet at the northwest corner of Seventh and B streets, where he will erect an apartment-house of two or three stories to cost $50,000. The lots sold for $17,000.

Charles D. Brown has sold to the Stooke Land and Equity Company for a local capitalist, 50x100 feet at the corner of Twenty-fifth and D streets for a consideration said to be $8000. Here the purchaser will erect an apartment-house to cost $25,000.

Miss Mary Rodman of Concord, Mass., has sold to W. S. Hellyer of National City, a ten-acre lemon tract at Lemon Grove for $12,000. The purchaser will build a $7000 residence on the place.

J. W. Walton, a banker of Hobart, Okla., this week bought of Charles Havens, a thirty-acre ranch at Lakeview for $10,000. J. W. Antoine, a land owner of Tulsa, Okla., has bought of Latimer brothers a fourteen-acre strawberry ranch near Bostonia for $9000.

TORRANCE GETS RATES.

Southern Pacific Includes New Industrial Form in Its Terminal Rate Zone—Shop Work Resumed.

The Southern Pacific has arranged to extend the terminal rates that are now applied to east and west-bound business at Los Angeles, to the new industrial district at Torrance, and the shippers of the new district will have all the advantages of the Los Angeles rate. Word was received by H. H. Sinclair, manager of the Dominguez Land Company, that the new freight rate would be effective June 11, while the rate to be put into effect between Torrance and the harbor will be 25 cents.

Some months ago the Southern Pacific, followed at once by the Salt Lake, opened the terminal rate in effect to Los Angeles to the San Pedro harbor as well, and at the same time made certain concessions to shipping points along the lines of the two companies between Los Angeles and the harbor. The placing of Torrance in teh terminal rate classification means that the entire district between Los Angeles and the harbor, has been opened up to terminal rates on east and west-bound traffic.

The Pacific Electric will handle the traffic into the new district under the rate, as well as the local business, until such time as the Southern Pacific spur track from Dominguez to Torrance, is completed. Following the announcement of the establishment of the new freigh' rate, which is made applicable to Torrance, it is planned to begin the immediate construction of the assembly shops of the Union Tool Company, which shops under the old rate, would have remained in Los Angeles.

FINE IMPROVEMENT.

Four-Story Apartment-house of Most Modern Type Started on West-Fifth-Street Site.

Excavations have been begun for the foundations of a four-story apartment-house, planned by Architects R. B. Young & Son, for a site on the south side of Fifth street, between Witmer and Hartford. The owner, Mrs. R. A. Yule, is the owner and proprietor of the Yule Apartments on Sixth street, which will be connected with the new structure by a covered hallway. The new building will represent an outlay of about $35,000, exclusive of the furnishings.

The apartments projected by Mrs. Yule will be of brick construction, and will be faced with cream-colored pressed brick. The building will contain eighty rooms, divided into two and three-room suites. The structure will have both basement and subbasement. The plans call for a large ballroom and billiard-rooms on the first floor.

The entrance will be in marble and the lobby will be wainscoted in hardwood to a height of five feet. The finish in the rest of the building will be in birch. Steam heat, hot and cold water, vacuum cleaning and elevator service will be among the modern features.

COMPANY REORGANIZED.

Fontana Interests Prepare to Develop Vast Tract in Rialto District. To Lay Out New Townsite.

There has been completed this week the organization of the Fontana Company, with a capitalization of $3,000,000, and the Fontana Union Water Company, with a like capitalization.

The organization means the improvement of the 10,000 or 12,000 acres of tillable land yet controlled by the Fontana interests, the building of a city, and other development.

The new Fontana company represents a reorganization of the old Fontana Development Company and the Fontana Land and Water Company, and will succeed to the business and assets of the two other companies. The properties involved include nearly 14,000 acres of land in and about Rialto, over 1700 acres of orange groves, valuable water rights in Lytle Creek, the domestic system furnishing water to the city of Rialto, improved properties in the cities of Los Angeles, Riverside, Downey and Whittier, and much personal property.

The Fontana Union Water Company, also capitalized for $1,000,000, was organized to water the lands of the Fontana Company not already taken care of by the Fontana Water Company. This company will expend large sums in the further development of water, but the plans are not yet entirely completed.

The directorate of the new company is composed of J. S. Torrance of Pasadena, E. J. L. Marshall and Roy Bradley Wheeler of Los Angeles, and A. B. Miller and R. L. McCrea of Rialto. The officers are A. B. Miller, president and manager; J. S. Torrance, vice-president; R. M. McCrea, secretary and J. H. Adams and Company of Los Angeles, treasurer.

While most of the plans of the reorganized company are not made public, it is known that these include the opening up of all the lands between the Santa Fe and Southern Pacific railroads, which are to be platted, graded and laid out the same as the lands further north. The opening up of the Fontana townsite at what is known as Rosena, will also take place at once. The new company includes the personal holdings of A. B. Miller, consisting of 787 acres, much of which is improved with bearing orchards.

Since the development policy was inaugurated by the Fontana Company more than 2500 acres of land have been developed, and are set to growing orchards and occupied with a large number of homes. This year about 1100 acres of citrus fruits are being planted. In addition about 700 acres have been set to olives and deciduous fruits. Further tracts of land will be improved and subdivided as the demand keeps pace.

The Pacific Electric main line from Los Angeles to San Bernardino will traverse the entire length of the Fontana tract, and pass directly through the Fontana townsite soon to be placed on the market.

The general farming operations of the Fontana people will be gradually abandoned with the cutting up and selling off of the lands controlled.

Col. J. B. Lankershim W. Mitchell Start f Tuesday. Will V Noted Resorts A Gather Architectu For New Hostelr and Beach Resort

Two of Los Angeles' most prominent capitalists, John W. Mitchell and Col. J. B. Lankershim, will start this week on perhaps the most interesting, eventful and profitable trips abroad they have yet taken, to gather further plans for their new Beach Resort at Santa Monica.

The plan that Col. Lankershim and Mr. Mitchell are now devising for a combined beach resort, hotel and homesite in Santa Monica, bids fair to excel anything of the kind that has yet been even conceived of on the Pacific Coast, and it is doubtful if its superior can be found at any eastern beach resort or abroad.

Not alone will the splendor of the new resort consist of its magnificence of architecture; though this will be gleaned from the architectural masterpieces of the world; but its wonderful climatic conditions and glorious natural environment, will play not a little part in establishing it as one of the world noted gathering places of the age.

Santa Monica has well been termed "The Beach Resort from Panama to Portland," for what other beach on the Pacific Coast offers the all-around advantages of this peerless beauty spot—twenty minutes from a population of 500,000 souls?

WARM WEATHER BRINGS LULL.

Grove Planting in Full Swing Over Large Area.

Worthington Ranch Bought by Southland Investors.

Thousand an Acre for Early Navel Tract.

PORTERVILLE, May 18.—Business in realty has been comparatively dull this week, doubtless due to the sudden access of warm weather, and the fact that planting has started in a large number of orange orchards. The opening of the planting season is almost always followed by a cessation of selling activity and this season has been no exception.

One of the largest deals of the week was the sale of the old Worthington ranch, of 200 acres in the Lindsay district, by Miss Elma Harwell to three southern investors, whose names are not made public. The price paid for the property was $84,000, practically cash. The announcement is made that the entire holding is to be put into alfalfa, about fifty acres being in this crop at the present time. The plans for development include the installation of a fine irrigation system, the erection of farm buildings and other improvements.

J. N. Farnsworth, a business man of Bakersfield, paid $20,000 spot cash for the R. D. Ponthus orange grove in the Lindsay district. The property includes fourteen acres of bearing navels and six acres of young Valencias. Farnsworth has some alfalfa property in the Bakersfield district, and this he expects to sell, with the intention of making his future home in this section.

Twelve hundred dollars per acre was paid by J. Humiston of the El Salvador district by Miss S. L. Phillips of Exeter for twelve acres of twelve-year-old navel oranges. Miss Phillips also owns an adjoining orchard of seven acres. The orchard has always been a heavy producer.

BUYS ORANGE LAND.

John McKee of Los Angeles has bought the C. W. Moore property in the Orangehurst district, paying $10,000 for about 100 acres of orange land. The new owner expects to take possession of the place in the near future. This summer will be spent in preparing the land for planting and next spring a large proportion of it will be put out to early navels. Work of developing water on the property will be started at once.

Dr. R. H. Deming, a professional man of the West Side, and his brother, Ernest, a dentist of Visalia, have purchased the A. E. Beckes navel ranch in the Wasco section. The property was bought at $75 per acre. There has been some lively trading in the Wasco country in the last few weeks, now that it is shown beyond question that the water supply is not only almost unlimited, but that it is easy and cheap of development. The Demings will put their tract out to alfalfa and expect to engage in the breeding of fine stock.

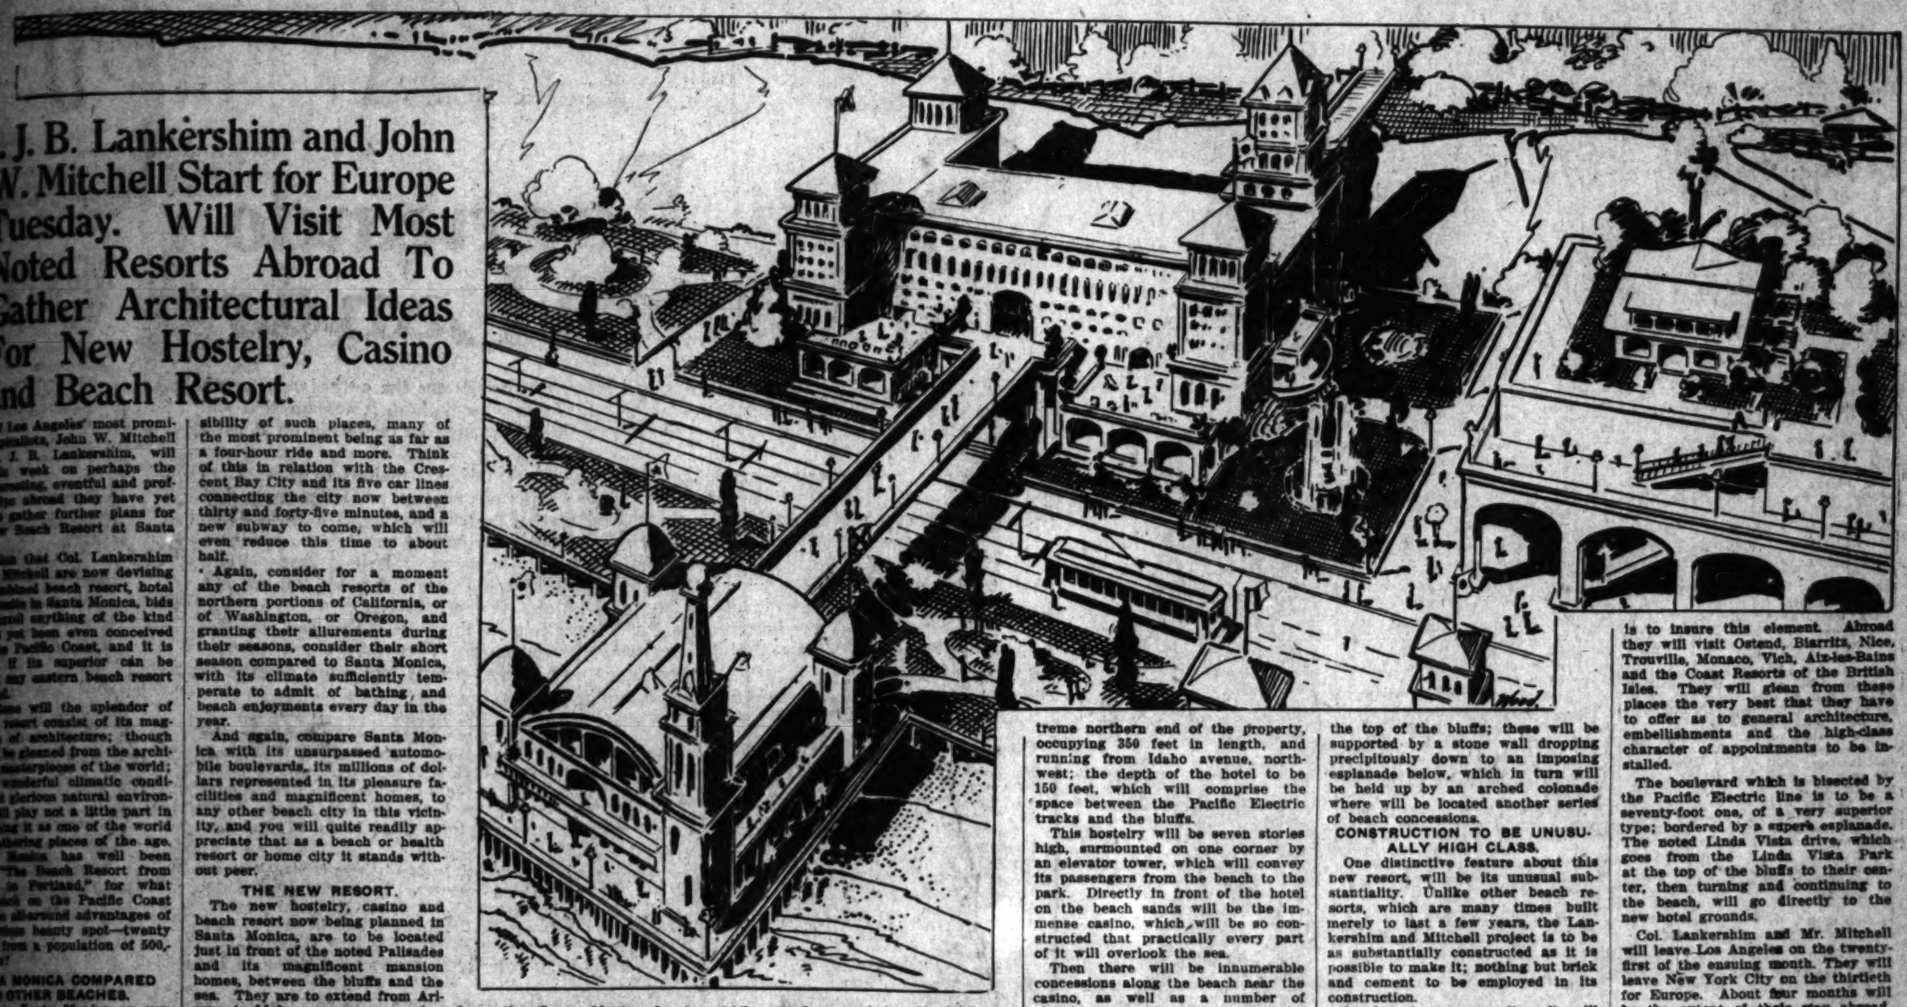
Capitalists Sail for Europe to Further Plans of Giant Beach Project In Santa Monica--The Beach Resort From Panama to Portland



Col. J. B. Lankershim and John W. Mitchell Start for Europe Tuesday. Will Visit Most Noted Resorts Abroad To Gather Architectural Ideas For New Hostelry, Casino and Beach Resort.

Two of Los Angeles' most prominent capitalists, John W. Mitchell and Col. J. B. Lankershim, will start this week on perhaps the most interesting, eventful and profitable trips abroad they have yet taken, to gather further plans for their new Beach Resort at Santa Monica.

The plans that Col. Lankershim and Mr. Mitchell are now devising for a combined beach resort, hotel and hostelry in Santa Monica, bids fair to excel anything of the kind that has yet been even conceived of on the Pacific Coast, and it is doubtful if its superior can be found at any eastern beach resort or elsewhere.

But alone will the splendor of the new resort consist of its magnificence of architecture; though this will be gleaned from the architectural masterpieces of the world; but its wonderful climatic conditions and glorious natural environment, will play not a little part in establishing it as one of the world and gathering places of the age.

Santa Monica has well been named "The Beach Resort from Panama to Portland," for what other beach on the Pacific Coast offers the all-around advantages of this peerless beauty spot—twenty miles from a population of 500,000 souls?

SANTA MONICA COMPARED TO OTHER BEACHES.

Compare Santa Monica as you will to any of the beaches located in the southern portion of the state, though you may find perhaps, a fair climate and attractive surroundings, consider the inaccessibility of such places, many of the most prominent being as far as a four-hour ride and more. Think of this in relation with the Crescent Bay City and its five car lines connecting the city now between thirty and forty-five minutes, and a new subway to come, which will even reduce this time to about half.

Again, consider for a moment any of the beach resorts of the northern portions of California, or of Washington, or Oregon, and granting their allurements during their seasons, consider their short season compared to Santa Monica, with its climate sufficiently temperate to admit of bathing, and beach enjoyments every day in the year.

And again, compare Santa Monica with its unsurpassed automobile boulevards, its millions of dollars represented in its pleasure facilities and magnificent homes, to any other beach city in this vicinity, and you will quite readily appreciate that as a beach or health resort or home city it stands without peer.

THE NEW RESORT.

The new hostelry, casino and beach resort now being planned in Santa Monica, are to be located just in front of the noted Palisades and its magnificent mansion homes, between the bluffs and the sea. They are to extend from Arizona to Idaho avenues; occupying a length of about 2000 feet and a depth varying between 200 and 300 feet.

This property was purchased for the purpose, some months back, from the Santa Monica Land and Water Company. The cost was said to be $100 a front foot. The property is a portion of one of the former purchases of the Santa Monica Land and Water Company from the holdings of Senator Jones and Arcadia de Baker.

The scheme of design for this resort will be totally different from any eastern or western resorts. It will consist first of the tremendous hostelry, which will be located at the extreme northern end of the property, occupying 350 feet in length, and running from Idaho avenue, northwest; the depth of the hotel to be 150 feet, which will comprise the space between the Pacific Electric tracks and the bluffs.

This hostelry will be seven stories high, surmounted on one corner by an elevator tower, which will convey its passengers from the beach to the park. Directly in front of the hotel on the beach sands will be the immense casino, which will be so constructed that practically every part of it will overlook the sea.

Then there will be innumerable concessions along the beach near the casino, as well as a number of chalet cottages dotted at various intervals throughout. Close to the bluffs running parallel to the hotel will be another series of charming chalet homes, nestling in the various indentations and nooks near the top of the bluffs; these will be supported by a stone wall dropping precipitously down to an imposing esplanade below, which in turn will be held up by an arched colonade where will be located another series of beach concessions.

CONSTRUCTION TO BE UNUSUALLY HIGH CLASS.

One distinctive feature about this new resort, will be its unusual substantiality. Unlike other beach resorts, which are many times built merely to last a few years, the Lankershim and Mitchell project is to be as substantially constructed as it is possible to make it; nothing but brick and cement to be employed in its construction.

Another feature regarding it will be the strictly high class nature of every detail incorporated from the least to the most important. The trip which Col. Lankershim and Mr. Mitchell are about to take to Europe is to insure this element. Abroad they will visit Ostend, Biarritz, Nice, Trouville, Monaco, Vich, Aix-les-Baine and the Coast Resorts of the British Isles. They will glean from these places the very best that they have to offer as to general architecture, embellishments and the high-class character of appointments to be installed.

The boulevard which is bisected by the Pacific Electric line is to be a seventy-foot one, of a very superior type; bordered by a superb esplanade. The noted Linda Vista drive, which goes from the Linda Vista Park at the top of the bluffs to their center, then turning and continuing to the beach, will go directly to the new hotel grounds.

Col. Lankershim and Mr. Mitchell will leave Los Angeles on the twenty-first of the ensuing month. They will leave New York City on the thirtieth for Europe. About four months will be the extent of their stay abroad, their entire time being devoted to the plans of this new undertaking, destined as it progresses to be the high class resort of the Pacific Coast from Panama to Portland.

WARM WEATHER BRINGS LULL.

Fruit Planting in Full Swing Over Large Area.

Worthington Ranch Bought by Southland Investors.

Thousand an Acre for Early Navel Tract.

PORTERVILLE, May 18.—Business is reality has been comparatively dull this week, doubtless due to the extreme excess of warm weather, but the fact that planting has been in a large number of orange orchards. The opening of the planting season is almost always followed by a cessation of selling activity and there has been no exception.

One of the largest deals of the week was the sale of the old Worthington ranch, of 300 acres in the Strathmore district, by Miss Elma Harrington to three southern investors, whose names are not made public. The price paid for the property was $200 an acre, practically cash. The announcement is made that the entire tract is to be put into alfalfa, the first acres being in this crop at the present time. The plans for the improvement, include the installation of a pumping system, the erection of new buildings and other improvements.

J. E. Farnsworth, a business man of Bakersfield, paid $20,000 spot cash for the R. D. Pentius orange grove in the Lindsay district. The property includes fourteen acres of bearing and six acres of young trees. Farnsworth has some alfalfa property in the Bakersfield district, and has no doubt he expects to sell, with a view of making his future home in this section.

Two hundred dollars per acre was paid by J. Hutchison of the Elderado district by Miss E. L. Phillips of Exeter for twelve acres of navel orangoes. Miss Phillips also owns an adjoining orchard of seven acres. The orchard has been a heavy producer.

FIVE ORANGE LAND.

John Mellon of Los Angeles has purchased the C. W. Moore property in the Strathmore district, paying $10,000 for about 100 acres of orange land. The former owner expects to take up his residence on the place in the near future. The summer will be spent in preparing the land for planting and it is his intention to put out to early navels.

Considerable developing water on the property will be started at once.

E. F. Dunning, a professional man of the West side, and his brother, a dentist of Visalia, have purchased the A. E. Beckes ranch in the Wasco section. The property was bought at $75 per acre. There has been some lively trading in the Wasco country in the last few weeks, now that it is shown conclusively that the water supply is almost unlimited, but that it is cheap and cheap of development will put their land in alfalfa, and experiments in the breeding of fine

J. E. Fairgrieve of Bakersfield, an owner of the Southern Pacific, has purchased one of the forty-acre or-chard tracts in the Ments Hill district southeast of the city limits. This purchase marks the passing of the Ments ranch, which for years was one of the large individual holdings of this district. Johnston will develop his property a few acres at a time and at present is at work on an irrigation system. He expects to eventually plant the entire forty to oranges, both navels and valencias.

W. A. Richardson, a San Frahcisco attorney, has bought the A. J. DeLaney orange orchard in Sunnyside, the crop consisting of twelve acres of mature early navels, selling to the new owner at $18,000. The orchard was one of the first to be planted in the Sunnyside district and has been kept in the pink of cultivation for the past seven years. It is a heavy producer and it is considered a bargain at $1500 per acre.

George Langenberg, a professional musician of Porterville, has purchased a ten-acre tract of bare orange land in the Strathmore district, having paid at the rate of $200 per acre for the property. Langenberg has gone into partnership with the owner of an adjacent property and they will develop water together. Planting will be started this spring if the trees can be secured, and the entire area will be set out to early navels.

THOUSAND AN ACRE.

One thousand dollars per acre was paid by B. Huxtable of Upland for the C. F. Cowdray place in Strathmore, the ten acres of two-year-old early navels bringing $10,000 cash. Huxtable has sold the orchard interests he formerly owned in the south and will come to this district with his family to make his future home.

H. E. McReynolds, an oil man of Los Angeles, has purchased from J. P. Guinn a twenty-acre orchard in Sunnyside, and an acre-tract on Scenic Heights as a site for a new home. The Guinn property is a fine one and brought not far from $30,000, although the price was kept private. Mr. and Mrs. McReynolds have arrived from the south and are taking personal charge of the construction of a beautiful bungalow home for the Heights and the parking of the grounds about the house. The site for their home is the highest point on the Bartlett Hills, and is reached by a fine auto road.

The tendency of the orchard owners to establish their homes on the hills is shown in the sale of several fine sites for homes in Monte Vista, the foothills having been cut up into acre and two-acre sites for homes, and a fine road running through Luther Burbank Park having been built to the summit of the knolls. T. O. Aitken, a Porterville orchardist and business man; A. G. Bryant, a Porterville realty dealer; W. E. Premo, an orchardist, and Dr. Austin Miller are among the purchasers of residence property in the Terrace. Several similar sales have been made to investors in the Scenic Heights suburb, the tracts on the heights being about fifty feet higher than Monte Vista and about 250 feet above the floor of the valley.

ELECT DIRECTORS.

PREFERS SOUTHLAND.

A story and a half California bungalow at No. 462 Manhattan place has been sold by W. H. Willebrands to J. O. Patterson of Toronto, Canada, for a reported consideration of $10,500. Mr. Patterson will close up his northern business and make his permanent home in this city. The house he has just bought is an attractive place of eight rooms.

MANY IMPROVEMENTS.

The Board of Education this week adopted the preliminary plans and specifications for the new $40,000 grammar school to be erected at Santa Barbara and Western avenues, adjacent to New Vermont Square. This will make two modern grammar schools serving the residents of the Vermont Square subdivision, in addition to the Manual Arts High School. The Normandie-avenue grammar school, located at Vernon and Normandie avenues, already occupied, is an up-to-date building of eleven rooms. Four lots were recently purchased adjoining the Normandie-avenue school grounds for the purpose of enlarging the present building. The following is the list of home builders reported by the Southwest Land Company: J. B. Moser, north side of Forty-third place, between St. Andrews and Gramercy; J. B. Moser, north side of Vernon avenue, between Gramercy and Arlington; Andrew Mathisen, north side of Forty-first street, between Western and St. Andrews; Mrs. J. C. Lucas, corner of Vernon and Arlington; Leslie M. Dayhoff, south side of Forty-second place, between Gramercy and Arlington; George F. Miller, south side of Forty-second street, between Gramercy and Arlington, and Mrs. Ada L. Deuel, north side of Forty-first place, between Gramercy and Arlington.

INGLEDALE ACRES SALES.

The Guy M. Rush Company reports the following sales in Ingledale Acres: Marion R. Ober, $600; Loy R. McGell, $525; Coalina Hoffman, $1500; Victor C. Larsen, $575; Dr. John P. Kelly, $650; Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Barnabee, $1050; Mrs. Stella Ridley, $1075; Mrs. Nora Kelley, $750; Miss Antionette Reinke, $525; Dr. Isabel R. Rockwell, $450; Dr. John M. Clarke, $450; E. R. Gregg, $600; C. S. Jones, $750; Mrs. S. Sliner, $775; George V. Matthews, $1350; Julia S. Roper, $1150; T. S. McKinna, $550; Beatrice Beckett, $750; Stanley R. Kalt, $1025; Inga Swanson, $325; Carrie McCamant, $825; Earl Kalt, $550; Lillian B. Dinsmore, $475; Mrs. Agnes E. Weaver, $450; Mrs. Lorena R. Peckham, $2050; Lorena V. Gale, $2050; Harry Clairborn, $875; S. E. Gillette, $900; Robert Myers, $1000; A. E. Cromley, $675, and James C. Autry, $450.

Women and Fads.

[New York Tribune:] Speaking of a fad in woman's hair dressing, a milliner said: "When the last season was at its height at Monte Carlo one of the conspicuous figures at the Casino was a tall woman of striking beauty, who could easily be distinguished from the women of the "noble family" class by the strip of white hair which she wore on one side of her 'pompedore.' The woman was a living illustration of the fact that gray hair does not always make one look old. Some American women who saw the striking effect, returned to their homes with a gray lock in their front hair. 'Too bad,' they said, when questioned, 'but it just turned,' and that settled it. You'd be surprised to see how many women have had the same misfortune lately, and even the first woman is wondering whether the original from which she copied was real or, like the others, just stuck on."

Lively Work on a Dining Car.

[Railway Age Gazette:] A party of tourists which recently traveled over the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada continuously for five days was served during that time on the dining cars with 660 meals daily or 3300 meals in all. This was done on two standard dining cars, each having a seating capacity of thirty persons and managed by one conductor, four cooks and five waiters. At this rate each waiter served at each meal an average of twenty-two persons, and each chair would be used an average of three and two-thirds times at each meal.

Marvelous.

SEA WATER IS MAGIC LIQUID.

USED FOR SAVING BABIES' HEALTH IN FRANCE.

Medical Profession Is Recognizing the Good Work Done by M. Quinton During the Past Five Years Among the Babies of Paris in the Cure of Infantile Gastro-Enteritis.

[London Mail:] One summer day a poor woman with a tiny child in her arms—a poor, white-faced little creature almost at the point of death—arrived at the Montparnasse station in Paris and immediately began asking for "the man who saves babies." And, strange as it may seem, everyone knew whom she meant.

"Ah, ah," they said, "she means, without doubt, that good M. Quinton," and she was directed to the Sea-Water Dispensary close by. There, by injections of sea water, her baby was soon saved.

It is not quite a year since there was published an article about the wonderful results of Rene Quinton's treatment. Shortly afterward, through the initiative of Dr. George Burford and the generosity of Otto Belt, a dispensary similar to the two in Paris was opened in Poland street, Soho. The first year's working has given excellent results.

At the outset the medical profession naturally opposed the treatment, but gradually prejudice is being overcome. Facts are more eloquent than theories. The number of children cured speaks for itself.

At the first annual meeting, held at Sir George Truscott's in Lancaster Gate, there was a most encouraging tale to tell of "saved babies" and grown-up sufferers from skin and other diseases much benefited. Princess Christian, who was present, agreed to become a patroness.

M. Quinton is what Americans call "a live wire," but his force of character does not dissipate itself in any kind of violence. Tall and soldierly (he began life as an artillery officer,) he radiates energy without being self-conscious in the slightest degree. He talks quietly, measuring his words like a man of science. He must be a good fencer, seeing how admirable is his "poise." His fresh complexion and clear eyes tell of perfect health. He gives the restful impression of one who has all his faculties under exact control.

Naturally he talks about his discovery and its results with enthusiasm. But he is also modest. He is far too big a man to boast. He would be more than human, however, if his voice did not thrill with satisfaction when he tells of the results of his five years' work among the babies of Paris. His treatment is, of course, found useful in many directions, and for people of all ages. But it is in "saving babies" from "summer complaint" (infantile gastro-enteritis) that he has proved himself so great a benefactor to mankind.

"Of this disease," he said, "60,000 children die in France every year. Properly applied, the seawater treatment could save, I believe, 45,000 of them. Even if we only saved 10,000, that is a division of the French army. That would be something, would it not?

"I can tell you something very interesting," he went on. "At first cholera-enteritis defied us. Every child brought to us suffering from this form of the disease died. Then I set to work to make further experiments. Now we can save 80 per cent.

"Here is another curious fact. The injections of seawater wash away hereditary stains. When we have treated for several months children of tuberculous or alcoholic parents they not only become normal, they become better than normal. Put them among normal children and you can pick them out at once. Beside their brothers and sisters who have not been treated they look like little giants.

"It is a marvelous fluid, this seawater, in which the first living organisms of our earth appeared. We still have it in our bodies. It shows more clearly than anything our relationship with those early forms of life. Injecting it has the same effect upon enfeebled human bodies as the chemist's 'bouillon' produces upon weak bacilli. You have seen, no doubt, in a laboratory a test tube containing bacilli incapable of doing harm. Put them into the 'bouillon' and they recover their vitality. They can kill again. The sea water acts upon the human body in exactly the same way.

"We have much to learn about it yet, but what we know already teaches us that we have at our service a weapon of enormous value in our war against the diseases which affect mankind."

LATEST RECIPE FOR BEAUTY.

One Must Not Laugh as It Wrinkles the Face, Nor Do Anything Else that Causes a Facial Movement.

[New York Times:] A new plan for attaining or retaining beauty comes out on the average once a week, and some of the suggestions are sufficiently weird, but one which appears today has certainly not been surpassed in strangeness.

It is simply that the person who desires to remain young should refrain from laughter. You must, according to a lady who described the system, choose between looks and laughter; the two cannot go together. Laughing lines and wrinkles the face.

"There has lately sprung up in London a set of expressionless women," she added. "These women—there are from fifty to eighty of them at the moment—steadily refuse to laugh at anything. They are all, more or less, 40 years old—woman's dangerous age—and it is their daily belief that by refraining from laughing they are retaining their looks.

"I first met the high priestess of the cult at the last big reception at Stafford House, and a few days later I went to tea with her.

"She has a beautiful but impassive face. She does more than keep her face from smiling. 'I haven't laughed for two years,' she told me, with the nearest approach to joy which she permits herself. Also, she avoids all manual work and strain.

"For example, she began to pour tea, and then, apparently remembering that even this might cause some expression to come into her face, suddenly stopped and ordered a man servant to do it for her. 'A woman can keep ten years off her face by avoiding doing things like that,' she explained.

"This woman and her following have almost reduced keeping straight faces to a second nature."

Freaks of the Wind.

[Denver Republican:] Of the many freaks played by the wind, that of yesterday which lifted the nest of a setting hen made in an empty cracker box and deposited it, hen and thirteen egg on the top of a rural mail delivery box, a quarter of a mile away, was the strangest.

The hen is the property of Mrs. Ida Erickson, living three miles east of here, and the owner saw the wind take the nest from the ground, lift it thirty feet in the air and finally leave it on the mail box undisturbed. The hen has settled down to her new location and will be left to hatch.

PROMPT BRITISH JUSTICE.

A Higher Standard of Legal Ethics Needed in the United States for Punishment of Criminals.

[St. Louis Post Despatch:] "The dispatch with which the Beattie case in Virginia was concluded, is adequate proof that the delays incident to criminal proceedings in this country are not so much the result of faulty laws as they are the result of faulty administration of the laws," said Judge John Davidson Lawson, dean of the Missouri University Law School. "Beattie killed his wife in July and was electrocuted for his crime in November, justice requiring but four months to run her course, and on circumstantial evidence, too.

"What is needed in this country is primarily a higher standard of legal ethics. English lawyers do not quibble; they consider that beneath their dignity. Some of the objections brought and stated in our criminal trials by your leading practitioners would be held in contempt of court in England. Allegations of errors in procedure which cannot be shown seriously to affect the judgment, are not considered in English courts."

Judge Lawson contrasted the usual delays incident to criminal procedure in the average American court and the procedure of English courts in such cases by reading the proof of an editorial which will appear in the next number of the American Law Review, of which he is editor. With his permission it is given below:

"In the matter of speed, English criminal procedure is the hare and American criminal procedure is the tortoise, and in the thousands of cases which are printed in our law reports the Docket (Judge Lawson's nom de plume) has been unable to find a single one in which the tortoise has under any circumstances passed the hare or even overtaken it, as it did in the well-known fable.

"With King vs. Dickman, let us compare the Texas case of State vs. Oates, reported in half a dozen current volumes of the decisions of the Court of Appeals, of Texas. In November, 1904, Oates was tried for having murdered a man named Arnold, in Dallas, Tex. The proof was that two men entered the store of the deceased to rob him, and when his wife rushed to his rescue and fired a pistol at one of them, they both shot at her husband and killed him.

"The prisoner was convicted of murder. He appealed to the Court of Appeals and in April, 1905, that court ordered a new trial on the ground that there had been an irregularity in drawing the names of the jurors from the box to select the venire.

"In the fall of 1905, the prisoner was again put on trial and a second time convicted of murder. On May 9, 1906, the case was again reversed in the Appellate Court by two judges to one, on the ground that the jury should have been told that if the wife shot the husband, the prisoner was not guilty of murder. In the spring of 1906 the prisoner was once more convicted of murder by the jury, and on May 15, 1907, the conviction was affirmed.

"One month later, the Appellate Court granted a reversal, overruled itself and orders a new trial, this time because the trial did not properly define murder.

"In the fall of 1908 the prisoner is once more tried and convicted of murder. Again he appeals to the Court of Appeals, which in March, 1909, affirms the conviction, but the next June it repeats what it had done two years before, orders a rehearing, reverses itself and grants another new trial, this time on the ground that the judge who tried the case was not properly appointed to do so. In May the prisoner is put on trial again, but the jury this time, disagrees, and in July, 1911, he is once more tried and convicted. Once more he appeals to the Court of Appeals and once more he is given a new trial, this time on the ground of an error in the wording of the verdict. On November 4, 1911, he is again put on trial, convicted of murder and sentenced to be hanged.

"In the Dickman case the trial opened on July 4, 1910. On July 7, the prisoner was convicted and sentenced to death. On July 22, at 10 o'clock in the morning, his appeal was argued before the Court of Criminal Appeals in London, and at 2 o'clock in the afternoon the judgment of the court was delivered affirming the conviction. On the morning of August 10, 1910, the convicted man was hanged.

"In the Dickman case no time was lost in obtaining a jury. The twelve men were probably in the box when the judge entered, perhaps the first twelve men that got into the courtroom. There was no examination of the jury on the voire dire and there was not a single challenge.

"At a dinner given by an Eastern Bar Association, a few weeks ago, Mr. Bryce told the lawyers that in England it hardly ever took more than a half hour to select a jury, even in the most important cases.

"His statement was greeted with a burst of laughter, for his hearers seemed to think that the Ambassador was telling them a fairy tale."

Workmen's Compensation Acts.

[Winnipeg Post:] The workmen's compensation acts that are now so popular all over civilization are giving rise to some curious legal problems. For example, the Paris courts have just been asked to decide the case of Mlle. Rethore, whose snake-charming performances have been a music-hall sensation. Mlle. Rethore was so unfortunate as to be bitten by one of her delightful pets and she has claimed compensation under the act of 1906 on the ground that the offending snake was an instrument of labor. The court has decided for the lady—no Frenchman worthy of the name could do otherwise, and so Mlle. Rethore is to receive a pension as soon as the doctors have determined the extent of her injury.

In Germany, a farm laborer demanded compensation for injury caused to him by an accident while on his way to church to pray for rain. He maintained that praying for rain was a part of his agricultural duties and he won his case. Perhaps we should not be much the poorer if animal taming exhibitions were persecuted out of existence, but it would be deplorable if farmers should be compelled to forbid their laborers to pray. We might get no rain at all then.

A New Word Wanted.

[Judge's Library:] Every now and then somebody gets worked up because we lack a convenient pronoun that includes a lady and gentleman at the same time. He or she, so to speak, gets tired of saying he or she when he or she means him or her without reference to his or her sex. The device is obviously clumsy when you come to think of it, although the fact that the language has worried along for so many centuries has made most of us pretty well used to it.

Just now some of these people are suggesting the adoption of a new word, "thon." Anybody, they say, who wishes to simplify thon speech will do thon duty by expressing thon opinion.

Nevertheless, we doubt the immediate admission of "thon." If the innovators are really determined to find a he-or-she substitute, we advise them to send for George Ade and engage him to invent one that can jump gayly into common speech as the latest addition to our slang vocabularly. That's the way to get a new word into the language.

Many people are willing to catch a cold from kissing if they can only kiss the right one.

STEAD'S SPIRIT AND MESSAGES.

Psychic Takes Supposed Story of Ouija Board.

Tale of Titanic Disaster from Beyond the Grave.

Spiritualists Listen to Story of Editor's Death.

A graphic word picture of the wreck of the Titanic, intense, heart-rending in places, and running the gamut of all emotions which must have seized the ill-fated passengers left to die as the last of the life-boats departed, is contained in a 2500-word message supposedly received from the eminent London editor and spiritualist, William T. Stead, by a psychic at the residence of Arthur R. Colburn, a prominent local lawyer, at Takoma Park, says the Washington (D. C.) Post.

A few days after the wreck Mr. Colburn recorded a short message from Stead, received by the same psychic at Takoma, in which Stead promised the second message. Since that time Mr. Colburn has been on the lookout for the second communication, which, he asserts, is also one of many such communications which will be received from Stead in the near future.

Mr. Colburn and Mr. Stead were very closely associated in the work, and had frequently exchanged views at length by letter. Mr. Colburn states that the message is individual in style, in spite of the disadvantages under which he said Stead was working in being unfamiliar with the writing powers of the psychic.

The method of receiving the message was the same employed in the first message, that of the ouija board, the psychic retaining consciousness, and calling the words off to Mr. Colburn as they were traced out on the board at the rate of about seventy-five or eighty a minute. The messages were received in a lighted room. In describing the receipt of the communication Mr. Colburn said:

"The feeling conveyed to the psychic in getting this writing from Mr. Stead, and his being new to the directing of her writing power, greatly affected the pneumo-gastric nerve, resulting in increasing nausea, with eructation of gas, culminating in violent nausea an hour after the close of the writing; soon passing away after that.

"When the psychic was asked how she felt during the writing, she replied: 'I felt dreadful several times.' The writing was not as rapid as usual, the message lasting an hour."

Several times during the receipt of the communication the psychic was nearly overcome with her emotion.

THE MESSAGE IN PART.

The message, in part, exactly as transcribed from Mr. Colburn's shorthand notes, is as follows:

"First of all, let me keep my word to speak what I feel I should regardless of opinion, if it only be the right word to give out.

"Let the people of all countries make new and stringent laws; let the life-saving service be first of all the thought most prominent and most cared for in all particulars. Let all the boats be more numerous than one seat capacity for each, because accidents can overturn many boats; so one seat for each would not, even then, be a sufficient safeguard. Let the bridge officer and the crow's-nest man and the wireless all be constantly on watch; sufficient men to make the wireless system perfect, not requiring one man to sit alone in the labor of his office until sleep and sheer weariness overcome his thoughts and hearing. Let the code be one which all can understand, and let be a great offense among all mariners if any neglect to come or answer the summons when received, and if not thoroughly understood let them still come or wire their word to some more clear understanding.

"The last moments were so terrific in all their pathos and suffering that the world best close the mind to them and think henceforth of the bereaved. Do all you can for all that are left upon this earth, a legacy of suffering until death closes their eyes, and may it be in peacefulness and repose of the spirit (here the psychic was overcome by the thoughts and feelings given her by the one communicating) . . .

"We tend each other as the one family passing over, all at one time; a single bond holds us fast, a sympathy none may share with us, for it came in the night darkness, and as the souls went over one by one and the lights went out we were in one vast darkness, and the cold cries and the partings will stand out in the world's history quite alone. We pray that no longer may the grief and terror remain such as struck dumb the mind and made us long for a merciful blankness to come over us that we might be at the end and rest, for hours were a lifetime, as it were, of suffering. In moments we suffered a lifetime, and that is all that I can say.

"Men, given to tend their lives with every acre and nourish their earthly existence with every tenderness that wealth can give to mortal, helped their loved ones to safety, and bade them farewell, and went back to give their lives — whatsoever they were — that women and little babes might live a few more years upon this earth. Never did man enact braver deeds than on that great vessel were that night enacted. Before this world it will stand forth. . . . In some and many cases strange women took the place of a loved one, and yet were saved with all the tenderness a mother tucks her little one in its cradle at night and gives it godspeed into the land of dreams. . . .

"Time and again the people on the greatest of ocean liners boasted of its greatest strength and powers to shut out all kinds of dangers, so that they felt that up to the last minute they were safe. . . .

"The truth was withheld from the great masses, because they were so many in numbers that a stampede to any one side of the vessel would have been very dangerous, and might have cost a great deal of life. . . . But so many faults existed that on no one, nor any one person, would it be exactly justice to lay all the blame—for we have made a great change which all must make, and I trust that any on whom some degree of real blame will rest will direct their lives henceforth alone to the betterment of the women and men . . . who survived. For when the end draws near, life will become dark to some, who will then awake to the remembrance that they did not do their full duty, and did not rescue the few who begged their lives at their hands so pitifully. . . ."

The message will be preserved carefully at the residence of Mr. Colburn together with other messages which he asserts have come from distinguished personages long since dead. Mr. Colburn is preparing a book which will contain quotations from numbers of the messages received at his home in Tacoma, and will treat exhaustively of the subjects of such messages in general.

LIFE ONE BRIEF PROMOTION.

Chicago Spiritualists who are members of the Church of the Soul heard a vivid description of the passing of W. T. Stead, the London editor, who was a victim of the Titanic disaster, says a Chicago dispatch to the New York Sun.

The message from beyond, a dramatic recital of the reunion of Mr. Stead with his dead son, was given by Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, who has gained a considerable reputation as a psychic searcher and who is pastor of the Church of the Soul, Chicago.

In explanation of her statement that she had received the message from Mr. Stead, Mrs. Richmond says that for years she was an intimate friend of the London journalist, both having worked in the interest of universal peace before the establishment of The Hague court, and that she was in perfect sympathy with him. The message as read by Mrs. Richmond was as follows:

"There is no death. One can only know it by experience. Most people hesitate, dread the change. To me life was one brief promotion.

"A warning word written by my son through my own hand, made it known to me that the ship would go down just as soon as it struck the berg.

"I was ready. Many were 'over there' first at hand to receive me. But what of those who were afraid of death, who knew not of the life beyond and whose faith might forsake them in the time of peril?

"They must be comforted, soothed, aided, if possible, to stay yet awhile in their bodies. And one forgets oneself when ministering to the wants of others. Still there was such a brief time to prepare—so little real preparation on that gigantic ship for such an emergency. Commander, officers, and crew did their best, but they could not create lifeboats.

"When all had been done that could be done we had to go. The cries of agony were terrible.

"And after the first roar—rush of waters—a great surging, suffering sense—I awoke as one awakening from a horrible dream. My son, my son! Yes; the first to meet me. He was one of the rescuers from that realm where lifeboats are never lacking. I was alive. Awake. Aware. They had found me.

"But these, those who had not known? Those who clung to their bodies, who still in spirit followed the frail boats on the ocean that held their loved ones? Oh, the wrench of having to be severed from them! These had to be comforted. Those who had been thrust out in unpreparedness unwilling in the realm of the spirits.

"And I was welcomed. It seemed as a morning of splendor after the night of earth—as wings compared to groping—as bloom and fruition after the bud of silence and darkness. Who can properly describe the indescribable?

"To be welcome and to be loved, to think first and all the while of those who miss one and mourn for one, to try to reach them with the invisible, impalpable menage of the spirit, to think and to know in one instant the answer to a lifetime of questions—

"Not yet, not yet. If a hand or brain can be found to convey the meaning and scope of this new life I may use it after a while.

"I am grateful for this opportunity to pay my tribute to my fellow voyagers and to the officers of the ship that went down and to say there can be but two causes for the sinking of the ship and the passing out of so many valiant lives. Overconfidence in the ship's strength and an insufficient number of lifeboats—these are the causes.

"When human life is really valued there will be adequate means of insuring safety. I am not dead and my interest and work will still be the welfare of humanity.

"'Nor birth, nor life, nor death can change or mar the soul on ministry of good intent.'"

San Fernando Mission Lands

—Lands that will produce maximum crops and maximum profits are the only lands worth putting a single dollar into. Acreage you can buy for little or nothing is acreage that will produce little or nothing—no matter how much time or money may be expended on it after purchase.

—That the maximum crops and maximum profits can be reaped, at smallest expense, from the San Fernando Mission Lands, is a story that is being told on this property every day. The citrus fruits from these lands bring the highest market prices—lemons as high as $7.00 a box. Winter tomatoes from the frostless sections and other winter vegetables, deciduous fruits, olives, nuts, all reach the highest state of perfection here—grow largest crops—bring greatest profits. Olive trees planted by the Mission Fathers and over 100 years old, are still growing, and the largest olive orchard in the world adjoins this property.

—Such lands as these—every investor may count himself lucky to secure. You can visit this property and see—any time—what it is capable of producing. These lands are proven, and when we take you out, we will show you lemon and orange groves and other acreage in this tract owned by such prominent people as the following—

Owners of Acreage in This Tract

—Citrus lands will be more profitable in the future than ever before. On the opening of the Panama Canal fruit can be shipped to New York in 12 to 15 days, at half former rates. As these lands are only 22 miles from Los Angeles, and will have electric car service to Los Angeles in 90 days, shipping products from these lands will be very simple.

—Aside from the productiveness of these lands, there are many other attractive features. Electricity is available now, gas will be here within a year, Owens River water will be available for all these lands, soil is 40 feet deep. There are two grammar schools, fine high school, $75,000 hotel to be built, two superb boulevards running to Los Angeles.

—Property is sold in tracts from 5 acres up. One-quarter cash, balance one, two and three years at six per cent. Or you can buy on our no cash payment plan, which means that every purchaser who will spend $2000 or more on immediate improvements, will not be required to make a cash payment for one year.

—Citrus lands $450, $500 per acre.

CAN YOU EXPLAIN TELEPATHY?

How Can One Person Transmit Messages to Another Unless It Be by Ethereal Vibration.

[Hampton Magazine:] But now, accepting telepathy as an established fact, the problem remains—How are we to explain it? What is the mechanism by which one person is able to transmit messages directly and instantaneously to another person, although they may be half the world apart?

To this question, it must frankly be admitted, no positive answer can as yet be returned. But some interesting hypotheses have lately been advanced not by mere theorists but by eminent men of science, who, themselves affirming the actuality of telepathy, have given much thought to the problem of its mode of operation.

Sir William Crookes, for example, calling attention to the marvelous but undisputed facts of ethereal vibration as evidenced by the phenomena of wireless telegraphy and the Roentgen rays, urges that here we have quite possibly an adequate explanation of the mystery of telepathy of a wholly naturalistic basis—that is to say, a basis which will enable us to accept telepathy without dislocating our entire conception of the physical universe.

"It seems to me," he suggests, "that these rays (the Roentgen rays) may have a possible way of transmitting intelligence which, with a few reasonable postulates, may supply the key to much that is obscure in psychical research. Let it be assumed that these rays, or rays of even higher frequency, can pass into the brain and act on some nervous center there. Let it be conceived that the brain contains a center which uses these rays as the vocal chords use sound vibrations (both being under the command of intelligence,) and sends them out, with the velocity of light, to impinge on the receiving ganglion of another brain. In this same way the phenomena of telepathy, and the transmission of intelligence from one sensitive to another through long distances seem to come into the domain of law and can be grasped."

This, undoubtedly, is the explanation that most strongly commends itself to those scientists who courageously acknowledge their belief in telepathy. Nor do they see any objection to it in the fact that people apparently are affected by the telepathic impulse only at certain times. For the brain of both sender and receiver may conceivably, on the analogy of wireless telegraphy, be set to transmit and receive telepathic communications only when attuned to vibrations of a certain amplitude.

Man Power and Coal Power.

[Answers:] Does anyone realize the power of coal as a worker? A man was set to work to pump as hard as he could all day, and at the end of ten hours it was found that he had done just as much work as a little less than two ounces of coal could do.

Taking all the energy put forth by a hard-working man during one whole year, the same amount of force would be furnished by thirty-six pounds of good coal, or say forty pounds of average coal.

We produce six tons a head of population, and this contains the energy of 336 men working for a whole year.

Of course, even in our best engines, the greater part of the working energy of coal is wasted. But even if only one-tenth is turned to account, one and a half hundredweight of coal is equal to a man working for 300 days of the year.

A horse can do as much work as ten men, but one and a quarter pounds of coal has as much working force as a horse expends in one day. So that a ton of coal, if we could use all its force, would do as much work as six horses working for a whole year.

The Drunken Parliament.

[London Chronicle:] There was a Scotch Parliament once which would not have cast a second glance at the temperance (Scotland) bill which has just made its third appearance in the House of Commons. The first Parliament which met in Scotland after the restoration of Charles II had not the least hankerings after temperance reform. It acquired the name of "The Drunken Parliament," in fact, and lived up to its reputation. Scott, in his "Tales of a Grandfather," gives evidence: "When the Scottish Parliament met the members were in many instances under the influence of wine and they were more than once obliged to adjourn because the Royal Commissioner (Middleton) was too intoxicated to behave properly in the chair."

NEAR TO ORE BODY.

Pick and Drill Company Approaches Promising Shoot Parallel to Mother Lodge Ledge.

The two drifts that are being run on the 800-foot level in the Pick and Drill mine are nearing the ore bodies which were cut by the north and south drifts on the 600-foot level, and the cross-cut that is being driven to the west on the 800-foot level is within a short distance of a long ore shoot in a ledge running parallel and about seventy-five feet west from the main mother lode ledge.

On the 600-foot level there are 1532 feet of workings on the ledge, north and south from the main shaft. In the south drift the first ore body was cut 215 feet from the shaft, and it is this shoot of ore that they are now nearing on the 800-foot level in the south drift, that is in between 100 and 200 feet. Two shifts of men are rushing the work in the drifts and crosscut as rapidly as possible. The total drifting on the 800 level is between 200 and 400 feet.

On the 700-foot level they are running two drifts on the ledge, north and south, from the working shaft. These are in between 100 and 200 feet. On the 700 and 800 levels large bins have been installed for the handling of ore. About 200 feet to the north the drift on the 600 level cut through a large copper ledge which crosses the property at right angles to the main gold ledge. At this point the copper ledge was about 161 feet wide and had a strong showing in copper. The north drift on the 800 level should again cut this copper ledge at about 310 feet from the shaft and the management of the company expects to encounter commercial copper ore at this depth. The copper ledge dips at such an angle that the working shaft will probably cut it at or near the 1100 level.

Recently the company installed a large pumping plant on the 600-foot level, retaining the old one on that level as an emergency plant.

The double compartment working shaft is down on the 600-foot level, and the total underground workings to date are 1525 being on the 600 level, a distance six feet wide and about three feet of ore now in the face of the south drift.

UNIQUE TRADE UNION EXISTING IN BOSTON.

Masters and Craftsmen Work Together in one Body With the Elimination of Professional Leaders. Workmen Are Graded and Wages Paid According to Their Skill.

[Christian Science Monitor:] Members of a unique trade union with headquarters in Boston profess to believe they have found the way out of labor difficulties. Steps are now being taken for the incorporation of the Massachusetts Society of Painters and Decorators, Masters and Craftsmen, and this is the third group among the building trades to form a trade union fundamentally different from the usual type.

These unions, which are called the Massachusetts Societies of Masters and Craftsmen, are regarded as peculiar because they unite in their membership and activities both employers and employees. One factor conspicuous in labor organizations generally, however, is non-existent in this kind, and that is the so-called labor leader. By those who after various experiments with the usual order of labor unions have arrived at the sort combining masters and craftsmen, the professional labor leaders are regarded as constituting a third and superfluous element which has proved far more harmful than helpful to both the principal parties concerned.

That the workmen actually have an important part in the doings of this organization is shown by the fact that the rates of wages are left to them to decide. It is said that most of the employers at first thought it absurd to leave the fixing of the minimum wage wholly to the craftsmen, but that the originator of the plan said they could be trusted to be as conservative as the employers and that experience has proved this view correct.

The Massachusetts Society of Brick and Stone Masons, Masters and Craftsmen and the Massachusetts Society of Carpenters and Joiners, Masters and Craftsmen, have been in operation long enough, it is claimed, to prove their worth and to convince their members that they have found a way for contractors and their employees to work together in peace and harmony. The masons' and carpenters' organizations have been in existence more than four years. The former has about 300 and the latter about 600 members. Little is known about them generally, however; partly, it is said, because of the alleged opposition of other labor organizations.

These societies are the result of the thought and experiment in dealing with labor problems during many years of William H. Sayward, secretary of the Master Builders Association of Boston, and formerly secretary also for a national organization of similar character. Mr. Sayward is now serving his twenty-eighth year as secretary of the Boston association. Earlier he was secretary of the old Mechanics Exchange. Formerly, also, he was in the building business himself, as was his father before him, and has been identified with the industry for about forty years. His interest in his project of the union of employer and employee in the same organization is of the deepest kind. In addition to putting it individually before the builders of the city, who meet daily at the exchange of the Master Builders Association at No. 166 Devonshire street, he is speaking about it at evening meetings of clubs and societies. At some of the latter he has spoken for nearly two hours and then has been urged to continue.

Mr. Sayward says his experience has taught him that the method of getting the parties concerned together, and sitting down in the same room and talking the problem over frankly and fully, accomplishes results which nothing else will. When questions are considered in separate meetings, he says, each side becomes suspicious of the other, misunderstandings arise, motives and intentions are mistaken and often the parties get farther apart rather than closer together. Then, when the two meet there may be a clash. Moreover, he says, the ordinary labor organization depends for its results on force, which, he asserts, is not the right basis for the solution of the problem. When the deliberations are held in common, Mr. Sayward finds, the opinions of the two elements are subjected to a mutual reasonable bearing because of their dissemination and action being in intimate contact.

"The aim," says Mr. Sayward, "is to offer a perfected trade union as a substitute for the fundamental organization one of the factors membership, workmen. providing an cludes in its directing workm the manual work The two have interests; it has titude which trued to take. Formerly, also, he was in the building business himself, as was his father before him, and has been identified with it in Boston for about forty years. His interest in his project of the relations of employer and employee in the same organization is of the closest kind. In addition to putting it practically before the builders of the city, who meet daily at the rooms of the Master Builders Association at No. 166 Devonshire street, he is speaking about it at business meetings of clubs and societies. At some of the latter he has spoken for nearly two hours and more has been urged to continue.

"The aim," says Mr. Sayward, "is to have a perfected trade union as a substitute for the ordinary type. The fundamental defect in trade union organization is the inclusion of only one of the factors to the trade in the membership, namely, the manual workmen. We cure this defect by providing an organization which includes in its membership both the directing workman, the master, and the manual workman, the craftsman. The two have no really antagonistic interests; it has only been made to appear so by the unfortunate attitude which trade unions have been led to take. Master and craftsman have a common cause and our societies are the first ever established which insure rational and business-like method of advancing this common cause and, while so advancing it, give due and proper consideration to the interests of the public whom we serve and upon whose prosperity and freedom from embarrassment we in turn depend."

"In operation we provide an office which serves as a rendezvous and headquarters where craftsmen and associates can report when out of work and where masters and their superintendents and foremen can apply when in need of workmen. This office thus serves as a clearinghouse. This headquarters gives practical evidence to the workmen of the co-operation of their employers. When the employer joins hands with them in this practical, business-like and efficient way, they are quick to appreciate it and are fully equal to do-

AMUSEMENT MEN BUSY.

Newest Beach Device Will Whirl Passengers Through the Breakers. Fine Apartment-house Completed.

VENICE, May 18.—Following the formal announcement of the early start of work on a new hotel for Venice, amusement promoters became busy, with the result that during the week a permit for the construction of a new $25,000 riding device was issued. This is to be known as the "Dippy Dip." It is to consist of a ride over and through the breakers from a point on the shore near the bathhouse to the end of the breakwater. Passengers will be enclosed in a steel cage, which will travel suspended from a cable attached to a shore pier and the breakwater. During the trip the cage will pass through the breakers.

A number of other permits for new structures were issued during the week. These were sufficient to raise the total for the month to $165,000. One of the new permits was for a $55,000 apartment-house to be built on Rose avenue for John Stein of New Mexico. Another apartment-house will be built for Mrs. J. A. Brown. This is to be on Lorelei avenue, and will cost $25,000. Mary Hunter has let the contract and secured a permit for a $10,000 apartment structure to be erected on Mildred avenue.

The sale during the week of the block of $60,000 worth of school bonds, at a premium of $2664, means that sites will be selected at once for new schoolhouses and that plans will be accepted and work be started right away on the construction of three new schoolhouses. These bonds were voted early in the spring, the vote being practically unanimous in favor of the needed improvement.

The busiest place along the beach these days is on the front between Navy and Marine streets, where the Great Western Amusement Company has commenced active operations on the construction of one of the largest pleasure piers ever planned for this beach. The structure has been designed to occupy the entire 225-foot space between the two streets. The work now being done is in connection with the construction of the bulkhead at the shore end of the new pleasure place.

Surveyors have again been called upon to run lines at the northern end of the city to assist in unraveling a few of the knotty tangles existing just south of Marine street, where the two cities come together. Here a three-story and a two-story brick block are being constructed—one-third in Santa Monica and two-thirds in Venice. Permits have been issued by both cities for these improvements, and the structures would have been inspected by both cities had not Venice magnanimously turned the work over to Santa Monica.

STABILITY

A building company having as assets fine acreage located in sections where a tremendous growth is apparent and assured, has a very strong foundation. It is further strengthened by the fact that when this acreage is improved an increase of over 100% immediately takes place in the market value. Still further strength is added with the erection of homes on which another profit of from 10% to 20% is shown.

Pacific Home Builders

have these combined advantages, giving them the greatest stability possible. They own high-class property only, having a total of over 145 acres of land, which is being rapidly improved and houses erected thereon.

After 60 days activity our "Angelus Tract" presents an appearance not surpassed by any other subdivision on the market, it having all the essentials necessary for the ideal home site, and being but 15 minutes from the city's center.

$1.25 Per Share

The balance of the present allotment of PACIFIC HOME BUILDERS' stock is offered at $1.25 per share. It presents an investment opportunity of more than ordinary merit. It can be purchased either for all cash or on the monthly payment plan. When this allotment is sold out the price will advance to $1.50 per share.

Dividends have been paid continuously since organization, the last distribution made to stockholders was at the rate of 10% per annum on par and as the earning power of the Company is constantly increasing, the value of the stock increases in ratio, also the dividend rate.

We Invite Investigation

Facts are what you want. It then remains for you to inquire as to the standing of this Company and upon your own judgment you will gladly avail yourself of the opportunity of becoming an investor in a stable institution—that is earning money for its shareholders every day.

BOULEVARD PLANS TAKING SHAPE.

MOUNTAIN-TO-SEA HIGHWAY AT LAST IN SIGHT.

Widening and Improvement of Vermont Avenue from Sixth Street to Griffith Park Assured—Effort to Be Made to Carry on Work to Completion.

Vermont avenue is to be widened from Griffith Park to Sixth street, a distance of four miles, to a uniform width of 120 feet. After the widening is completed, it is proposed to improve the avenue with two parallel paved roadways, with a parking on either side and a wide parking down the center. Provision is being made for a nineteen-foot right of way in the central parking for a street railway, the expectation being that the line now on Vermont avenue, that is being extended to the site of the new Girls' High School, will be extended past the new Normal School site and into Griffith Park.

Vermont avenue is now twenty-four miles long, reaching from the mountains to the sea and is the longest straight street in the State of California. It is now of varying width, but, if widened to 120 feet throughout its extent and improved as a boulevard as will be done in the section north of Sixth street, it would be without doubt one of the finest drives in the world.

The avenue is now being paved and improved the full width for a half mile through the Hillhurst Park tract which extends from Los Feliz avenue to Griffith Park. This portion will be completed within thirty days. A row of street trees will be set between the curbing and sidewalk and the forty-six-foot parkway down the center will be improved with choice palms, rose trellises and blue grass lawn.

The owners of more than two-thirds of the frontage from Sixth street to Griffith Park have signed the petitions for widening and the proceedings are being hurried to completion. There is already a movement on foot among the large property owners south of Sixth street to organize for widening to 120 feet from Sixth street to the ocean.

THE KANSAS CITY WAY.

In Kansas City a number of boulevards 120 feet wide have been laid out and, in some cases, narrower streets widened to that width and improved as boulevards. The invariable experience has been that all the property within five or six blocks of these boulevards has increased in value, in some cases the street frontage having increased from two to four-fold within a year after the completion of the work.

These boulevards are maintained by the park department. A special assessment of ten cents per front foot is collected on the property fronting on the boulevard, and the balance of the expense is defrayed out of the funds of the park department. The average cost per foot for maintenance in Kansas City is fourteen cents, four cents of this being paid out of the general fund on the theory that these boulevards are a benefit not only to the abutting property but to the city at large.

The Vermont Avenue Improvement Association will advocate an amendment to the city charter or the general laws permitting a similar assessment on the frontage abutting on these boulevards, the proceeds to be turned over to the park department for care and maintenance. It is regarded by the association as extremely important that the park department should have supervision over the street parkings in order to give them uniform care. Under present conditions some owners care for and maintain the parkings in front of their property in good conditions, while some other owners, including nearly all the non-residents and owners of vacant property, permit the parkings to grow up to weeds.

Committees of the Vermont Avenue Improvement Association have been appointed and are energetically at work looking up the best varieties of street trees and making plans for the parking, placing of ornamental lights and other details connected with the beautifying of Vermont avenue.

The Park Board and Normal School Board expect to be able to arrange for an extension of the street car lines now on Vermont avenue northerly to Griffith Park. This would give a good car service by way of Sixth street to the Girls' High School, the State Normal School and Griffith Park for a five-cent fare.

ELECT TWO DIRECTORS.

BANK REFLECTS PROSPERITY.

SOUTH PASADENA, May 18.—A stockholders' meeting of the South Pasadena Savings Bank was held yesterday to ratify the election of two new directors, H. E. Allen, cashier and secretary of the bank, and John D. Reavis. A new code of by-laws was adopted, drawn up by William Haslett, a local attorney, in which all the newest features of metropolitan banking were fully covered. The surprise of the meeting was the announcement by Cashier Allen that the deposits had passed the $200,000 mark, and that an increase of over 100 per cent. had been made since last October, at which time the deposits were less than $100,000. The increase is a substantial indication of the underlying prosperity of South Pasadena.

A. T. Gilbert reports the sale for J. M. Herndon to A. C. Norton of 50x200 feet at the west end of Rollins street, for a consideration of $900. The lot will be improved with a fine residence for a home. The sale by Ruth M. Atkinson to A. C. Hoover of a 50-foot lot on Oakhill street for $275 is reported by the same firm.

A boom in building permits has been reported by Building Inspector W. H. Lowry of this city, who issued to Cecil J. Gardiner, of the Merchants' Trust building in Los Angeles, eight permits for $2800 each, or a total of $20,000. The permits are for eight two-story houses to be erected on Ramona and Diamond avenues, south of Bank street. The houses will be of artistic design and will add materially to an already beautiful residence section of this city.

JAIL SITE SELECTED.

MUCH STREET WORK PLANNED.

SANTA MONICA, May 18.—Plans have been accepted by the City Council for City Hall improvements that are to cost approximately $15,000. The major portion of the work will consist of providing a new jail, to meet the demands of the grand jury. This will be located on the vacant ground adjoining the present municipal building on the west and the fire engine-house on the south. It will contain twenty-two ground floor cells, with a detention department for women prisoners and an emergency hospital. This solution of the jail problem has abated the storm that threatened to attend the attempt to vote bonds for the purchase of a site and the construction of a jail in the residence district. The plans now about to be carried out will include vaults for the safe keeping of records in the offices of City Clerk, Treasurer and Assessor and will call for the removal of the Mayor's office to the ground floor of the City Hall.

Just as soon as corrected profiles can be prepared and approved, the city will consider proposals for the paving of more than five miles of streets. Oregon avenue is to be asphalt paved from Fourth street to Sawtelle and Fremont avenue will be graded and oil-gravel paved from Main to Sawtelle. Fully as much paving is to be done at once under private contract in the northeastern part of the city, where bean fields and barley ranches are being converted into city lots.

The razing of the old Edison power-house at Colorado and Oceanfront is progressing and work on the construction of the new Benjamin bathhouse will be started just as soon as the ground can be cleared. This being completed work will follow on the Benjamin Hotel, while to the south the foundations are being laid for the Dixie apartment-house. On Ocean avenue the walls are rising for the Elks clubhouse, which will be ready for the corner-stone laying next Thursday night. At Ocean and Colorado the roof is going on the Busch Casino and on Prospect Hill a large force is hurrying operations on the new High School building, which is to be ready for occupancy early in September.

THE I.W.W. INVA JUST WHAT

What They Say They Are Try

With the Employing Class, and
Between Them Until the End o

THE sudden and meteoric rise of the so-called Industrial Workers of the World has startled the entire eastern section of America, and many are asking where this new organization came from and what its objects are.

It is by no means a new organization. It has been in active existence, in a spasmodic way, for the last eight years, but its successes and its acts of prominence have been so intermittent that the casually reading public has forgotten all about it until it has bobbed up again. The appearance of the organization and its work in the Lawrence strike, was really the first example of the activities of the organization which had come under the "back door" observation of effete New England. It has shown that it controls the destinies of thousands of textile workers all through that section of America, and has already caused many a manufacturer to literally "shiver in his boots."

Possibly it is a mere coincidence, but the fact remains that the Industrial Workers of the World, as an organization, came into being just about the time the ironworkers were getting fairly well started on their dynamite campaign against the open-shop members of the National Erectors' Association. It has been openly hinted since the arrest and subsequent confessions of the McNamara brothers that the dynamiting plots of which the elder was the acknowledged head, had their inception in the famous strike of the Western Federation of Miners. Dynamite was used in that strike with telling and deadly effect, and the lessons learned there were adopted, it has been said, by the ironworkers for their campaign.

The Industrial Workers of the World is the direct result of the famous Coeur d'Alene mining strike in Idaho. The strike was inaugurated by the leaders of the Western Federation of Miners, chief of whom was William D. Haywood, who now poses as the biggest man in the Industrial Workers of the World. In the Idaho strike the miners got but little help from the eastern members of the American Federation of Labor and less still from the United Mine Workers, the eastern body, which was supposed to be directly affiliated with the western miners. There had been a coolness between the East and the West for some time. The westerners claimed the easterners were entirely too conservative and too lax in their methods. The westerners had within their ranks many practical anarchists and militant Socialists, who had the foreign idea of general strike and socialism in labor disputes. They were conducting their own campaign and decided to conduct it in their own way, despite the protest of Samuel Gompers, John Mitchell and others of the eastern labor leaders.

One day during the early part of the year 1904 there met in the city of Chicago several kindred labor leaders who wanted to "start something." They had become sick and tired of the slow-going ways of the American Federation of Labor and they were satisfied that there must be a new departure. THE sudden and meteoric rise of the so-called Industrial Workers of the World has startled the entire country section of America, and many are asking where this new organization came from and what its objects are.

It is by no means a new organization. It has been in active existence, in a sporadic way, for the last eight years, but its successes and its acts of violence have been so intermittent that the casually reading public has forgotten all about it until it has bobbed up again. The appearance of the organization and its work in the Lawrence strike, was really the first example of the activities of the organization which had come under the "dark deed" observation of effete New England. It has been openly hinted since the arrest and subsequent confession of the McNamara brothers that the dynamiting plots of which the latter was the acknowledged head, had their inception in the famous strike of the Western Federation of Miners. Dynamite was used in that strike with telling and deadly effect, and the lessons learned there were adopted, it has been said, by the ironworkers for their campaign.

The Industrial Workers of the World is the direct result of the famous Coeur d'Alene mining strike in Idaho. The strike was inaugurated by the leaders of the Western Federation of Miners, chief of whom was William D. Haywood, who now poses as the biggest man in the Industrial Workers of the World. In the Idaho strike the miners got but little help from the eastern members of the American Federation of Labor and not still from the United Mine Workers, the eastern body, which was supposed to be directly affiliated with the western miners. There had been a coolness between the East and the West for some time. The westerners claimed the easterners were entirely too conservative and too lax in their methods. The westerners had within their ranks many practical anarchists and militant Socialists, who had the foreign idea of general strike and violence in labor disputes. They were determining their own campaign and decided to conduct it in their own way, despite the protest of Samuel Gompers, John Mitchell and others of the eastern labor leaders.

One day during the early part of the year 1904 there met in the city of Chicago several kindred labor leaders who wanted to "start something." They had become sick and tired of the slow-going ways of the American Federation of Labor and they were convinced that there must be a new departure. The chief brains and push of the meeting was one Thomas J. Hagerty, a minister of the gospel with socialistic and almost anarchistic tendencies. Hagerty is really the man who founded the Industrial Workers of the World. The persons now heard of as its heads are merely pupils of Hagerty and men who were attracted to the movement because they saw big possibilities of good positions. The whereabouts of Hagerty are at present unknown. He has kept in the background for some time past.

Hagerty was a man of brains, a fluent talker, and possessed of a personality which would cause many weaker and less intelligent men to follow wherever he would lead. He had been a sort of a missionary among the working people, and while on this work imbibed the principles of European Socialism. He was not of the student socialistic class, and yet he was. He would discuss the saner side of socialism if necessary, but if called upon to address a meeting of anarchists he was in his element. He was responsible for the formation of the Workers of the World and most of their original literature is said to have come direct from his pen. The preamble to their constitution, which sets forth the objects of the organization, and which by the way, is one of the most rabid documents ever printed in America, it is now admitted, was written originally by Hagerty and later somewhat amended.

At the Chicago meeting there were present, it is said, about a dozen people, most of them officials and workers in the Western Federation of Miners. Among them were William D. Haywood, a young man, who by reason of his forceful speaking and strike work had been elected secretary of the Western Federation of Miners but a short time before; Frank Bohn, an organizer for what was then known as the Socialist Labor Party; Ernest E. Mills, a prominent member of the Western Federation of Miners and who succeeded Haywood as its secretary, and still holds that position; William E. Trautmann, the editor of a Chicago socialistic paper known as the Brauer Zeitung, and others. A tentative plan of organization was drawn up here, headed by Hagerty, and arrangements were made for an annual convention, which was to start the new organization on the high road to success. Whether the name of the new organization was suggested at the first gathering of the favored few, or whether the name was subsequently adopted at the general convention, even the oldest members of the clan cannot now tell.

At all events, early in June, 1905, there met in the city of Chicago the first convention of the Industrial Workers of the World. There were something like 100 delegates present, the great majority of whom came from the Western Federation of Miners and militant Socialists of the dynamite and bomb-throwing class. From that time marks the period of activity of the organization which has within the last two or three months so rudely shocked the East with its box orators and its methods of handling a big strike.

The presiding officer at this convention was William D. Haywood, still the young secretary of the Western Federation of Miners, a good talker and equipped with a personality just sufficient to shake the red flag and get others to cheer it. Mr. Haywood's remarks at the opening of the convention, when he was tendered and accepted the office of chairman, make excellent reading now. Among other things Mr. Haywood, on that occasion, said:

"We are here to confederate the workers of the country into a working class movement that shall have for its purpose the emancipation of the working class from the slave bondage of capitalism. The aims and object of this economic power, the means of life, is control of the machinery of production and distribu-

REPORTS ON WAGES AND CONDITIONS.

Timely Bulletins from All Parts of the World.

The one important thing for us who work for wages in Los Angeles to remember and ponder upon, before casting our votes in November next, is that our city is rapidly achieving prominence as a manufacturing wages producing city.

Witness the great increase in the number of our larger factories, as given in a just issued census report on "Manufactures in the United States."

Census year—	No. of factories.
1910	1,825
1905	814
1900	534
Increase in 1910 over 1905	511
Increase in 1905 over 1900	280
Increase in 1910 over 1900	791

And in wage-earners:

Census year—	Average Number of Wage-earners.
1910	17,227
1905	10,424
1900	5,173
Increase in 1910 over 1905	6,803
Increase in 1905 over 1900	5,251
Increase in 1910 over 1900	12,054

This addition, in only ten years, of over 12,000 pay envelopes distributed weekly (salaries not included) accounts very largely for our prosperity under the wages and conditions prevalent here. It is the regular weekly pay envelope which builds and pays for our homes, creates the deposits in our savings and other banks, clothes and educates our children, keeps them and our wives and ourselves in the comforts of life, pays the life insurance and the fire insurance, gives us and ours trips to the beaches and the mountains, and so on, through the whole gamut of comfortable life.

This prosperous wages and living condition is based on the increased and increasing products (value) of the factories of our city.

As witness:

Census year—	Value of Factory Products.
1910	$86,586,000
1905	34,816,000
1900	15,154,000
Increase in 1910 over 1905	51,772,000
Increase in 1905 over 1900	19,660,000
Increase in 1910 over 1900	71,432,000

Here we have an increase in one year, in Los Angeles, of over one million dollars a week in the values of the products of our larger factories, and of that million dollars a week, no less than one-third, if not forty per cent., represents wages paid out weekly. Could anything like that good result have been attained if our city had not been kept industrially free during the ten years? Would it not be folly, would it not be criminal, to stop this march of profitable progress in Los Angeles, by fastening on its face, high-paid labor, the shackles of union-labor despotism, with its Gompers, Haywood, Tvietmoe, Johannsen, Harriman and Company policy of strikes and intimidation?

Now let us glance at the census record of the wage-producing industrial progress of our State as a whole, during the past ten years, 1900-1910, in spite of the San Francisco fire of 1906:

Census Year—	Number of Factories.
1910	7,658
1900	4,997
Increase in ten years	2,661

Census year—	Salaried Employees.
1910	18,208
1900	6,977
Increase in ten years	11,231

Census year—	Wage-earners, Average Number.
1910	66,115,286
1900	17,228
Increase in ten years	39,072

Census year—	Salaries paid.
1910	$71,955,000
1900	7,495,000
Increase in ten years	15,460,000

Census year—	Wages paid.
1910	$34,162,000
1900	20,856,000
Increase in ten years	44,352,000

Combining salaries and wages, there is an increased pay roll of almost $60,000,000 a year in the larger wages-producing factories of our State—practically $1,200,000 a week, or 50 cents more a week, for every man, woman, and child of our 2,400,000 population.

Then see how the increased values of products have added to the wealth of our State, giving us money to use for other wages-producing enterprises:

Census year—	Values of State's Factory products.
1910 (larger industries only)	$2,781,000
1900 (all industries)	257,878,000
Increase in ten years	272,375,000

There is a gain in one year, in wages-producing values, in our State, of $12,000,000 more than $5,000,000 a week, of which one-third, if not 40 per cent., was represented by wages paid out. The foregoing figures show in a nut-shell what we, voting Californians, men and women alike, wage-earners or not wage-earners, salary-earners or not salary-earners, have to protect at the polls on the first Tuesday of November next, by voting only for such men as can be depended upon, directly and indirectly, to protect the pay-rolls of California. And not only for California, but also for the whole country, as follows, comparing 1910 with 1900:

Number of principal factories	269,491
Increase in ten years	60,977
Salaried employees	788,787
Increase in ten years	426,147
Salaries paid	$938,570,000
Increase in ten years	557,804,000
Wage-earners (average number)	6,615,046
Increase in ten years	1,962,756
Wages paid	$ 3,427,608,000
Increase in ten years	1,418,677,000
Value of products	20,672,052,000
Increase in ten years	9,265,175,000

And one-third of this great product value and increase, if not 40 per cent., was paid out in the year for wages, practically $750,000,000 a month more for wages in 1910 than in 1900. And that's the crux of the whole matter for us wage-earning voters—the money paid out year after year, month after month, and week after week, for wages.

It is to be noted that the census figures of manufactures for each five-year period—1900 to 1905 and 1905 to 1910—clearly show that the percentages of increases in wages paid, are greater than the percentages of increases in the number of wage-earners, clearly indicating increases in the average rates of wages for the whole country. That fact should be and is, a strong argument against strikes based on inordinate wages demands.

Railway Pay-Rolls.

Year—	Workers.	Pay roll.
1911	1,486,000	$1,359,360,000
1910	1,322,425	1,195,444,955
1909	1,326,000	1,086,240,000
Increase in only two years		225,480,942

This increase was equal to $169 per employee, which shows that $117,000,000 of the $225,000,000 increase over 1909, in the 1911 wage disbursement, went for increased rates of wages, not increased total of wages solely. The pay-roll absorption of the gross earnings was 41 per cent. in 1909; 42 per cent. in 1910; and 43.07 per cent. in 1911.

Rhode Island Wage-Earners.

That the wage-earners of Rhode Island are prosperous is shown by the value of the foreign money orders they have taken out in the past five years. The official figures (1907-1911 inclusive) are:

Providence	$1,327,466
Pawtucket	538,755
Woonsocket	315,446
Total, three cities only	$2,481,673

In addition, there are postal savings deposits and very heavy savings bank deposits.

Watch-making Wages Compared.

	Per day. Average.
Waltham Watch Company, men	$2.48
Switzerland, men	1.00
Waltham Watch Company, women	1.42
Switzerland, women	.90

Do we want to let in cheap-labor Swiss watches? No, you say. Then vote next November to keep them out.

Strike Breaking in Vienna.

[London Globe:] The traders in Vienna have an original way of overcoming strike difficulties which the English mine owners seem to have overlooked. In Alsace, at Bischlieux, Hoenheim and Souffleinheim laborers at tile works went out on strike. The proprietors acted promptly and sent to the departmental prison at Strasburg a demand for a supply of labor to replace the strikers. The prison authorities acceded to the request, and bands of men under safe conduct were sent to the work. Everything, we are told, is going on smoothly, but if the prisoners go on strike, what will happen then?

Labor's Unrest.

STRIKES ON AND OFF AND STRIKES COMING.

THE London Daily Mirror says that the six weeks' coal strike cost the United Kingdom $122,635,800, made up as follows:

Miners' wages lost	$ 20,199,600
Wages lost by other trades	5,723,000
Railway traffic losses to April 6, 1912	15,572,600
Strike and out-of-work allowances by unions	7,299,756
Various forms of relief, feeding children, etc.	2,433,250
Losses by businesses other than mining	56,256,000
Total direct loss by strike in six weeks	$122,635,000

In these figures the greatly-increased cost of living to everybody in the kingdom is not taken into consideration. This was a very large item, says Consul-General John L. Griffiths of London, as almost everything that went on the table cost more while the strike was on than it did before. It may be, therefore, that the London Daily Telegraph's estimate of $243,325,000 as the strike loss will prove to be not an exaggeration. At least 25,000,000 working days were lost to the miners, and millions more to workers in other trades, upon whom idleness was forced.' Many of the trade unions suffered greatly by reason of the heavy cash drain upon their resources. This was especially true of the metals, engineering, shipbuilding, railways, building trades, glassworkers, paper-makers, seamen, dockers, sweetmeats-makers, pottery-workers (the worst sufferers,) dye-workers and textile unions.

The present losses do not, of course, embrace all the losses attributable to the strike, because it will be some time before all the collieries are at work again, and a considerable period of continued idleness must elapse before the most seriously-affected industries resume their normal condition.

And with all this heavy loss, what real gain has accrued to the miners by reason of the strike? Practically none. They are not yet getting any more wages, and may not get any increase. All they have secured is the law's recognition of the "minimum wage" principle, leaving that minimum wage to be fixed locally, according to local conditions of supply and demand, with the alternative of striking again if they refuse to accept whatever minimum wage may be fixed by the local district boards. The much-heralded "settlement" was, as a matter of fact, really no settlement at all.

According to a report made to the British Board of Trade by Sir George Askwith, the chief industrial commissioner and famous "strike settler," the most serious British strikes in 1911 and the number of workers involved were:

Place and trade.	Number of strikers.
Lancashire cotton operatives	160,000
United Kingdom railway workers	140,000
London transport workers	77,000
Liverpool transport workers	45,000
Hull transport workers	27,500
Manchester transport workers	15,000
Bradford woolcombers	10,500
London taxicab drivers	9,867
Glasgow dock workers	8,000
Total number of British strikers in 1911	807,967

Assuming that each strike lasted on the average only fifteen days, there is a loss of over 7,500,000 days' work and wages in the one year, representing, even at Britain's very low wage rate, a money loss in wages of over $10,000,000. And those estimates of length of strikes and money wages' loss are undoubtedly ultra-conservative. Did it pay? Judging by the increasing labor unrest over there, no! Decidedly no! The 160,000 cotton operatives went back to work without gaining a single point, and the 140,000 railway workers fared but a trifle better. Striking in a country like England, which does not create work enough to produce food enough to employ and feed its own people, is nothing short of criminal folly. Yet British union labor is foolish enough to permanently support 10,000 labor agitators. American union labor is, unfortunately, rapidly copying British union labor in this regard. Were it not so, Haywood, Gompers, Debs, and the other many American union-labor parasites would be forced to work for their daily bread as does the decent 90 per cent. thereof. What a snap Gompers has, sitting in his comfortable office and issuing appeals for money, which decent American union labor foolishly sends him—$225,000 in 1911 for the McNamaras-Darrow fund, besides $182,138 regular contributions to his federation, or $407,188 altogether in the one year. Why is it that the American Federation of Labor (Gompers & Co.) has each year (except 1906) for the past ten years, collected from union labor more money than it has paid out for union-labor purposes? The record follows:

Year.	Collected.	Expended.
1902	$141,495	$119,686
Excess of collections		21,812
1903	247,302	206,616
Excess of collections		41,787
1904	239,995	263,981
Excess of collections		17,464
1905	267,417	284,179
Excess of collections		31,247
1906	237,815	218,540
1907	274,320	259,950
Excess of collections		14,370
1908	297,655	284,927
Excess of collections		12,728
1909	321,277	295,702
Excess of collections		25,575
1910	193,470	177,859
Excess of collections		15,611
1911	192,188	175,754
Excess of collections		6,664

Roundly, the excess of collections over expenditures in the ten years was $180,000. Why was union labor's wages cash box lightened in this way? What has decent union labor gained thereby? Very little in "strike benefits"—only $4192 in 1911 and only $8484 the year before.

The cotton goods industry in New England, after weeks of strikes and lockouts, is again comparatively peaceful. One hundred and fifty thousand workers have had their wages advanced approximately 10 per cent. Only a few minor strikes are still in force. Some needed changes in working conditions were effected.

As 75 per cent. of the soft coal miners have voted in favor of the proposed new wage scale there will not be any strike in that branch of the coal industry.

The anthracite coal miners are still holding out for "recognition of the union," and considerable rioting and violence is occurring.

Fifty-four thousand workers in the Lena (Russia) goldfields are on strike as a protest against the shooting down of miners by soldiers on April 17.

The firemen on our eastern railroads ask for $25,000,000 to $30,000,000 more pay yearly. The engineers asked for about $8,000,000. The railroad managers are waiting now for the trainmen, conductors and other railroad employees to step forward and ask for more money also. Where do the stockholders of the roads come in?

Fifteen thousand tailors are on strike in the West End of London for more wages and better workshop conditions. It may spread to the East End tailors and add 40,000 additional strikers.

The Mexican government does not appear to be able to come to terms with the Americans employed on the national railways. The wholesale departure of the American engineers and conductors seems inevitable, says the Mexican Herald.

Masters and mates of tugs working in the port of London and the Thames River are on strike (500 of them,) for a seventy-two hours week and more wages.

A strike of the 7000 employees of the International Paper Company is on the cards, affecting thirty-six mills. The present wages run from $1.72 to $4.25 a day. The increases asked would cost the company $300,000 a year. Nineteen of the thirty-six mills make news print and the others manufacture pulp. Some weeks ago the company offered a voluntary increase of one cent an hour, but the men demand increases of from 1 to 3 cents an hour and the eight-hour workday.

Tom Mann, the most militant of England's labor leaders, has been found guilty of inciting soldiers to mutiny and sent to prison for six months.

Threatening.

SYNDICALISM IS DANGEROUS.

Movement Must Be Fought by Work of Church.

"Philosophy of Anarchy" Is Spreading in America.

Pastor Also Discusses New Conception of Family.

"There is a new conception of the family abroad in the land, and also a new conception of industry before which we may well stand appalled," declared Rev. Herbert Atchinson Jump, pastor of the First Congregational Church at Oakland, in an able address before the Southern California Congregational Conference at Redlands Thursday evening. He denounced the threatening terrors of syndicalism and the propaganda of the I. W. W.'s but expressed the hope that the church would do its share in the eradication of the growing social perils.

He said in part:

"The new conception of the family may be studied in a book by Ellen Key, a Swedish writer whose culture and refinement are bringing her rapidly into a place of leadership in the literary world. She calls her volume 'Love and Marriage' and its doctrine is simply that on the one hand, marriage where there is no love is not marriage or ceases to be marriage, and the law should frankly concede the fact; and on the other hand, that where there is love, there is for most intents and purposes marriage already, and the trifling rituals gone through with by a priest or a clergyman count for little.

"'Public opinion,' she says, as regards a dissolved marriage will one day take the broader view that it already takes in regard to a broken engagement. When love is admitted as the ground of marriage, it will be a necessary consequence that he who has ceased to love should be allowed a moral as well as a legal right to withdraw from his marriage. People see that there is no more obligation to abide by a marriage which one feels to be one's ruin than there is a duty to commit suicide for the sake

You Rich Man.

By HERBERT KAUFMAN.

There are emperors dyspeptic who must live on milk and toast,
There are millionaires who cannot sleep three hours at the most;
Your landlord has a childless home, his dearest dream is vain,
The wife of your employer tosses on a bed of pain.
No, you've not cornered worry. Yours is just a normal share;
Though different all the rest of us have woes and aches to spare.
The king would give his crown for your digestion, and you might Get a million from Old Money Bags if you'd swap sleeps tonight.
The owner of your house would trade it gladly for an heir,
And your boss would give you all he owns to lift his wife's despair.
You are rich, you lucky plutocrat—you really roll in wealth;
A family, an appetite, a store of perfect health.
You may lack money, may need work, but with the chance for proof,
We'd find as much of misery 'neath every other roof.

HATTERS GODS OF BEAUX ARTS.

French Futurist Relegates Idols to Junk Pile.

Shakespeare, Dante, Homer, All Get the Curtain.

Andre Tridon Says They Are Not Entitled to Stay.

BY MARGARET W. DE PEYSTER.

[The Times Wireless, Cable, Eastern and Overland News Service.]

NEW YORK, May 18.—M. Andre Tridon, most famous of the French futurists, smashed the old gods into smithereenes today, doing to the great poets and painters what Arnold Bennett did to dead novelists. The Shakespeare, Dante and Raphael societies of Gotham are up in arms against M. Tridon for slaying these and other buried prophets on beaux arts were not prophets at all, "just journeymen carpenters." For instance:

Romeo and Juliet is the silliest, stupidest love story ever written. Shakespeare didn't know the first thing about writing a play. His heroines were all dolls or demi-mondes. Hamlet is an insufferable bore. Shakespeare's plays should be buried with his body in Stratford. So, too, with the others. The world has lived too long under the delusion that they are necessary or even useful. They are just the reverse. We must forget them altogether, cease ancestor worship, hero worship, when the heroes are dead and out of date.

Not the plays of Shakespeare or Sophocles, but futurism is the thing.

"This is a tabloid age. It demands that our drama, like our literature and lovemaking, be brief, concentrated, vital and to the point. The cumbersome and artificial tradition of more leisurely centuries must be laid aside."

"And that is the real idea of futurism?" was asked.

"It is," agreed M. Tridon. "We think that today, and especially tomorrow, are more important than yesterday. Progress comes by stepping on corpses of the dead. It is only by forgetting the Greeks' and Romans' style of building that we were able to produce the modern skyscraper. All over Europe people are literally living in dead men's houses, great stone barracks, ad unsuited for this age as they were suited to the age in which they were built. In America you are more sensible. You build warm, convenient dwellings, with modern plumbing, electric lights, steam heat and a hundred other improvements. Your modern architects and contractors are all unconscious futurists."

"And above love?"

"It is the same thing. Love is necessary, vital. But it must be released from the shackles which convention and obsolete notions have put upon it. I see a woman; I love her. She sees me; she loves me. 'Madam, shall we marry?'

"'Yes.'

"'No.'

"We marry or we do not—but—" and unconsciously the arch-futurist contemner of the bard of Avon paraphrased the despised dead—"whatever is to happen, happens quickly. We of the world today cannot wait. We must hurry along into the next act, the succeeding chapter, until the play of our lives is ended.

"Forget what has been; think of what shall be."

Scott, Dickens, Thackeray, Dumas and our own Cooper were "bricklayers, landscape painters, sickly sentimentalists who know nothing about life—" Arnold Bennett said so. Shakespeare, Dante, Homer and all the great dead Romans and Greeks are "overdue for the scrap heap—" Andre Tridon is sure of it; and he is, of all France's futurists, the one man who has lived up to his cult by burning his own books and lining his library walls with empty book shelves—symbols of the gaps which the prophets of beaux arts have yet to fill.

"Which is the better land of futurism?" he was asked.

"Here," he answered. "You Americans are all futurists, but some of you don't know it or will not yet admit it. Futurism is sketched on your skyline, this city, for example, and your great cities further west. Your mountains, rivers, woods, lakes, the air you breathe, all these things make you futurists. You can't help it. When your shoe Shakespeare out of the schools and concentrate on science, tabloid teachings of things that really are, live in the present and the future, you will be first to enter and own the future land and the world will follow your footsteps."

"Call Me Joe."

[Pittsburgh Post:] "Write your name for me on the slip of paper," said the office manager.

"My regular name?" was queried.

"Why, yes."

The boy took the paper and wrote on the line indicated. Then he turned it in, and the office manager read:

"Henderson Emerson Williams. Call me 'Joe.'"

The manager laughed. Then he called the boy to him.

"Don't you like that long name?" he asked. The boy fidgeted a bit before he answered.

"Well, it's like this. I guess the name's all right around home. But if you wanted me real quick, it'd be an awful mouthful. That's why I put the 'Joe' on, so I'd—"

"All right," said the office manager. Then he smiled as he turned back to his work. "That kid's got the right idea," he murmured. "I guess he'll do."

Inspecting Berlin Telephones.

If a story reported to the Berlin Tageblatt by its Paris correspondent is true, the telephone centrals in that city are not as busy as those of New York, and the subscribers have much time to spare. This is the story: "Despite all the automobile bandit outrages, Paris has its fun. A telephone official calls up a subscriber and asks: 'Is this No. 28,889?' and the following dialogue follows: 'Yes.' 'Well, I am an inspector. Please say "Twinkle" into the instrument.' 'Twinkle.' 'A little louder.' 'Twinkle.' 'Now whisper it.' 'Twinkle.' 'Now say it a few steps from the instrument.' 'Twinkle.' 'Kneel on the floor and say it.' 'Twinkle.' 'In that position tell me were you vaccinated?' 'Yes.' 'Are you married?' 'Yes.' 'Is your father alive?' 'Yes.' 'Was he vaccinated?' Then the man fancies he is being fooled, tells the inspector so in angry tones and the humorous telephone official calls up another subscriber. 'What would happen to a wit of that brand in New York?' was asked when the story had been read, and a chorus answered: "Not a thing."

SYNDICATISM DANGEROUS.

of another. When custom and law deprive a human being of full freedom of choice in matters of most profound personal concern, as for instance, love, then existence is robbed of greater values than those the compulsory fulfillment of duty can bring.'

"The implication of these statements for our ordinary notions of marriage and divorce can be easily discerned. And the words are spoken, remember, not by a revolutionary, some wild-eyed female without character or esteem in the world, but they emanate from one of the deep students and thinkers on these matters, a person concerning another of whose books entitled 'The Century of the Child,' so conservative and safe a critic as the editor of the Ladies' Home Journal declares, 'Nothing finer on the wise education of the child has ever been brought into print.'

UPHEAVAL THREATENED.

"When the utterances of the contemporary and constructive philosopher vary so widely from the declarations of contemporary moral sentiment, it startles us into the conviction that there are new tendencies at work in civilization, far-reaching in their outcome and laden with possibilities of upheaval. Whatever we think of these strange and amazing points of view, whether we immediately approve, at least we must reckon with them.

"Without further comment upon the vision of the new family given us by the Swedish philosopher, let us turn to the vision of the new era in industry which is painted for us by certain French authors of growing popularity. This is even more tumultuous a picture than the one we have been gazing at.

"The next stage in industrial evolution, say these experts, is to be war, war of a fiendish character never known hitherto in the world of work, war that shall continue without quarter being asked or given until the whole present basis of society is completely overturned, government is shattered, the wage-system has been obliterated, and the people, as the people, own and control and profit by every activity of every individual in the race.

"The technical name given to this new philosophy of anarchy is 'syndicalism,' a name derived from the French name for trades unions, which is 'syndicate.' It far outstrips trades unionism, however, in the vigor and cruelty of its programme, and even the average Socialist seems a pale and safe creature compared with the prophet of this 'ethics of barbarism.'

AIMS OF SYNDICALISM.

"What does syndicalism suggest as a programme for its disciples to follow? It says that all co-operation of any sort between capital and labor is false and treacherous to the cause of labor, all arbitration and compromise and agreement and contract are futile, all sense of honor as between foes is antiquated.

"To strike and leave the machines of the factory idle, it declares, is an unnecessary piece of weakness. Rather let the workman keep at the machine, but let him learn from competent teachers who will be provided how to disable and break the machine even while he seems to be using it.

"Let him pretend that he is caring for the interests of his employer, but let him meanwhile be studying at every point how he may treacherously defeat those interests, and yet do it so as not to be detected himself.

"The French word for this infernal sort of warfare is 'sabotage,' and the legitimacy of it is frankly defended in the writings of this school. A workman may sign a contract, but then he need not try to keep it any more than he would keep a promise made to a maniac in order to save himself from being murdered.

PROPAGANDA OF ORGANIZERS.

"The terror of syndicalism, which is to confront us more and more perilously as the days go by, can be seen from such suggestions as these which are taken from the published documents of the movement.

"A good way to incapacitate machinery is to put emery powder into the bearings. The postal clerk can show his loyalty to the cause by sending mail to the wrong address; the furniture packer by damaging the varnish on the chair or table before he packs it in the crate; the railroad man by cutting signal wires and precipitating wrecks with great loss of life, and thus arouse public opinion against the railroad corporations.

"Perhaps most fiendish of all is the exhortation for the baker to put ground glass into the dough when he is baking bread in his employer's shop.

"This teaching, points out Prof. John Graham Brooks, is now available in a score of languages. It especially appeals to the uneducated and the most excitable worker. There are organizers who can speak in seven tongues, and who for wages are going from place to place where strikes are on and instructing the malcontents a more deadly way than that of the open strike to bring their opponents to terms.

"If you think that syndicalism and sabotage are unknown yet in this country, let me complete this sinister lesson in 'what the other half think' by telling you that the name under which this philosophy is being propagated among American workmen is the 'I.W.W.,' or the 'Industrial Workers of the World.' This organization was in control of the recent strike at Lawrence, Mass. Whenever you read, moreover, as I did in two columns of a single newspaper on the morning of Thursday, May 2, that in two places as far apart as Seattle and New York the Stars and Stripes had been torn down or stamped upon or spit upon the day before, the chances are that the violent souls who thus file their protest against modern society were representatives of this revolutionary group.

RELIGION CAN STEM TIDE.

"This is not pleasant information, this news concerning movements in the present age which are portentous and threatening. But we are all earnest searchers after the truth, and we are none of us afraid to face facts as they are.

"Personally, I remain an optimist even though I have felt the grip of these radical tendencies upon large numbers of society, and even though I foresee years of uncertainty stretching in front of us. And the ground of my optimism is simply and solely my faith in the enduring power of the Puritan panacea, religion. I believe in that spirit of God of whom Nathaniel Martin wrote.

"Those who are preaching the new family and the new industrial democracy are not being held by religion to any conspicuous extent; but society is still being held by it, and far more than sometimes we realize. If religion will but assert itself in wise and brotherly ways, if it but adapt itself fearlessly to the needs of the times, it will stem the anarchistic tide and keep unbroken in the ranks of truth so many sturdy soldiers that the armies of negation can be defeated.

"It is our duty then to live as the Puritan lived, on the higher levels, where the air blows straight from God and where lights shine which the Master has set aburning. And from this dwelling on the heights, in deep fellowship with the infinite, will come to us an equipment enabling us, without fear and without reproach, to enter the dark battlefields of the world and there win victories for Christ and His truth."

LIMITS OF LABOR UNION.

Principles That Cannot Be Safely Violated By a Minority of the Workers Without Injury.

[Century Magazine:] If the laboring men of the world chose to take the position that they would work no more there would of course be no way of compelling them to return to their tasks. They could pull down the industrial world in ruins, though in the wreck they themselves would be involved. Like Samson toppling over the pillars of the building, they would have to say: "Let me die with the Philistines." It would be one common disaster in which the labor unions would be destroyed with the rest of the world. But it is certain that neither they nor any other body of men possessing great power will ever desire to use it with the effect of committing suicide. Their strength they must always think of as a means of gaining feasible ends; so that, after all these admiring or shuddering exclaimations of the power of organized labor, we always come back to the question what it is feasible for trades unions to attain.

Now, the moment we begin to discuss the question so stated, we perceive at once that there are many sure and definite limits to the power of labor organizations. Their omnipotence is only theoretical and in seeming. In actual fact, they are thrown, like the rest of us, into a world of give-and-take. In it no man or association can think of getting whatever may be wanted. The possible always overrides the extreme of the desired. And there are things which labor unions, no matter how powerful they may be on paper, cannot obtain, however, vehemently they may desire them.

For example, in a Democracy they cannot break down the principle of the good of the greatest number. Take the claims of organized labor at their most inflated figure, and they are not able to show that the unions represent more than a small minority of the population. They represent only a minority even of workingmen. Estimates and statistics vary from year to year, with the condition of industry and the state of the labor market, but the most sanguine of unionists have never pretended that more than from 20 to 25 per cent. of the actual labor force of this country is "organized." The vast number of manual laborers and workers on the soil, together with the multitude of artisans in small shops in towns and villages remain outside.

So that an excessive demand by organized labor is really a demand that the majority of working men be made to shoulder the burdens for the minority. And if we also reckon in the millions who would have to help carry the loads and pay the bills imposed by the labor unions, we see that the latter are, in effect, seeking to overturn the right of the majority to rule. But it is simply inconceivable that a great and free Democracy would ever tolerate an exclusive privilege of that kind, amounting as it would to an oppressive tyranny. Say what hasty tongues may about the invincible might of labor unions, here is a limit beyond which they may not pass.

Nor is there any conceivable way in which workingmen, organized or not, can get out of a business more than they put into it—more, that is, than the portion of goods fairly falling to labor. No one maintains in its strict form the old "wages-fund" doctrine of the political economists, that before the process of manufacture begins there is a definite sum set aside out of which alone workingmen must be paid. That is perceived today to be an incomplete analysis of the actual process. But this admission does not alter the essential reasons why labor can get to more than its fair share. If it insists upon too high wages for its work the consuming public will rebel, and leave no work at all and no wages for that particular industry.

And there are inexorable limits in the returns which capital must have if it is to be invested at all and create a demand for labor. Let it freely be conceded that organized labor can cut its own throat if it is foolish enough and desperate enough to do so; but it has no power, and never can have, to take out of the great manufactures and producing industries of the land more dollars in wages than it puts into them in work.

CHINESE FINANCES.

National Debt Is About Six Hundred and Ninety-five Millions, Which Is Only a Trifle for China.

[Washington Star:] The outstanding debt of China consisted at the end of last year of about $695,000,000, made up of $530,453,000 of general loans and $160,545,000 railway loans. There was a further loan of $50,000,000 entered into by the four-power group in April, 1911, in connection with the currency reform scheme, but the outbreak of the revolution has prevented any part of it being issued so far. There are also a few private loans, such as one of $2,000,000 advanced by the Hong-kong and Shanghai Bank to the viceroy of Nanking in order to relieve the financial crisis which, it may be remembered, took place in 1910. Again, it is difficult to ascertain how much of the Boxer indemnity of 1910, which originally amounted to $335,000,000, is still outstanding. But generally the Chinese national debt may be taken at $695,000,000, which, of course, is a trifle for a country of the size and resources of China.

The customs revenue collected in 1910 amounted to $20,785,224, and the budget estimate of 1911 was more, $50,000,000. From this source alone it will be seen the interest on the debt, which averages less than 5 per cent. all around, could almost be met, apart from the proceeds of likin, land tax and salt and tea taxes, which were estimated to produce between them more than $100,000,000 for 1911. China has always been scrupulously honest in her business transactions with foreigners, and has consequently done credit to her financial sponsors. Given sound management in the difficult situation which has now to be met, there is no doubt that she will enjoy a yet higher reputation for commercial probity and an undreamed of era of prosperity. But she must not forsake the substance for the shadow, or she may find European capitalists less willing lenders and the way out of her difficulties less easy.

CHAPTER XI.

On a certain morning, about two months after the announcement of the loss of the Titan, Mr. Meyer sat at his desk in the Rooms, busily writing, when the old gentleman who had bewailed the death of his son in the Intelligence Office, tottered in and took a chair beside him.

"Good morning, Mr. Selfridge," he said, scarcely looking up; "I suppose you have come to see der insurance paid over. Der sixty days are up."

"Yes, yes, Mr. Meyer," said the old gentleman, wearily; "of course, as merely a stockholder, I can take no active part; but I am a member here, and naturally a little anxious. All I had in the world—even to my son and grandchild—was in the Titan."

"It is very sad, Mr. Selfridge; you have my deepest sympathy. I believe you are der largest holder of Titan stock—about one hundred thousand, is it not?"

"About that."

"I am der heaviest insurer; so, Mr. Selfridge, this battle will be largely between you and myself."

"Battle—is there to be any difficulty?" asked Mr. Selfridge, anxiously.

"Perhaps—I do not know. Der underwriters and outside companies have blaced matters in my hands and will not bay until I take der initiative. We must hear from one John Rowland, who, with a little child, was rescued from der berg and taken to Christiansand. He has been too sick to leave der ship which found him and is coming up der Thames in her this morning. I have a carriage at der dock and expect him at my office presently. There is where we will transact this little business—not here."

"A child—rescued?" queried the old gentleman; "dear me, it may be little Myra. She was not at Gibraltar with the others. I would not care—I would not care much about the money, if she was safe. But my son—my only son—is gone; and Mr. Meyer, I am a ruined man if this insurance is not paid."

"And I am a ruined man if it is," said Mr. Meyer, rising. "Will you come around to der office, Mr. Selfridge? I expect der attorney and Capt. Bryce are dere now." Mr. Selfridge arose and accompanied him to the street.

A rather meagerly furnished private office in Threadneedle street, partitioned off from a larger one bearing Mr. Meyer's name in the window, received the two men, one of whom, in the interests of good business, was soon to be impoverished. They had not waited a minute before Capt. Bryce and Mr. Austen were announced and ushered in. Sleek, well-fed and gentlemanly in manner, perfect types of the British naval officer, they bowed politely to Mr. Selfridge when Mr. Meyer introduced them as the captain and first officer of the Titan, and seated themselves. A few moments later brought a shrewd-looking person whom Mr. Meyer addressed as the attorney for the steamship company, but did not introduce; for such is the amenities of the English system of caste.

"Now, then, gentlemen," said Mr. Meyer, "I believe we can proceed to business up to a certain point—before we have further. Mr. Thompson, you have the affidavit of Capt. Bryce?"

"I have," said the attorney, producing a document which Mr. Meyer glanced at and handed back.

"And in this statement, Captain," he said, "you have sworn that der voyage was uneventful up to der moment of der wreck—that is," he added with an oily smile, as he noticed the nothing occurred to make der Titan less seaworthy or manageable?"

"That is what I swore to," said the captain with a little sigh.

"You are part owner, are you not, Capt. Bryce?"

"I own five shares of the company's stock."

"I have examined der charter and der company lists," said Mr. Meyer; "each boat of der company is, so far as assessments and dividends are concerned, a separate company. I find you are listed as owning two sixty-seconds of der Titan stock. This makes you, under der law, part owner of der Titan, and responsible as such."

"What do you mean, sir, by that word responsible?" said Capt. Bryce, quickly.

For answer, Mr. Meyer elevated his black eyebrows, assumed an attitude of listening, looked at his watch and went to the door, which, as he opened, admitted the sound of carriage wheels.

"I'm here," he called to his clerks, then faced the captain.

"What do I mean, Capt. Bryce?" he thundered. "I mean that you have concealed in your sworn statement all reference to der fact that you collided with and sunk der ship Royal Age on the night before the wreck of your own ship."

"Who says so—how do you know sir?" blustered the captain; "you have only that bulletin statement of the man Rowland — an irresponsible drunkard."

"The man was lifted aboard drunk at New York," broke in the first officer, "and remained in a condition of delirium tremens up to the shipwreck. We did not meet the Royal Age and are in no way responsible for her loss."

"Yes," added Capt. Bryce, "and a man in that condition is liable to see anything. He was on the night on lookout—ten, the boat close to him.

"And I am a ruined man if it is," said the Mayor rising. "Will you come around to der office, Mr. Selfridge? I expect der attorney and Capt. Bryce are there now." Mr. Selfridge then accompanied him to the

In answer, Mr. Meyer elevated his right eyebrow, assumed an attitude of listening, looked at his watch and then to the door, which, as he opened, showed the mouth of carriage drive.

"Come," he called to his clerks, and then faced the captain.

"What do I mean, Capt. Bryce?" he continued. "I mean that you have committed in your sworn statement all that you could do to conceal der fact that you collided with and sunk der ship Royal Arc the night before the wreck of your own ship."

"How—how do you know that?" stammered the captain; "you have not seen my sworn statement of the matter—an irresponsible—"

"The man you fished aboard drunk in New York," broke in the first officer, "and confined to a condition of coma up to the ship-wreck. You did not meet the Royal Arc and so in no way responsible—"

"Sir," added Capt. Bryce, "and a man of some standing to make so anything. We listened to his ravings on the night of the wreck. He was on lookout—on the bridge. Mr. Austen, the boatsw'n and myself were close to him."

Before Mr. Meyer's oily smile had indicated to the flustered captain that he had said too much, the door opened and admitted Rowland, pale and weak, with empty left sleeve, leaning on the arm of a bronze-bearded and manly-looking giant, who carried little Myra on the other shoulder, and who said, in the breezy tone of the quarter-deck:

"Well, I've brought him, half dead; but why couldn't you give me time to dock my ship? A mate can't do everything."

"And this is Capt. Berry of der Peerless," said Mr. Meyer, taking his hand. "It is all right, my friend; you will not lose. And this is Mr. Rowland—and this is der little child. Sit down, my friend. I congratulate you on your escape."

"Thank you," said Rowland weakly as he seated himself, "they cut my arm off at Christiansand, and I still live. That is my escape."

Capt. Bryce and Mr. Austen, pale and motionless, stared hard at this man, in whose emanciated face, refined by suffering to the almost spiritual softness of age, they hardly recognized the features of the troublesome sailor of the Titan. His clothing, though clean, was ragged and patched.

Mr. Selfridge had arisen and was also staring, not at Rowland, but at the child, who, seated in the lap of the big Capt. Barry, was looking around with wondering eyes. Her costume was unique. A dress of bagging stuff, put together—as were her canvas shoes and hat—with sail twine in sail-makers' stitches, three to the inch, covered skirts and underclothing made from old flannel shirts. It represented many an hour's work of the watch below, lovingly bestowed by the crew of the Peerless, for the crippled Rowland could not sew. Mr. Selfridge approached, scanned the pretty features closely and asked:

"What is her name?"

"Her first name is Myra," answered Rowland. "She remembers that; but I have not learned her last name, though I knew her mother years ago—before her marriage."

"Myra, Myra," repeated the old gentleman; "do you know me? Don't you know me?" He trembled visibly as he stooped and kissed her. The little forehead puckered and wrinkled as the child struggled with memory; then it cleared, and the whole face sweetened to a smile.

"Gwampa," she said.

"Oh, God, I thank thee," murmured Mr. Selfridge, taking her in his arms. "I have lost my son, but I have found his child—my grand-daughter."

"But sir," asked Rowland eagerly, "you—this child's grandfather? Your son is lost, you say. Was he on board the Titan? And the mother—was she saved, or is she, too—" he stopped unable to continue.

"The mother is safe—in New York; but the father, my son, has not yet been heard from," said the old man mournfully.

Rowland's head sank and he hid his face for a moment in his arm, on the table at which he sat. It had been a face as old, and worn, and weary as that of the white-haired man confronting him. On it, when it raised—flushed, bright-eyed and smiling—was the glory of youth.

"I trust, sir," he said, "that you will telegraph her. I am penniless at present, and, besides do not know her name."

"Selfridge—which, of course, is my own name. Mrs. Colonel, or Mrs. George Selfridge. Our New York address is well known. But I shall cable her at once, and, believe me, sir, although I can understand that our debt to you cannot be named in terms of money, you need not be penniless long. You are evidently a capable man, and I have wealth and influence."

Rowland merely bowed, slightly, but Mr. Meyer muttered to himself: "Wealth and influence. Perhaps, not." "Now, gentlemen," he added in a louder tone, "to pizness. Mr. Rowland, will you tell us about der running down of der Royal Age?"

"Was it the Royal Age?" asked Rowland. "I sailed in her one voyage. Yes, certainly."

Mr. Selfridge, more interested in Myra than in the coming account, carried her over to a chair in the corner and sat down, where he fondled and talked to her after the manner of grandfathers the world over, and Rowland, first looking steadily into the faces of the two men he had come to expose, and whose presence he had thus far ignored, told, while they held their teeth tight together and often buried their finger-nails in their palms, the terrible story of the cutting in half of the ship on the first night out from New York, finishing with the attempted bribery and his refusal.

"Vell, gentlemen, what do you think of that?" asked Mr. Meyer, looking around.

"A lie, from beginning to end," stormed Capt. Bryce.

Rowland rose to his feet, but was pressed back by the big man who had accompanied him—who then faced Capt. Bryce and said, quietly:

"I saw a Polar bear that this man killed in open fight. I saw his arm afterward, and, while nursing him away from death, I heard no whines or complaints. He can fight his own battles when well, and when sick I'll do it for him. If you insult him again in my presence I'll knock your teeth down your throat."

CHAPTER XII.

There was a moment's silence while the two captains eyed one another, broken by the attorney, who said:

"Whether this story is true or false it certainly has no bearing on the validity of the policy. If this happened, it was after the policy attached and before the wreck of the Titan."

"But der concealment—der concealment," shouted Mr. Meyer excitedly. "Has no bearing either. If he concealed anything it was done after the wreck, and after your liability was confirmed. It was not even barratry. You must pay this insurance."

"I will not pay it. I will not. I will fight you in der courts." Mr. Meyer stamped up and down the floor in his excitement, then stopped with a triumphant smile, and shook his finger into the face of the attorney.

"And even if der concealment will not vitiate der policy, der fact that he had a drunken man on look-out when der Titan struck der iceberg will be enough. Go ahead and sue. I will not pay. He was part owner."

"You have no witnesses to that admission," said the attorney. Mr. Meyer looked around the group and the smile left his face.

"Capt. Bryce was mistaken," said Mr. Austen. "This man was drunk at New York like others of the crew. But he was sober and competent when on look-out. I discussed theories of navigation with him during his trick on the bridge that night and he spoke intelligently."

"But you yourself said, not ten minutes ago, that this man was in a state of delirium tremens up to der collision," said Mr. Meyer.

"What I said and what I will admit under oath are two different things," said the officer, desperately. "I may have said anything under the excitement of the moment—when we were accused of such an infamous crime. I say now that John Rowland, whatever may have been his condition on the preceding night, was a sober and competent look-out at the time of the wreck of the Titan."

"Thank you," said Rowland, dryly, to the first officer; then, looking into the appealing face of Mr. Meyer, he said:

"I do not think it will be necessary to brand me before the world as an inebriate in order to punish the company and these men. Barratry, as I understand it, is the unlawful act of a captain or crew at sea, causing damage or loss; and it only applies when the parties are purely employees. Did I understand rightly — that Capt. Bryce was part owner of the Titan?"

"Yes," said Mr. Meyer. "He owns stock, and we insure against barratry; but this man, as part owner, could not fall back on it."

"And an unlawful act," went on Rowland, "perpetrated by a captain who is part owner, which might cause shipwreck, and, during the perpetration of which shipwreck really occurs, will be sufficient to void the policy."

"Certainly," said Mr. Meyer, eagerly; "you were drunk on der look-out—you were raving drunk, as he said himself. You will swear to this, will you not, my friend? It is bad faith with der underwriters. It annuls der insurance. You admit this, Mr. Thompson, do you not?"

"That is law," said the attorney, coldly.

"Was Mr. Austen a part owner, also?" asked Rowland, ignoring Mr. Meyer's view of the case.

"One share, is it not, Mr. Austen?" asked Mr. Meyer, while he rubbed his hands and smiled. Mr. Austen made no sign of denial and Rowland continued:

"Then, for drugging a sailor into a stupor, and having him on look-out out of his turn while in that condition, and at the moment when the Titan struck the iceberg, Capt. Bryce and Mr. Austen have, as part owners, committed an act which nullifies the insurance on that ship."

"You infernal, lying scoundrel," roared Capt. Bryce. He strode toward Rowland with threatening face. Halfway, he was stopped by the impact of a huge brown fist which sent him reeling, and staggering across the room toward Mr. Selfridge and the child, over whom he floundered to the floor—a disheveled heap—while big Capt. Barry examined teeth marks on his knuckles, and everyone else sprang to their feet.

"I told you to look out," said Capt. Barry. "Treat my friend respectfully." He glared steadily at the first officer, as though inviting him to duplicate the offense; but that gentleman backed away from him and assisted the dazed Capt. Bryce to a chair, where he felt of his loosened teeth, spat blood upon Mr. Mayer's floor, and gradually awakened to a realization of the fact that he had been knocked down—and by an American.

Little Myra, unhurt but badly frightened, began to cry and call for Rowland in her own way, to the wonder, and somewhat to the scandal, of the gentle old man who was endeavoring to soothe her.

"Dammy," she cried, as she struggled to go to him; "I want Dammy—Dammy—D-a-amay."

"Oh, what a pad little girl," said the ocular Mr. Meyer, looking down on her; "where did you learn such language?"

"It is my nick-name," said Rowland, smiling in spite of himself; "she has coined the word," he explained to the agitated Mr. Selfridge, who had not yet comprehended what had happened; "and I have not yet been able to persuade her to drop it—and I could not be harsh with her. Let me take her, sir." He seated himself, with the child, who nestled up to him contentedly and soon was tranquil.

"Now, my friend," said Mr. Meyer, "you must tell us about this drugging." Then, while Capt. Bryce, under the memory of the blow he had received, nursed himself into an insane fury, and Mr. Austen, with his hand resting lightly on the captain's shoulder ready to restrain him, listened to the story, and the attorney drew up a chair and took notes of the story, and Mr. Selfridge drew his chair close to Myra and paid no attention to the story at all, Rowland recited the events prior to and succeeding the shipwreck. Beginning with the finding of the whisky in his pocket, he told of his being called to the starboard bridge look-out in place of the rightful incumbent; of the sudden and strange interest Mr. Austen displayed as to his knowledge of navigation; of the pain in his stomach, the frightful shapes he had seen on the deck beneath and the sensations of his dream — leaving out only the part which bore on the woman he loved; he told of the sleep-walking child which awakened him, of the crash of ice and instant wreck, and the fixed condition of his eyes which prevented their focusing only at a certain distance, finishing his story—to explain his empty sleeve—with a graphic account of the fight with the bear.

"And I have studied it all out," he said in conclusion; "I was drugged—I believe, with hasheesh, which makes a man see strange things—and

200,000 FAMILIES

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA HOME BUILDERS

Our railroads are preparing for an influx of two hundred thousand families in the near future.

Their calculations are based on definite figures from their ticket agents all over the country

It will be the greatest home-seeking movement Southern California has ever known.

We are preparing for it by putting every dollar we can spare into real estate of a most valuable character.

Vacant property for subdivision in Los Angeles is being snapped up by buyers from all over the United States and Canada.

Our purchases will show splendid profits even without building upon them.

Built up with the class of homes we are erecting we expect to make a record for dividends.

There will be millions of dollars of profits for the home-building industry.

Now is the time, and this is the company in which to get a holding.

It costs little to begin, and the habit of investing in our shares is bound to grow with you as the company grows, and your profits come in.

You can buy today at 22½ cents a share. $1.25 a month pays for each hundred shares.

Figure how much you can put by comfortably each month, or what you care to invest, and come in with us.

We want every live, active, thinking, thrifty man to become a shareholder.

It is not big money we want, but a big number of men who by their influence will be of help to the company.

We have refused big sums from many men because several thousand shareholders, suggesting to their friends that they buy homes and ranches from us, means more than having a dozen men owning control.

No man or set of men can own control of this company. It actually belongs to the majority of the stockholders, and its successes are their successes.

In three months sixteen hundred investors have joined us, subscribing more than a quarter of a million dollars.

We have only just begun. Inside of another three months we intend to have a half a million dollars subscribed and three thousand shareholders.

We figure our shares will be selling before the year is out at from 30 cents to 40 cents per share.

Buy now, while it is easy and the price is low.

The Nimble Nickle Better Than the Slow Quarter

—activity is life—"Home Builders" a live one

[98]

FROM $1250 paid-in capital, without a surplus in February, 1908, to about a million and a third capital, with a surplus of almost a half a million, is going some.

This truly is the Los Angeles spirit, "Home Builders" is a factor in the real upbuilding of this wonder city. Not in expanding its size by making vacant lots by the wholesale, but by wholesale building houses on the lots already here.

It is this building homes in all parts—the best parts—of the city for people who hold these unimproved, unproductive sites, and building homes only after they are sold on contract, that "Home Builders" has grown to such substantial proportions.

Its record for building first-class structures—never slighting a single stick or corner—that makes its services as architect, builder and financier for the scores and scores of owners sought, and why it makes good profit for good service.

On June 1st the price of shares will be advanced $5.00 on each hundred shares and if you are considering the purchase of shares you should close now, before this advance occurs.

Shares Will Advance June First—Buy Now

[99]

TRULY, "Home Builders" nickels have been nimble. For every $100 invested for the fifty-one months of its activities, the stockholder has received more than $60 back in cash dividends and each $100 worth of shares have a market value today of $260.00. Had he reinvested his dividends his original $100 investment would today have a market value of $260.

This growth has been built up and strengthened month by month until now, with resources of about a million and a third, the future is assured.

The greatly increased facilities of the enterprise, the character of its securities and the reputation established, there is no reason why the same business methods will not multiply many times its present total resources and surplus and keep up the same generous profit distributions.

Dividends Every 3 Months

[100]

NO ONE ever lost a cent on "Home Builders" stocks or securities. The reputation of the enterprise is assurance that this record will be maintained.

The "General Agency" was incorporated and its written guaranty inaugurated to supply facilities for the conversion of your shares into cash through resale. It goes further by assuring at least 8 per cent. earnings on every dollar of your principal while so invested, and it also supplies loan privileges whereby you can borrow on your shares without selling them, should you need quick money.

MINING REVIVAL STRIKES NEVADA

Goldfield and Tonopah Are Scenes of Activity.

Wingfield, Kearns and Smith Acquire Atlanta.

Rawhide and Diamondfield to Reorganize.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

GOLDFIELD, May 17.—The past week has witnessed some important changes in the mining history of Nevada, and the industry never looked better than at present. The Goldfield and Tonopah camps are scenes of activity and steady development, the weekly payrolls are large and regular and some big new undertakings are under way.

The Consolidated Mines Company is, as usual, securing a net extraction of around $500,000 a month, and the properties of the great silver camp of Tonopah are shipping over $200,000 worth of bullion each week. The last week's record of shipments follows: Tonopah Mining Company, 3350 tons; Belmont Company, 1550 tons; Montana-Tonopah, 1136 tons; Tonopah Extension, 1015 tons; West End, 775 tons; MacNamara, 485 tons; total, 7184 tons of an estimated value of $304,800.

One of the important events of the present week affecting the Goldfield camp was the change in the organization of the Atlanta Mines Company. Henry and Arthur Weber have transferred to the Weir syndicate the control of the property. The syndicate includes George Wingfield, former Senator Thomas Kearns of Utah and "Borax" Smith of Oakland. The postponed reorganization meeting was held at Phoenix, Ariz. The stockholders voted to deliver to the Weir syndicate 1,850,000 shares of stock for the payment of $100,000 cash. The capitalization has been increased to $5,000,000.

It is understood that the future development of the Atlanta property will be prosecuted from the 1400-foot level of the Grizzly Bear shaft of the consolidated by means of a long crosscut to the south. To reach the Atlanta line from the Grizzly Bear shaft it will be necessary to drive about 600 feet. It is confidently believed that this crosscut will result in penetrating the extension of the Clermont ore bodies.

MERGER MINES ACTIVITY.

Next in interest is the work being prosecuted by the Goldfield Merger controlled by J. Ross Clark and associates of Los Angeles. The new 80-foot steel head-frame of the Merger Company has been erected and is now the most conspicuous object in the central western part of the Goldfield district. The new hoisting engine of 300 horse power, of the intermittent type, has arrived on the ground and is being installed. The deep shaft, 7x18 feet, is down 1000 feet, and a station of large dimensions will be prepared at this depth in order to install a station pump to still further facilitate the sinking of the shaft from this depth. Sinking has been going forward at the rate of 140 feet monthly, and with the new and larger plant, including the most powerful hoisting engine now in use in Nevada, progress will be even more rapid. The management has not planned to do any lateral work until a depth of 1500 feet is reached, unless ore exposures of importance should be encountered before that depth is attained. The shaft will be continued without interruption to a depth of 2000 feet, and the hoisting plant has a capacity for a depth of 2500 feet.

DIAMOND FIELD CONTINUES.

Still another re-organization proposition of importance in the past few days is the Diamond Field Merger Mining Company composed of Goldfield and Boston men of means. Harry A. Lind of Goldfield is president and manager; J. W. Pierce of Goldfield is vice-president; Charles A. Goodwin of Boston is secretary and treasurer, and additional directors are Paul Binnel of Goldfield and J. M. Lynch of Boston.

The new company is at present operating a two years' cumulative time lease upon all the productive workings of the Daisy mine, which was originally promoted and operated by Frank E. Horton.

According to the terms of the lease, the new company is to receive an extension of six months up to a total of four years' time, for every additional 100 feet sunk in the main shaft, known as No. 2, which has at present a depth of 540 feet.

The Daisy workings also include another shaft known as No. 1, which is 210 feet deep, and which represents an expenditure of $100,000 or more. In addition to its Daisy lease, the Diamondfield Merger Company controls forty acres of ground side-lining the Vernal on the east, the Bulldog on the north and lying in close proximity to the Goldfield Belmont and Diamondfield Black Butte properties, and so located as to cover the entire apparent northerly extension of the Goldfield Belmont lease. The latter company is mining and shipping high grade ore, and its other neighbors are giving good accounts of themselves.

RAWHIDE TO COME BACK.

Of particular interest throughout the mining fraternity is the announcement that the Rawhide Coalition Mines Company, which fell into disrepute through the manipulations of George Graham Rice, has been reorganized under the name of the Nevada New Mines Company. E. V. King is president and general manager of the new company, and he has sent out notices that the concern is heavily in debt and that five shares of the old company will be accepted for one share of the new company. It is the design to begin operations at once. The company's estate consists of 200 acres of ground, a cyanide plant, a ten-stamp mill and other equipment worth approximately $100,000. M. Sheeline, a banker of Reno, is treasurer of the new organization.

An official announcement was made the other day that the Giroux Consolidated has made an arrangement with the Nevada Consolidated of the Ely district to treat the Butte and Ely low-grade porphyry ores. This arrangement, it is understood, is entirely satisfactory to the minority stockholders of the Butte and Ely, who have been restive for a long time because of the policy of inaction that heretofore characterized the conduct of the company.

A new gold strike that is of interest to Nevada miners was made not long ago in Brunswick Canyon, not far from Carson City. Mining men who have visited the district in the last few days brought back flattering accounts of the new Eldorado.

The proof of the pudding is in the eating. There is no doubt in the mind of any unprejudiced person anywhere that there is a mining revival of no mean proportions now on in the old State of Nevada.

Hayden Makes First Run.

PHOENIX (Ariz.) May 17.—Last Monday was fired up the first of the reverberatory furnaces of the American Smelting and Refining Company at Hayden and the first run of bullion now is due. A couple of roasters are in operation and the initial work of the great plant is successfully under way. The only work that will be done at the plant for months to come will be the handling of concentrates from the Hayden mill of the Ray Consolidated Copper Company. Nearly all the steel work of the smelter buildings is completed and most of the steel erectors are leaving for Clifton, where they are to be employed in the building of a new smelter of the Arizona Copper Company.

There is a prospect for the construction of a standard-gauge railroad to branch from the Arizona Eastern near Winkelman and to run about thirty miles southward into the Mammoth district, particularly for the benefit of the Copper Creek Mining Company, though the line would tap a district rich in copper, with a score of large operating companies. R. Roy Sibley, president of the Copper Creek Mining Company is now in Europe securing funds for the new enterprise. The transportation question in the Mammoth district is being handled to some extent by the Gundaker Mines Company, which is handling its freight from Winkelman by means of large automobile trucks.

Consideration of the question of resuming operations on the Clara Consolidated property at Swansea is before a committee of stockholders including C. Clerc, of Paris, W. Schutte of Amsterdam, Holland, Carrol Allen, W. Klapetcky, Rev. Alfred Quetu, W. P. Taylor, treasurer, and E. D. Elson, secretary, of Los Angeles. The foreign visitors represent heavy financial interests, already deeply interested in the Clara.

Smelter Runs By Oil.

TUCSON (Ariz.) May 17.—Last Sunday 280 Tucson excursionists visited the works of the Pioneer Smelting Company on the Twin Buttes line south of this city. The furnaces and motive power use oil as fuel and the process is said to be both satisfactory and economical. About 200 men are employed. Most of the ore is brought by automobile trucks from the Plumed Knight mine, though a part also is coming from the well-known Twin Buttes mine.

A ten-stamp mill, with concentrating equipment and cyanide tanks, is being moved from a site near Lordsburg to the property of the Twin Peaks Company below Clifton, where a large amount of rich ore has been blocked out. The mine lies about nine miles from York station on the Arizona & New Mexico railroad.

Without regard to civic troubles, the Cananea Consolidated Copper Company last month produced 6,000,000 pounds of copper.

New Manager for the Queen.

BISBEE (Ariz.) May 17.—Capt. Joseph Hodgson of Ishpeming, Mich., has been appointed superintendent of the mining department of the Copper Queen Company, succeeding Parker Woodman, who for many years has held the position. The new superintendent was in Bisbee a short time ago, familiarizing himself with the local situation. He has been actively engaged in mining for the past twenty-seven years and latterly has been handling important properties in the Lake Superior district.

Within one day lately at the Sacramento shaft of the Copper Queen Company was hoisted 2087 tons of ore, a record for the shaft and for the district.

It is understood that the Copper Queen is contemplating the sinking of still another great working shaft, at a point where the ore body will hardly be tapped at less than 1200 feet of depth.

While the ore production of the Copper Queen remains constant, the Copper Queen now has more men on its pay roll than ever before in its history.

On the 1300 level of the Calumet & Arizona ore is being taken in development work averaging about 20 per cent. copper, from a new district wherein the size of the ore body has not yet been determined. An immense amount of material is arriving at Douglas for the company's new smelter, upon which work is to be driven as rapidly as possible.

Possibly due to semi-monthly payday legislation now being considered in the State legislature the Calumet & Arizona Company now is making Saturday advances of wages to its employees.

Angelenos Reopen Petticoat.

A. T. Copley and associates of Los Angeles have resumed operations at the Petticoat mine, Railroad Flat district, after two years' idleness. The property has claimed considerable attention in past years, and good bodies of quartz have been demonstrated. The new owners have made arrangements for deep mining and the sinking of the Afterthought and Kennedy shafts to depth will be vigorously conducted. The character of the veins in the upper workings indicates a persistent ore body.

The property lies a few miles from Angels' Camp, and has lain idle owing to financial troubles. The Angelenos have adjusted all difficulties, settled indebtedness, and placed everything in shape for a period of active work. The mine lies on the mother lode gold zone, and the veins are large with fair free-milling gold values. A modern plant will probably be erected if developments come up to expectations. J. B. King is in charge of operations.

Acquire Mariposa Mine.

The noted Mt. Gaines gold mine near Hornitos, Mariposa county, is to be actively worked in the near future, according to the owner, A. R. Mains, of Los Angeles. Mains acquired the famous old producer at a Sheriff's sale last summer, and will come into full title of the property in June. A company of Angelenos will be organized to operate the property on a scale merited by its excellent condition. Lack of finances forced the former owners to cease activities as depth was gained, although it is declared indications were distinctly favorable as the lower levels were developed. It is understood a sufficient fund has been already pledged by residents of Los Angeles to carry out the ambitious plans of Mains and associates

TRINITY READY FOR HEAVY RUN.

Additional Equipment Will Increase Profits.

New Territory of Mine Is Being Developed.

Output Exceeds Forty-stamp Mill Capacity.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

REDDING (Cal.) May 16.—The Trinity Gold Mining and Reduction Company operating the Headlight mine at Carrville, is finishing improvements to its plant and adding additional equipment to increase the earning capacity. Changes suggested by actual experience have been perfected, and the management expects the present year to prove exceptionally satisfactory. Attention is being devoted to prospecting and development in new territory outside the main low-grade deposit, and results are proving encouraging. The mill is treating ore averaging around $5 a ton in gold and silver, and extracting an excellent value. With the advent of the dry season efforts will be largely concentrated to the mining of ore by the glory hole method, resulting in a further reduction in mine costs.

Last year the company derived a gross profit of $207,831 from its operations, with expenses totalling $141,566, leaving a net income of $66,265; $25,068 was expended for additional machinery, improvements to the electric power plant, water system, fire devices, refining works and other departments. The indebtedness of the corporation was reduced by $10,930, and the value of assets increased by $42,669. Various causes prevented the earning of a larger sum, but the present year is expected to record a marked increase in earning power, and large augmentations of the ore reserves.

Late reports from the property are to the effect that approximately 400,000 tons of ore are exposed, with developments keeping the reserve well ahead of the mill runs. The plant embraces forty stamps, with a capacity of 250 tons a day. The cyanide process figures largely in the plan of treatment. The company is composed principally of Los Angeles people.

Famous Standard Profits.

After thirty-three years of constant production, the grand old Standard mine at Bodie is still able to pay profits. With the advent of 1911 it was feared the company would face a loss for the year, but instead a dividend of $17,829 was paid, bringing the total profits disbursed by the mine since its discovery, to $5,229,809. During its thirty years of active life the Standard group has produced a total of $16,135,993, or as much as the whole State of California has produced in some years. From time to time it has been reported the property was practically worked out, but fresh discoveries always prolonged its life.

In the recent annual report, President Albert Fries advises unwatering the lower levels and searching for the

A "Home Beach" At Last!

Where the Mountains Kiss the Sea

Every city is entitled to one beach resort, that is not frequented by the masses. ARCH BEACH is the "HOME Beach" of Los Angeles.

Hmoes are being built all over Arch Beach. There's real activity there. They're pretty homes, too,—the kind Happiness lives in.

One visit will convince you that ARCH BEACH is

The Beach Fit for Your Home

Nowhere the Ocean so blue. Nowhere the Rocks so picturesque. Nowhere has Nature done more. The authorities have recognized the worth of Arch Beach and have built one of the most perfect county roads right through our property.

Arch Beach rises abruptly from the Ocean with a snow-white sandy bathing beach and rocky coves at the foot of the bluff. Then there's a gently rising mesa with perfect building lots back of which the ground begins to slope to beautiful elevation.

Lots such as we are selling here, command a price of from $1500 to $2000 at such beaches as Venice, Santa Monica, Ocean Park. Over 2600 lots have been sold in Arch Beach during the past year. Get our list of lot-owners and ask their opinion of this beauty spot. Just think—this offer means just what we say. Think—then investigate.

Ocean View Lots $100 and $150

On Easy Terms to Suit You

The prices are low, but the price must be the least inducement. Once you see Arch Beach, you would not hesitate to buy a lot for a summer home, even though we asked twice the present figures. (Only a limited number of lots will be sold at this Season-opening price.)

AS AN INVESTMENT-OPPORTUNITY we know of nothing to compare with Arch Beach. Every lot-buyer of last season could now sell out at a profit. Their own appreciation of the land however is inducing them to build homes here.

EARLY INVESTIGATION NECESSARY, for—always exactly true to our promise — these prices will soon be advanced. Call at our office and arrange for your trip out, or at least ask for illustrated pamphlet with sworn facts and figures.

The office and headquarters are under the charge of a commissioner, George D. Anthony, who has general management of the affairs of the societies under direction of the boards of governors. All applications for admission must be accompanied by references which are looked up by the commissioner before the applications are acted on by the board of governors.

The commissioner keeps informed in regard to work in prospect so that workmen may have some knowledge in advance as to probabilities of employment, and he frequently acts as a buffer between the workmen and the superintendent or foreman. The commissioner is assisted by an outside man or "scout," who keeps the run of the jobs, sees that men reach the places where they are sent, searches for men at their homes to get them quickly to places where they are needed, etc.

"Our open-shop policy has been constantly growing in favor, and men coming to us under it usually end by joining with us," says Mr. Sayward.

"We are steadily gaining in membership, and have proved beyond question that the self-respecting and industrious workman will gladly ally himself with us as soon as he feels confident that work is awaiting him with employers who are interested in him, and who will do as well or better for him than an ordinary trade union can. We do no active proselyting, and always insist that men shall not make application for admission without studying our bylaws and other literature and becoming convinced that our kind of a trade union is an improvement over the old kind. We have learned by experience that there are plenty of workmen who recognize the difference between an organization conducted openly, fairly and squarely, in which the rights of workmen and of employers are properly considered, and an organization whose meetings are secret and whose measures and methods are those of force.

"We find that men work in a very different spirit under our method than under the domination of dictatorial labor leaders, and they often say it is a relief to be free from the control of the unions to which they formerly belonged. This is not strange, for there never has been any other despotism so absolute as trade-unionism as it is now carried on.

"Leaders in other labor organizations have said that our workmen are inferior, but they turn right around and offer our men free cards if they will come into their unions. Some of the best buildings erected in the last four years have been built altogether by our men. Among them are those of the National Shawmut Bank and the First National Bank. Moreover, we actually control the situation in Boston in the masonry and carpentry trades, and the regular labor organizations are following our lead."

CONSTITUTION AND BYLAWS.

The constitution of the societies provides that any individual, firm or corporation actively engaged in carrying on the business named anywhere in Massachusetts shall be eligible to membership in the class designated as masters; that a workman of the trades mentioned, provided he be not a member of any organization antagonistic to this body, shall be eligible to membership in the class designated as craftsmen; that workmen not fully qualified for admission as craftsmen may be entered as associate members upon application and approval by the board of governors; and that associate members shall have no voice or vote in the conduct of the association.

The by-laws say:

"Masters and craftsmen shall have full opportunity for expression of views on any and all questions, but on the question of a standard minimum wage craftsmen alone shall be entitled to vote. A three-quarter majority vote shall be necessary to fix said wage.

"It shall be understood as a fundamental principle of this association that workmen who are not fully capable of performing the work expected of craftsmen, and are, therefore, disqualified for membership, shall not be entitled to receive a wage greater than a sum 20 per cent. less than the standard minimum wage.

"On all questions relating to method of conduct of work, and on questions relating to apprentices, the masters shall alone be entitled to vote, and a three-quarter majority vote shall be necessary.

"On all questions of the number of hours that shall constitute a regular day's work, and on the wage for any time worked in addition thereto; and on questions of holidays, and on the wage for time worked on holidays, masters and craftsmen shall vote ratiedly, the group of masters voting being allowed as many votes as there may be craftsmen voting, each master being entitled to cast a pro-rata number of said votes. A two-thirds majority of the total vote shall be necessary to determine any such question.

"The board of governors, after the first election at time of organization, shall be elected at the annual meeting."

At the annual meeting wages and working conditions for the coming year are decided upon. The masons' society has decided for the present year on an eight-hour day; Saturday half holiday during June, July, August and September, with privilege for any man to work Saturday afternoon at the regular wage if he so desires and is available; overtime to be paid at the rate of time and one-half; holiday work to be paid double the regular wage; wages of craftsmen to be 60 cents per hour, and exceptionally competent and efficient men may expect a higher wage.

Associate members are not guaranteed more than 45 cents an hour, although masters may pay them more. Wages are paid weekly; not later than before quitting time on Saturday; cash payment on the spot on discharge or pay for time to reach the office, at least one hour.

The carpenters' conditions are similar, except that no work shall be done on Saturday afternoons in the summer excepting on emergency such work to be paid double time, and that craftsmen are to receive 50 cents an hour and associates a minimum of 40 cents an hour.

Should Admit It.

[Chicago Tribune:] Once upon a time an Irishman was walking through a lonely cemetery and stopped before an imposing looking monument, bearing the following inscription, "I Still Live."

"We find that men work in a very different spirit under our method than under the domination of dictatorial labor leaders, and they often say it is a relief to be free from the control of the unions to which they formerly belonged. This is not strange, for there never has been any other organization so absolute as trade-unionism as it is now carried on.

"Leaders in other labor organizations have said that our workmen are traitors, but they turn right around and offer our men free cards if they will come into their unions. Some of the best buildings erected in the last four years have been built altogether by our men. Among them are those of the National Shawmut Bank and the First National Bank. Moreover, we actually control the situation in Boston in the masonry and carpentry trades, and the regular labor organizations are following our lead."

CONSTITUTION AND BYLAWS.

The constitution of the societies provides that any individual, firm or corporation actively engaged in carrying on the business named anywhere in Massachusetts shall be eligible to membership in the class designated as masters; that a workman of the trades mentioned, provided he be not a member of any organization antagonistic to this body, shall be eligible to membership in the class designated as craftsmen; that workmen not fully qualified for admission as craftsmen may be enrolled as associate members upon application and approval by the board of governors; and that associate members shall have no voice or vote in the conduct of the association.

The by-laws say:

"Masters and craftsmen shall have full opportunity for expression of views on any and all questions, but on the question of a standard minimum wage craftsmen alone shall be entitled to vote. A three-quarter majority vote shall be necessary to fix said wage.

"It shall be understood as a fundamental principle of this association that workmen who are not fully capable of performing the work expected of craftsmen, and are, therefore, disqualified for membership, shall not be entitled to receive a wage greater than a sum 20 per cent. less than the standard minimum wage.

"On all questions relating to methods of conduct of work, and on questions relating to apprentices, the masters shall alone be entitled to vote, and a three-quarter majority vote shall be necessary.

"On all questions of the number of hours that shall constitute a regular day's work, and on the wage for any time worked in addition thereto; and on questions of holidays, and on the wage for time worked on holidays, masters and craftsmen shall vote jointly, the group of masters voting being allowed as many votes as there may be craftsmen voting, each master being entitled to cast a pro-rata number of said votes. A two-thirds majority of the total vote shall be necessary to determine any such question.

"The board of governors, after the first election at time of organization, shall be elected at the annual meeting."

At the annual meeting wages and working conditions for the coming year are decided upon. The masons' society has decided for the present year on an eight-hour day; Saturday half holiday during June, July, August and September, with privilege for any man to work Saturday afternoon at the regular wage if he so desires and is available; overtime to be paid at the rate of time and one-half; Sunday work to be paid double the regular wage; wages of craftsmen to be 80 cents per hour, and exceptionally competent and efficient men may expect a higher wage.

Association members are not guaranteed more than 44 cents an hour, although masters may pay them more. Wages are paid weekly; not later than before quitting time on Saturday; cash payment on the spot for overtime or pay for time to reach the office, at least one hour.

The carpenters' conditions are similar, except that no work shall be done on Saturday afternoons in the summer season, or on emergency such work to be paid double time, and that apprentices are to receive 30 cents an hour and journeymen a minimum of 45 cents an hour.

Members of Verdugo Homebuyers Club On the Site of the "Throne City"

Hundreds of Enthusiastic Homebuyers Will Share In Subdivision Profits

A VERDUGO TALK WITH CONSERVATIVE DOLLARS

Now Mr. Dollar:—

You know most of the fundamental principles governing investments. For instance you know that population always has and always will create land value. You know that an immense amount of money has been made by private syndicates and corporations handling subdivisions or additions because of the increase in value caused by population (the lot buyers.) And you know that even more money has been made when the property was so situated as to make it a strategic location for a "center spot" or townsite.

We have told you a whole lot about the magnificent glory of the Verdugo Heights townsite. It is at the junction point of three important residence valleys, and only ten or eleven miles from the center of Broadway. It is not an addition to some other tract or community, but is a townsite proper. It has a predestined location for a truly important commercial and social center. Verdugo, "The Throne City," is an absolute certainty.

I reckon we have shown you some pictures that gave you that longing for the foothills—the only green foothills and flowing brooks anywhere near to Los Angeles.

In plain cold type we have pictured the great sloping mesa, 1400 feet above the sea, looking out between the perpetually green foothills over Glendale and across Los Angeles and out over the shimmering blue ocean to Catalina Islands. And the mental picture in your head does the subject about as much justice as that pencil drawing your three-year-old recently made of a bungalow.

BUT—Mr. Dollar—

The Verdugo Heights plan lands you on velvet when you go into the deal. The reason of this is that you only deposit your money in escrow until the homeseekers and investors club of about 400 members is ready for operation. During that time it draws 6 per cent. interest.

You find everything just right to suit you and appealing to your practical judgment, but your investment does not pass at that hour. You simply place your investment in escrow with the First National Bank and then we continue the work of convincing the remainder of you that this is a central townsite—with valuable tributary territory surrounding it, and the most romantic and valuable residence region about this beautiful city.

But better still, Mr. Dollar—this plan brings the great economic forces of combined human agencies into the deal. The combination of hundreds of actual homemakers with you Mr. Dollar insures both of you the most abundant success.

There could be no slip up—because you and the homeseekers are organized one at a time. This is the greatest insurance against error or miscalculation that ever entered into the colonization or subdivision business. Several hundred folks must unite in their judgment that Verdugo is a natural "center spot" for homesite and community center.

NOW SERIOUSLY, we are not anxious for YOU Mr. Dollar—not yet.

YOU are not worth much except when joined with the great forces of actual human agencies—POPULATION.

We now have over a hundred members of the Verdugo Home Makers and Investors Club.

It might be well for you to find out why Lieutenant-Governor Wallace went up into this undeveloped region a mile or two behind this Verdugo Heights townsite and built an $80,000 residence.

It might be well for you to find out why Edwin T. Earl has made his country home up there.

And, also to inquire what attracted Bissell of the carpet sweeper folks to locate up tributary to this Verdugo townsite.

And, why former Senator Frank P. Flint acquired 1400 acres near-by to put in the greatest country club in the United States.

There are some local climatic and scenic and arboreal reasons for this action by these men. They have settled, for all time, the high character of the community.

If you have the inclination — combined with an hour and a half of your time—we have the automobile and as we glide along we can talk it over. Once you firmly grasp the plan, whereby you secure your homesite at a low wholesale figure and at the same time share in the tremendous profits arising from the building of Verdugo "The Throne City," you will appreciate this opportunity, Mr. Dollar.

Our folder explains frankly the plan and gives full details of the project.

WORLD'S GREATEST OIL WELL IS UNDER CONTROL.

Gusher of the Pearson Syndicate, One Hundred Miles Southeast of Tampico, After Flooding Country With Flow of 110,000 Barrels, Is Finally Held Down by Huge Valve.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

TAMPICO (Mex.) May 16.—An oil well that is capable of producing in one day a crude product valued at $55,000, which is more than the President of the United States formerly received as annual salary, is well worth being given a leading place in the list of the world's natural phenomena.

In the Potrero del Llano field, situated about 100 miles southeast of Tampico, is a well of the gusher type which is pronounced by oil experts to be the largest producer known in the world's history of that industry. It has demonstrated that it is not only capable of producing 110,000 barrels of oil for one day, but that it can keep up that performance for an interminable duration. At least it kept it up for three months without the slightest decrease of output and during the period it ran wild it flooded a big scope of country with the fluid.

It was tested, after being throttled down for several months to a flow of about 25,000 barrels daily, and the gauge showed that it still retained its original output of 110,000 barrels a day.

Based on a value of only 50 cents a barrel for the oil, the well is capable of producing a revenue of $50,000 daily, or $20,075,000 in one year.

CAPACITY ENORMOUS.

The proved capacity of the Potrero del Llano well is more than 40,000,000 barrels of oil per annum.

There is no theory connected with this statement. Practical oil men who witnessed the performances of the monster say that there is every reason to believe it will be able to keep up its 110,000-barrel daily production for a much longer period than one year. It ran uncontrolled for three months and of the more than 10,000,000 barrels of oil that it shot high into the air during that period only 2,000,000 barrels were saved. During that whole three months, day and night shifts of the most expert

STANDARD PLANS NEW PIPE ROUTE

Line Will Run from Pond to Lost Hills.

Aims to Give Oil Outlet in Two Directions.

Associated Makes Strike on Buena Vista Slope.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

BAKERSFIELD, May 17.—The Standard Oil Company is unloading materials at Wasco, and Pond, stations in the northern part of the county, for a pipe line from Pond to the Lost Hills oil field. The right of way for the line was secured some months ago and runs from Pond diagonally southwest to the county road across the swamp.

It will follow the grade across the swamp and land on the Standard's property in the southern part of the field. The distance is about twenty-five miles. The Standard's original pipe line from the Kern River field to Pt. Richmond strikes the Santa Fe right of way at Pond and one of the big pumping stations is located there. The Lost Hills line will cut into the main line there. At least a part of the new line, and possibly all of it, it is announced, will be ten-inch. The usual telephone line will be built along the route.

When the Standard's line is finished the Lost Hills field will have an outlet for its product in both directions—southwest and northeast. The Associated's line from Caneros station through Belridge to the Lost Hills has been in working order for months past, and the fact that these two big concerns have thought well enough of the permanency of the field to provide these expensive means of transportation has removed the last question in the popular mind that the Lost Hills is permanently on the oil map.

The Standard is fast developing a production of its own in the Lost Hills, and in addition is reported to have contracted for the production of the Universal over and above the amount that company is required under its prior contract to deliver to the Associated, which is 100,000 barrels a month.

PLANS THIRD PIPE LINE.

The Standard also is planning to lay a third pipe line from Midway to Kern River and from Kern River on north to Mendota. The old lines are eight-inch, but the new one will be of twelve-inch pipe, which will double the capacity of the system. The pipe lines from Mendota north are now capable of carrying about 50,000 barrels of oil a day, and the new line will bring the entire system up to that efficiency.

PROVES NEW SECTION.

The presence of oil in commercial quantities in section 13, 28-19, has been demonstrated by the Kern Petroleum's well on that section, which was finished as a twenty-five-barrel producer at 1832 feet.

The company, however, believes that a much greater yield will reward a second drilling, as the present well was greatly damaged by an unsuccessful attempt to shoot it with dynamite. The charge caved in the whole bottom part of the well, and instead of increasing the flow of oil diminished it. A second well is to be started soon.

A new strike of oil was made this week by the Associated on section 34, 31-23, on the south slope of the Buena Vista hills. The well started flowing at a rate of 700 barrels a day, but soon sanded up. The Union is drilling on the same section.

Dudley Brothers are getting about 1000 barrels of oil a day from their well No. 1 on section 5, 27-21, in the Lost Hills, and they are getting material on the ground for a new rig.

brought up on the bridge lookout where I could be watched and my actions listened to and recorded, for the sole purpose of discrediting my threatened testimony in regard to the collision of the night before. But I was only half drugged, as I spilled some of my tea at supper. In that tea, I am positive, was the hasheesh."

"You know all about it, don't you," snarled Capt. Bryce from his chair. "It was not hasheesh; 'twas an infusion of Indian hemp; you don't know—" Mr. Austen's hand closed over his mouth and he subsided.

"Self-convicted," said Rowland with a quiet laugh. "Hasheesh is made from Indian hemp."

"You hear this, gentlemen," exclaimed Mr. Meyer, springing to his feet and facing everybody in turn. He pounced on Capt. Barry. "You hear this confession, captain; you hear him say Indian hemp? I have a witness now, Mr. Thompson. Go right on with your suit. You hear him, Capt. Barry. You are disinterested. You are a witness. You hear?"

"Yes, I heard it—the murdering scoundrel," said the captain.

Mr. Meyer danced up and down in his joy, while the attorney, pocketing his notes, remarked to the disconsolate Capt. Bryce: "You are the poorest fool I know," and left the office.

Then Mr. Meyer calmed himself, and facing the two steamship officers said, slowly and impressively, while he poked his forefinger almost into their faces:

"England is a fine country, my friends—a fine country to leave sometimes. Dere is Canada, and the United States, and Australia, and South Africa—all fine countries, too fine countries to go to with new ideas. My friends, you will be built-ened and listed at Lloyds in less than half an hour, and you will never again sail under der English flag as officers. And, my friends, let me say, that in half an hour after you are bulletined, all Scotland Yard will be looking for you. But my door is not locked."

Silently they arose, pale, shamefaced and crushed, and went out the door, through the outer office and into the street.

CHAPTER XIII.

Mr. Selfridge had begun to take an interest in the proceedings. As the two men passed out he arose and said:

"Have you reached a settlement, Mr. Meyer? Will the insurance be paid?"

"No," roared the underwriter in the ear of the puzzled old gentleman; while he slapped him vigorously on the back; "it will not be paid. You see I must have been ruined, Mr. Selfridge, and it has settled on you. I do not pay der 'Titan's' insurance, nor will der other insurers. On the contrary, as der collision clause in der policy is void with der rest, der company must reimburse me for der insurance which I must pay der 'Royal Age' owners—that is, as our good friend here, Mr. Rowland, who was on der lookout at the time, will swear that her lights were out."

"Not at all," said Rowland; "her lights were burning—look to the old woman," he exclaimed. "Look after him. Catch him."

Mr. Selfridge was stumbling toward a chair. He grasped it, loosened his hold, and before any one could reach him, fell to the floor, where he lay, with ashen lips and staring eyes, gasping convulsively.

"Heart failure," said Rowland, as he knelt by his side. "Send for a doctor."

"Send for a doctor," repeated Mr. Meyer through the door to his clerks; "send for a carriage, quick. I don't want him to die in der office." Capt. Barry lifted the helpless figure to a couch, and they watched. As the convulsions grew easier, the breath shorter and the lips from gray to blue. Before a doctor or carriage had come, he had passed away.

"Sudden emotion of some kind," said the doctor when he did arrive. "Heart emotion, too. Hear bad news?"

"Bad and good," answered the underwriter. "Good, in learning that my dear little girl was his grandson—bad, in learning that he was a ruined man. He was der heavy stockholder in der 'Titan.' One hundred thousand pounds, he owned. All of stock, all of which this poor, little child will not get." Mr. Meyer looked sorrowful, as he patted the child on the head.

Capt. Barry beckoned to Rowland, who, slightly flushed, was standing still figure on the couch and looking in the face of Mr. Meyer, on whose countenance, jubilation and simulated sorrow could be seen in turn.

"Stock could be seen in turn," he said, as he turned to the doctor leave the room. "Is there, Mr. Meyer," he added to the underwriter, "that Mr. Selridge owned 'Titan' stock, and would have been ruined, had he lived, by the loss of the insurance money?"

"Yes, he would have been a poor man. He had invested his last farthing—one hundred thousand pounds. He had left any more it would have owned to make good his share of der company must pay for der 'Royal Age,' which I also in-

"Was there a collision clause in the 'Royal Age's' policy?"

"Yes, it was."

"Then you took the risk, knowing that it was to run the Northern Belle at full speed through fog and ice—so did others."

"Mr. Meyer, it remains for me to tell you that the insurance on the 'Titan' will be paid, as well as all liabilities included in and specified in the collision clause in the 'Royal Age.' In short, I, the one man who can prevent it, refuse to testify."

"What-a-t?"

Mr. Meyer grasped the back of a chair and leaning over it stared at Rowland.

"You will not testify? What you mean?"

"I said; and I do not feel bound to give you my reasons, however."

"My good friend," said the underwriter, advancing with out-stretched hand to Rowland, who backed away. Then Myra by the hand moved toward the door. Mr. Meyer sprang before them, locked it and removed the key.

"Mein Gott," he shouted, lapsing in his excitement into the pronounced dialect of his race; "I do to you, hey? What you do to me, hey? What you mean by bill? Haf I not bay for your ship? Haf I not bay for your cargo? Haf I not treat you like a gentleman? Haf I not, hey? I go down in mine office and call you a gentleman? Haf I not been a gentleman?" Haf I not been a gentleman at that door," said Rowland quietly.

"Open it," repeated Capt. Barry, his puzzled face clearing at the sight of action on his part, "or I'll kick it down."

"But you, sir, admission of drugging. One two is better, mine friend.

Why you not pay ages, or had otherwise disappeared, they decided to give the story told by Rowland to the press in the hope that publicity would avail to bring to light corroboratory evidence.

And this story, improved upon in the repeating by Mr. Meyer to reporters, and embellished still farther by the reporters as they wrote it up, particularly in the part pertaining to the polar bear—blazoned out in the great dailies of England and the continent, and was cabled to New York, with the name of the steamer in which John Rowland had sailed (for his movements had been traced in the search for evidence,) where it arrived, too late for publication, the morning of the day on which, with Myra on his shoulder, he stepped down the gang-plank at a North River dock. As a consequence, he was surrounded on the dock by enthusiastic reporters, who spoke of the story and asked for details. He refused to talk, escaped them, and gaining the side streets, soon found himself in crowded Broadway, where he entered the office of the steamship company in whose employ he had been wrecked, and secured from the "Titan's" passenger list, the address of Mrs. Selfridge—the only woman saved. Then he took a car up Broadway and alighted abreast of a large department store.

"We're going to see mamma, soon, Myra," he whispered in the pink ear; "and you must go dressed up. It don't matter about me; but you're a Fifth-avenue baby—a little aristocrat. These old clothes won't do, now." But she had forgotten the word "Mamma," and was more interested in the exciting noise and life of the street than in the clothing she wore. In the store, Rowland asked for, and was directed to the children's department, where a young woman waited on him.

"This child has been ship-wrecked," he said. "I have $16.50 to spend on it. Give it a bath, dress its hair and use up the money on a dress, shoes and stockings, underclothing, and a hat." The young woman stooped and kissed the little girl from sheer sympathy, but protested that not much could be done.

"Do your best," said Rowland; "it is all I have. I will wait here."

An hour later, penniless again, he emerged from the store with Myra, bravely dressed in her new finery, and was stopped at the corner by a policeman who had seen him come out, and who marveled, doubtless, at such juxtaposition of rags and ribbons.

"Whose kid ye got?" he demanded.

"I believe it is the daughter of Mrs. Col. Selfridge," answered Rowland, haughtily—too haughtily, by far.

"Ye believe—but ye don't know. Come back into the shtore, me tourist; an' we'll see who ye shtole it from."

"Very well, officer; I can prove possession." They started back, the officer with his hand on Rowland's collar, and were met at the door by a party of three or four people coming out. One of this party, a young woman in black, uttered a piercing shriek and sprang toward them.

"Myra," she screamed, "give me my baby—give her to me."

She snatched the child from Rowland's shoulder, hugged it, kissed it, cried and screamed over it; then, oblivious to the crowd that collected, incontinently fainted in the arms of an indignant old gentleman.

"You scoundrel!" he exclaimed, as he flourished his cane over Rowland's head with his free arm. "We've caught you. Officer, take that man to the stationhouse. I will follow and make a charge in the name of my daughter."

"Then he shtole the kid, did he?" asked the policeman.

"Most certainly," answered the old gentleman, as, with the assistance of the others, he supported the unconscious young mother to a carriage. They all entered, little Myra screaming for Rowland from the arms of a female member of the party, and were driven off.

"C'man wi' me," uttered the officer, rapping his prisoner on the head with his club and jerking him off his feet.

Then, while an approving crowd applauded, the man who had fought and conquered a hungry polar bear was dragged through the streets like a sick animal by a New York policeman. For such is the stultifying effect of a civilized environment.

CHAPTER XV.

In New York City there are homes permeated by a moral atmosphere so pure, so elevated, so sensitive to the vibrations of human woe and misdoing, that their occupants are removed, completely, from all consideration of any but the spiritual welfare of poor humanity. In these homes the news-gathering, sensation-mongering daily paper does not enter.

In the same city are dignified magistrates—members of clubs and societies—who spend late hours, and often fail to rise in the morning in time to read the papers before the opening of court.

Also in New York are city editors, bilious of stomach, testy of speech and inconsiderate of reporters' feelings and professional pride. Such editors, when a reporter has failed, through no fault of his own, in successfully interviewing a celebrity, will sometimes send him news-gathering in the police-courts, where printable news is scarce.

On the morning following the arrest of John Rowland, three reporters, sent by three such editors, attended a hall of justice presided over by one of the late-rising magistrates mentioned above. In the ante-room of this court, ragged, disfigured by his clubbing and dishevelled by his night in a cell, stood Rowland, with other unfortunates more or less guilty of offense against society. When his name was called, he was hustled through a door, along a line of policemen—each of whom added to his own usefulness by giving him a shove—and into the dock, where the stern-faced and tired-looking magistrate glared at him. Seated in a corner of the court-room were the old gentleman of the day before, the young mother with little Myra in her lap, and a number of other ladies—all excited in demeanor; and all but the young mother directing venomous glances at Rowland. Mrs. Selfridge, pale and hollow-eyed, but happy-faced withal, allowed no wandering glance to rest on him.

The officer who had arrested Rowland was sworn, and testified that he had stopped the prisoner on Broadway while making off with the child, whose rich clothing had attracted his attention. Disdainful sniffs were heard in the corner with muttered remarks: "rich indeed—the idea—the filmsiest prints." Mr. Gaunt, the prosecuting witness, was called to testify.

"This man, your Honor," he began, excitedly, "was once a gentleman and a frequent guest at my house. He asked for the hand of my daughter, and as his request was not granted, threatened revenge. Yes, sir. And out on the broad Atlantic, where he had followed my daughter in the guise of a sailor, he attempted to murder that child—my grandchild; but was discovered—"

"Wait," interrupted the magistrate. "Confine your testimony to the present offense."

"Yes, your Honor. Failing in this, he stole, or enticed the little one from its bed, and in less than five minutes, the ship was wrecked, and he must have escaped with the child in—"

"Were you a witness of this?"

"I was not there, your Honor; but we have it on the word of the first officer, a gentleman—"

EXPEDITING BUSINESS.

Scientific Arrangement of Work Largely Increased the Output in the Mailing Department.

[Business:] In a large publishing house in Chicago, which mails annually millions of circulars, form letters and sample copies, the saving of even of a single motion in the process of folding, inclosing or addressing means an economy that is well worth thinking about. When the idea first occurred to an officer of the company, he devoted several weeks to a careful and analytical study of the work of the mailing department. To the girls employed there and their work he applied the principals of scientific management as demonstrated by industrial scientists; with most satisfactory results.

The girls who folded and sealed the letters had formerly been allowed to arrange their work to suit themselves. A very little observation of their methods showed there was room for improvement. Experiments were made to determine in just what order each movement should be made in folding the letter and inclosure, picking them up and inserting them in the envelope. Crude as the first attempt was it immediately increased the output of a girl.

Finally a plan was devised for arranging and handling the envelopes and their inclosures so that each hand on the completion of one motion, was in the proper position to begin immediately the next motion. The final motion—that of throwing the filled envelopes upon a pile—was entirely eliminated by placing a large basket upon the floor, directly under the point where the inclosures were inserted in the envelope. When the inclosures were once inside, the girls simply let go of the envelope and it fell into the basket, gravity doing the work formerly done by the girl. After the girls had been taught the new methods of filling envelopes their output was nearly four times as great as it had been when they were doing their work haphazard in any way that happened to occur to them.

"In spite of the greatly increased output of the girls, their accuracy in folding, sealing and inclosing, etc., was one-half greater than before," said the officer of this publishing firm.

ONION CROP IS RECORD BREAKER

Two Million Crates Being Harvested in Texas.

Organized Market Methods Make Growers Dollars.

Laredo Is Metropolis of the Bermuda Industry.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

LAREDO (Tex.) May 13.—Bermuda onions have been pouring out of South Texas by the trainload daily since the middle of April and the movement will continue at this rate until the latter part of May.

The crop that is now being harvested is the greatest in the history of this State. It will aggregate, according to a conservative estimate, approximately 4200 cars. Each car contains about 500 crates. All told, the Texas crop this year will exceed 2,000,000 crates. Prices so far have ranged from $1.75 to $2.75 per crate. At this rate the gross returns to the onion growers for the 2,000,000 crates will be about $4,000,000. Of course not all of this is profit.

The cost of growing onions is heavy, ranging from $100 to $125 per acre, it is claimed, but where the production is large and good prices prevail an income of $250 to $500 per acre from the crop can ordinarily be depended upon after all expenses of growing, harvesting and marketing the product have been deducted.

It has been demonstrated that the territory in which Bermuda onions may be successfully grown is limited. The product requires certain peculiarities of soil and climate in order to give it the flavor and firmness that recommend it to the consumer.

This Rio Grande border town is the center of the Bermuda onion industry. There will be shipped from here this season approximately 2800 cars. The remainder of the Texas onion production is scattered over a number of localities of South Texas.

The other principal shipping points are Asherton, Cotulla, Brownsville, San Benito and Mission. In the Laredo section the industry has brought to the people wonderful prosperity during the last few years.

This is a branch of agriculture that possesses unusual opportunity for large profits and at the same time is attended with few of the discomforts and discouragements that are frequently met with by other kinds of farmers. One year with another the Bermuda onion crop can be depended upon to turn out well—much more than any other crop that is grown in the country, it is claimed.

ONLY TWO FAILURES.

Since the industry was inaugurated in Texas about ten years ago, there have been but two seasons when general losses were suffered by the growers. Both these times the fault was not with the crop itself, but with the inadequate methods of taking care of the product after it had reached maturity and the lack of proper marketing facilities.

Both these former menaces to the success of the growers have been overcome and there is perhaps no class of farmers in the United States which is better organized and has in operation a more complete and satisfactory system of growing, handling and marketing its crop than the men who are engaged in the Bermuda onion industry.

The systematizing of the business is regarded as the great factor in its success. So remarkable have been the accomplishments of the onion growers in this respect that their organization is attracting wide attention not only in this country, but in other lands.

ORGANIZED MARKET METHODS.

The Southern Texas Truck Growers' Association is the name of the organization which handles the bulk of the Bermuda onion crop as well as other produce raised by its members. This association practically controls the onion market of the United States and Canada.

The sales manager is Roy Campbell, who maintains headquarters at San Antonio. He directs the movement and marketing of every car shipped by members of the Southern Texas Truck Growers' Association. He has agents located in all the principal cities of this country from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and during the last two seasons his operations have extended into Canada.

Through these agents he is kept daily informed as to the condition of the market in every city to which the onions are shipped. If, from any cause, there is an indication that too many onions are likely to be thrown upon a particular market cars are diverted to other points where better prices may be obtained.

One of the great benefits, it is claimed, that has been derived from the organized marketing methods of the association is that it has done away with the produce broker and middleman who in former years are alleged to have mulcted the produce growers to the full limit.

POOLING SYSTEM PRACTICED.

Mr. Campbell is a man of extraordinary executive ability, as is shown by his success in handling the multitudinous affairs of the association. On some days there are 300 to 500 cars of onions being moved to different markets. He must know the location of every car each day, as well as just what market condition it will meet with in the city to which it is destined. It is upon his order that all sales are made. The pooling system is practiced by many of the growers. This is found to be a satisfactory way of disposing of the onions and it also lessens the labors of Mr. Campbell in keeping account of so many individual shipments.

FOREIGN SEED PURCHASED.

It is difficult to estimate how much is saved the onion growers each year through this association. That the services of Mr. Campbell are duly appreciated by the organization is shown by the fact that he receives an annual salary of $7500. It is known that he has in one year saved the growers many times that sum in the aggregate. As an illustration—before the Southern Texas Truck Growers' Association was formed, men who were engaged in the industry purchased their seed in this country, paying from $2.25 to $4.50 a pound for it, running the risk, at the same time, of it being a poor quality.

When Mr. Campbell got the machinery of the organization to going, he decided that the onion seed should be purchased first hand in the Teneriffe Island, which is one of the Canary group. It is upon that island that Bermuda onions are grown in large quantities for their seed.

GROWERS SAVE MONEY.

Mr. Campbell made personal trips to Teneriffe, when he purchased enormous quantities of seed for the Texas growers at $1.10 a pound for the white onion seed and $1.40 a pound for the crystal wax seed.

For this season's crop, it required approximately 25,000 pounds of seed. By buying it direct in Teneriffe Island, Mr. Campbell has been able to save the growers $40,000 to $50,000 a year. There is no way of estimating how much money he has saved them through the establishment of his splendid marketing system.

The example set by the truck growers of South Texas in the matter of marketing their produce is causing other classes of farmers to take steps to likewise do away with the expensive middleman and place their products upon the market direct. It is believed by those who have investigated the matter that this method of marketing can be put into practice with everything grown upon the farm, with the possible exception of cotton.

Laredo might be called very appropriately the Bermuda onion metropolis. The industry has brought wealth to many of the people of this place. It has caused a complete transformation of the town during the last few years. Before it was discovered that the product could be grown successfully in this section, the price of the lands ranged from $1 to $2 per acre. These same lands are now valued at $500 to $1000 per acre. This enhancement in values has taken place within the last ten years.

Growing Bermuda onions is an aristocratic kind of farming. All of the work of planting, cultivating and harvesting of the crop is done during the late fall, winter and spring months. The weather is ideally pleasant during this period. By the time the hote weather begings to make itself felt in May, the harvest is over and the farmer has four or five months of leisure to spend in whatever enjoyment he may choose. It is not until the hot summer season is over that the seed is planted for the next year's crop.

All of the work upon the onion farms is performed by Mexicans, who are paid sixty cents to seventy-five cents per day for their labor. All the onion grower is required to do, is to manage the industry and provide for meeting the expenses. He is even relieved of the hurry of marketing his crop.

Besides the wealth that the onions have brought to the farmers themselves, the Mexican population has been greatly benefited. The direct effect of this prosperity is shown in the many improvements that have been made to Laredo and other towns where the onion growing industry is carried on.

Plainly Stated.

RIGHT TO WORK FOR A LIVING.

IS NATURAL AND PROPER TO THE INDIVIDUAL.

So Also Is the Right of Organization So Long as the Association Involved Is Purely Voluntary on the Part of the Individual—Selfishness Must Be Kept Down.

[Manufacturers' Record:] Facts about the lockout of textile operatives in the Lancashire district of England are worth emphasizing in this day of a philosophy, constantly expanding in dangerous directions, that would sacrifice, without the individual's free and willing consent, his natural and proper rights to the supposed good of the somewhat intangible idea named as "society," "the people" or "the mass." The facts are plain enough. Two or three weavers refused to join a labor union of their fellow-operatives; their employers refused the demand of the union that they be discharged from the mill. The union called a strike, and the lockout followed, extending to a number of mills and affecting directly a hundred and fifty and more thousand weavers thus barred from work, and indirectly many other thousands of spinners, put on short time because of the reduced call for yarns. Whether refusal to join a union was made the occasion for a strike planned to influence the price of raw cotton, a theory justified, perhaps, by the preliminaries of more than one labor or other disturbance in this country in recent years, or whether it originated in the mere desire for a holiday on the part of the strikers, its settlement should be made on no other basis than a clear recognition of the principles that a man has the right to work for his living on his own terms, and that an employer has the right to select whom he chooses on his own terms. Both of those principles have been obscured of late. And society, the people or the mass, the supposed beneficiary, has been the sufferer.

Among the natural and proper rights of the individual is the right to organize, whether he is a farmer, a mechanic, a banker, a manufacturer, a day laborer, or in any other occupation, for the purpose of advancing the proper interests of himself and his associates in the organization through the economies that come from co-operation, and through the moral effect of numbers behind any project. But the effect is moral only when the project is a correct one, and the right to organize is natural and proper only as long as the association involved is purely voluntary on the part of the individual. As soon as the power of the mass of numbers or the mass of money or of any other force short of law is brought to bear upon an individual to coerce him into a course of action that has not appealed to his inclination or judgment a blow is struck against society, the people or the mass, against the integrity of the State. It begets an outlawry that is the more pernicious because it has the support, unthinking for the most part, of thousands of men and women, who otherwise are respectable and good citizens, but who, in standing by their organization, become confused as to the verities. Instead of developing social consciousness, it encourages class consciousness, and the case of industry results in the extremes of employees striking to compel employers to become involuntary recruiting agencies for the union among men unwilling to become slaves in entering the union, and of employers resorting to a lockout to make effective the policy of an open shop. When the extreme action extends beyond the single establishment and takes the form of the so-called "sympathetic" strike or lockout, involving employers and employees who have no immediate interest in the matter in dispute, the rights of thousands of individuals are assailed. Clashing of classes is disastrous to the masses not merely from the material standpoint, but as weakening the safeguards of individual life and happiness without which materialities are as nought.

The latent evil in practically all organization not clearly defined by judicious law is that members of the organization come to place the organization above other considerations, and incline to use it in a way detrimental to the proper rights of the individual, even the individual within it. The great majority of organizations have executive officers in whom is reposed the confidence of the mass of members. Executive initiative is seldom resisted and executive action seldom questioned. The plight into which the American Federation of Labor has been brought, for instance, in the McNamara case through dependence of the mass upon the judgment and discretion of executive is a striking and timely illustration of the general tendency of large organization. Few men can be entrusted with great power not regulated by statute law without almost unconsciously inclining to add to their power until they command instead of executing. Indeed, the past decade is full of notorious instances of the abuse of power in government ostensibly of law and on the books in that way by ambitions of irresponsible individuals. The probability of such abuse in the case of a voluntary organization is much stronger.

Hence there is absolutely necessity for all right-minded individuals to resist at every turn the demand that the individual must yield his personality to the organization of any kind. Organization is all well and good in its place. The great tasks of the world cannot be accomplished and the human race cannot be advanced without organization. But in all organization the element of human selfishness must be kept down to its lowest possible degree. Organization consciousness must not be allowed to overshadow social consciousness, and the grouping of that consciousness into a place where it may benefit must not be hampered by a policy that undertakes to develop it by stressing the idea of class or organization consciousness and is filling the statute books of the States and the nation with class legislation, embodying the more or less one-sided theories of divers organizations, many of them at odds with one another, an idea rooted in the imbecility of an optimism that looks for everything coming out all right in the wash, no matter what is put into the wash.

Law for the benefit of any particular class is bad law, unless it be at the same time for the good of the greatest number of citizens. Theoretically a man might have right to dam a stream flowing through his property for the purpose of obtaining a water supply or a source of power. But that right cannot be exercised if the damming of the water will injure the property of other men higher up the stream. This country especially, under the sway of public sentiment, or, rather, of a number of brands of public sentiment that has mistaken mob rule under the form of law for intelligent democracy, has been authorizing the building of too many dams by this or that organization in disregard of the fundamental conception of justice that would be relied on in the case of an ordinary question of dam-building. To that curse has been added the greater one of dam-building by organizations of one kind and another making membership in them a species of slavery for many unwilling ones, and adding mightily to the influences which more and more drown expression of sane and healthy public opinion in the howls of an organized mob.

Economy in Epitaphs.

[Lippincott's:] In a certain town of Nebraska lives a man who has been so unfortunate as to lose three wives, who were buried side by side. For a long time the economical Nebraskan deliberated as to whether he should erect a separate headstone for each, commemorating her virtues, but the expense deterred him. Finally a happy solution of the difficulty presented itself.

He had the Christian name of each engraved on a small stone—"Mary," "Elizabeth," "Matilda"—a hand cut on each stone pointing to a large stone in the center of the lot, and under each hand the words:

"For epitaph see large stone."

STANDARD ERECTS RIG NEAR ITS EIGHTY WELL.

High Degree of Oil Encountered Inspires Big Outfit to Endeavor to Increase the Production—Also Constructs Derricks Near the Lost Hills Townsite.

COALINGA, May 17.—The Standard Oil Company on section 28, 19-15, has erected a new rig for a second well in the vicinity of its No. 80 in which it encountered the light oil sand at a depth of 3675 feet.

The Zier Oil Company on section 1, 20-14, has completed the erection of its two new rigs and is rigging upon its well No. 18, while No. 17 has reached a depth of about 400 feet.

The Standard is erecting four combination rigs on its property near the Lost Hills townsite. The Standard's well No. 4 on section 4, 27-21, is producing in the neighborhood of 125 barrels daily.

This well is midway between its older and deeper wells that have not given as large a production.

Marve Anderson left today for the Kettleman Hills where he will take stock of the Coalinga Kettleman Oil Company preparatory to resuming operations about the first of next week.

The Hawkeye Oil Company on section 36, 20-14, drilling on its well No. 4 has reached the 450 foot mark.

Ozark Oil Company, section 26, 20-14, spudded in its well No. 5 last Friday.

WORLD'S GREATEST OIL WELL

oil-machinery and equipment men in the United States were busy trying to bring the roaring, pulsating giant under control.

These trained mechanics tried every known device in their efforts to stop the enormous flow. Finally a great steel valve, with a strength capable of withstanding 2400 pounds pressure to the square inch was placed upon the mouth of the well by means of powerful equipment. Even then the valve could be only partly closed. The cost of harnessing the well and the construction of storage reservoirs was upward of $500,000, it is said. Lord Cowdray of London, Eng., who is at the head of the Pearson syndicate which owns this wonderful well, spent several weeks on the ground personally directing the difficult task of bringing the giant under control.

When the reports reached the outside world of the enormous capacity of the well they were discredited by many leading oil operators and scientists. It was in order to satisfy a party of fifteen or twenty of these skeptics that the dangerous risk of opening up the well to its full capacity was taken some time after it was brought under control.

These men traveled all the way from the United States for the special purpose of viewing the giant in action. They were taken to Potrero del Llano from Tampico and when they viewed the throttled gusher, which was then doing 25,000 barrels daily under the restraint of the enormous valve, they openly expressed doubt of its reported capacity.

Then the valve was opened. Instantly the heavy pressure of gas began to assert itself. The loud humming noise that attended the first flow of oil quickly grew into a deafening roar. The ground for a mile around shook and trembled as the solid column of oil shot into the air. It mounted until it reached a height of 491 feet above ground. This was by actual measurement.

POWER FROM SAWDUST.

Gas Plant Invented in England Which Enables Waste Material to Be Turned Into Producer Gas.

[Washington Star:] "We are no longer interested in or affected even remotely by coal and miners' strikes," said the proprietor of one of the largest box and packing case manufacturing plants in the whole of London. "We get all the power we want on the premises for nothing."

The interviewer glanced around in bewilderment at the humming engines developing 200 horse power, and the scores of men working busily at the whirring lathes, and speculated on the source of all this power.

"The entire power used in these works, which have an annual output of tens of thousands of pounds," said the proprietor, "is derived from one thing, and one only—the carbon from common wet sawdust, if air be excepted!"

A patent gas plant has now been placed on the English market capable of producing not only from sawdust, but from practically all combustible refuse, a gas greater in power and caloric value, and richer in hydrocarbons, than that produced from coal. And the cost of the new fuel for manufacturers who possess quantities of combustible waste refuse, which they would otherwise have to destroy, is practically nothing. G. E. Lygo described the new plant.

"The plant itself,' he said, "consists merely of a firebrick-lined generator of special design, with extended feeding hopper, tar extractor, and dry scrubber.

"The fuels fed into the generator through the hopper, and the gas generated passes upward through an ingeniously arranged washer, which, while cooling it, also extracts any small particles of dust which have been drawn out of the generator by the suction of the engine, and a certain portion of the tar which is present in most waste material.

"'Manufacturers, again, who use this plant obtain as a 'waste from the waste,' so to speak, considerable good tar every week, which will go toward paying the cost of the man to attend to the engine.

"An engine capable of developing 100 horse power and upward, costs about $1500, and in most cases easily repays the initial outlay within twelve months. Hence the already large demand for these plants."

HORSE BREEDING IN EUROPE.

Several of the Governments Are Looking to the Quality of Animals Bred for Army and Civil Use.

[Baltimore American:] France and Germany, which have the best cavalry horses of Europe, saw a way of producing a high-class animal for army use before England did, and both began to import thoroughbred English stallions to cross with the cold-blood native mares. The English had from time immemorial fairly worshiped the thoroughbred of the equine species, believing it too good for cross breeding. That was merely sentimental.

No sire is too good for procreative purposes, as France long ago realized. Its breeding bureau is 103 years old. The government of France made a recent appropriation of $4,500,000 to be used by its Agricultural Department in this line of work, and the nation owns 259 of the finest English stallions. Germany has 179 thoroughbred sires of the same origin; The Dominion of Canada is fully abreast of the times in realizing the importance of the horse, whether for martial or civil use. It allows the breeding bureau $250 for each stallion acquired by it, and the services of the males are given to our farmers and stockmen in all the provinces. We have over 100 scattered from coast to coast, a few of which are of wide fame. This number is inadequate as the bureau could easily use 3000 if we had them. Canada is pursuing a liberal and a sagacious policy which I think the United States would do well to copy. We encourage racing and race meetings as directly conducive, indeed as essential, to the breeding business, whereas on this side of the border there is the apparent intention to prevent the reproduction of the noblest and most highly prized of all four-footed beasts.

Maybe, If You Had a Chance

To Buy the Whole City of Los Angeles for $50,000 You'd Have to Refuse. Maybe You'd Have to Sidestep Buying a $10,000 Diamond for $2000. Beyond a Certain Price, Bargains Don't Appeal

Now, if a man wants land worth about $10 an acre, and that is all he can afford to pay, he won't be interested in San Fernando Valley land. If he wants real, rattling good farm land, that will grow anything, and grow lots of it, he will look San Fernando Valley over pretty carefully and most of many real estate firms who have property for sale there will ask him from $400 to $600 an acre.

We have some of the most fertile land in the entire valley, situated directly on the Southern Pacific motor car line, lying just north of Owensmouth. In every way it is the equal of any $400 or $600 land in the valley, but we are offering it in tracts of 2½, 5, 10 and 20 acres, at from $275 to $375 an acre. You can save a clear $200 or more on every single acre you buy. There is no getting around the fact—it is a wonderful opportunity.

LD RESISTING FRUITS FOUND.

TS THAT BEAR IN FREEZING TEMPERATURE.

...ts of the Agricultural Department — Finds in Siberia Apricots ...Resist Fifteen Degrees Below Zero and a Cherry That Grows ...re Mercury Will Freeze.

Washington Star:] Fruits that resist temperatures far below have been found and brought to country by Frank N. Meyer, one e explorers of the Department of ulture, who has been wander- for over two years through the forsaken wastes of China and ral Asia. He turned up on the Petsania just as the department orities were beginning to get ied for fear he had been on the tanic. In fact, he had timed his urn home to catch that giant liner, ause he wanted to be with it on first trip. It happened, however, at he was taken ill on reaching ndon, and was forced to delay his iling. Both Dr. Galloway, chief of e bureau of plant industry, and Dr. airchild, Mr. Meyer's immediate ief, feared he was on the Titanic ithout being on the passenger list. Mr. Meyer came to the department veral years ago as an immigrant rdener, hardly understanding Eng- h, but having a personal intimacy ith all sorts of plants. He had not en in the service long before it was found he was a plant scientist, and, what was more important, had a faculty of doing the impossible, getting along in impossible places and with impossible people, as though that had been his chief recreation in life.

He was gradually drafted into the work of agricultural exploration and for the past two years has been tramping over the interior of China and Manchuria, Siberia and Chinese Turkestan, eating and sleeping with the natives, wearing native clothes and seldom being heard from, except when the parcel post brought in some rare and curious plant or seed from some never-heard-of part of the world. He has had enough adventures on the present trip to fill a series of volumes, but they are with him simply incidents in the day's work.

When he was started on the present mission it was by special request of Secretary Wilson that he get into a region where he could find some cold-resisting fruits for the benefit of people living along the northern edge of the United States, and especially in the upper valley of the Mississippi. So he struck into Manchuria and Siberia as being likely quarters. He went over much of the country where Sven Hedin was the first white man to enter. He strolled around trackless deserts and balanced on the peaks of unnamed mountains. But he was not a geographic explorer and he took little account of the fact he was penetrating areas wholly unmapped and teeming with adventures. He was merely after new plants and fruits, and if they happened to grow "where man never trod before" that was just an accident of the chase.

He developed a method of his own of mailing specimens to the department, packing them in moistened peat, wrapped with Japanese oiled paper. He was the first man to successfully ship persimmon cuttings in this way from Central China. He captured a new variety of oleaster somewhere northeast of the Caspian Sea that promises to form the best cold and drought resisting timber of the northwestern plains. He did not bring much with him except the clothes he wore, said it was always better to mail specimens as you got them, because then if you happened to get killed they came anyway.

PLACES ARE ATTRACTIVE.

Perspectives of two attractive places planned recently by the Edward E. Sweet Designing and Building Company are reproduced on this page. The larger house has just been completed on Mesa drive in Angelus Mesa for J. M. Strawn and contains nine rooms. The dwelling is of the Swiss chalet type, the exterior being of shakes and the roof of asbestos. Beamed ceilings play an important part in the interior plan. French windows open out from the living-room onto a pergola terrace. The other place is a seven-room bungalow that is now being erected for J. C. Clark on West boulevard, half-way between Venice and the Washington street car line. This house is of the true rustic type, with wide eaves and low roof.

INGLEWOOD ACRES

We First Offered These Choice

Little Suburban Farms

Less Than Sixty Days Ago

At that time we made the bold statement that we considered INGLEWOOD ACRES to be "head and shoulders" above anything of its kind on the market, and that, "dollar for dollar," "acre for acre," size, price and location considered, there was not another piece of property in Los Angeles County that had any more D-O-W-N-R-I-G-H-T M-E-R-I-T behind it, or offered greater opportunities for profitable investment, than an INGLEWOOD ACRE.

The Proof of the Pudding is in the Eating

Since then more than sixty per cent. of the land offered has been sold to enthusiastic buyers, their friends—and their friends' friends. Several buyers have returned the second and the third time to add to their purchases while the opening prices still maintained. Many Little Ranches have been laid out, gardens planted, and neat, modest homes started on the rich, loamy soil of INGLEWOOD ACRES.

YOU appreciate what improvements and population mean to valuations.

YOU know that every home erected and every plot improved means higher prices to the next buyer. It is the law of realty values everywhere. We want everyone who has not seen and bought an Inglewood Acre, to investigate this ideal, convenient home place NOW—before prices advance.

$390 BIG HALF ACRES $390

TERMS: 5 PER CENT. DOWN, $10 MONTHLY.

You can't get them at these figures more than a few days longer. New city lot subdivisions are crowding closer every day, and the rush of development toward the Southwest section of the city is only added evidence of the increased valuation that must surely come.

Get in "on the ground floor." Buy in a new subdivision that has all the requirements the public wants, and in the direction where most of the people seem to be going. Get into the Band Wagon—but do it before the music starts—you may have to sit on the fence and watch it go by.

There's water at INGLEWOOD ACRES—also Stores, Schools, Churches, and the Carline is but four blocks away.

UNITED VERDE TO OPEN TOWN

Coming of Smelter Means Thriving Community.

Machinery Will Be on Site Late in August.

Clark Now Owns 3000 Acres About Jerome.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]
PRESCOTT (Ariz.) May 17.—The United Verde Copper Company has completed all details connected with the acquisition of 3000 acres in the Verde Valley, where the company's new smelter will be erected. The first shipment of smelter machinery will be received about the middle of August, coincident with the completion of the Verde Valley Railroad. Operation of the smelter, which will be six miles from Jerome, will mean the building of a new town of considerable importance wholly upon ground owned by the company. The ore will be brought down hill from the mine by electric railway system.

A Boston syndicate has closed a deal for the purchase of the Big Pine mines on the Hassayampa River for $50,000. The sellers are C. H. and D. M. Dunning and John Harlan. The mine has about 1300 feet of underground development, all done within the past two years.

A fine gold strike has been made in the Dunkirk mine on Slate Creek in the roof of an old stope. Assays of the ore run as high as $37 in gold and silver. The property is being worked under lease by R. N. Hanson, who is shipping ore and concentrates to El Paso.

The greatest degree of activity is now being manifested in the old Weaver district near Congress Junction, a district held in the highest esteem by gold miners thirty years ago, but lately neglected. Nothing is being done on the Octave and Planet-Saturn mines, the best-known properties of the district, but the Gold Cliff Company is making good progress in blocking out ore on the famous old Yarnell mine; the Mildred Mining Company is sinking a shaft on the side of the Rich Hill, and much work is being done by the Southwestern Development Company, the Kelger brothers, on the Peterson group near Octave, and upon the Alvarado mine, a short distance below Yarnell. Several of these properties are being equipped with reduction machinery and a supply of water is being taken in by pipe lines from Peoples Valley.

Beware.

AMERICANITIS AN EPIDEMIC.

AND THE DOCTORS CAN'T VACCINATE IT AWAY.

Chicago Physician Complains that People Are Bolting Their Food and Gulping Their Coffee and Running Around in a Circle—And for Why?

[The Times Wireless, Cable, Eastern and Overland News Service.]
CHICAGO, May 16.—"Americanitis"—the craze for speed, the rush of the business man from his work to his luncheon and back to his work—was declared today by Dr. Fred W. Wood of Chicago to be responsible for many diseases that can come under the head of occupational neurosis. Dr. Wood spoke at the convention of the Illinois Homeopathic Medical Association today in the Hotel Sherman. He roundly condemned "quick lunches" as responsible for many of the stomach and nervous disorders of Chicagoans. He also scored the mechanical routine of postoffice clerks, and declared that the Chicago authorities failed to protect the workers from disease.

"If we step up to the office of a business man we see a sign, 'Out for luncheon; back in ten minutes,'" said Dr. Wood. "The man rushes downstairs to a lunch counter, throws into himself a large quantity of beans, or other food, without properly chewing it, bolts his coffee and rushes back into his office. The fermentation goes on in his stomach all afternoon. It does not take long then for disease to set in.

"Many office clerks in Chicago eat as much as half a pound to a pound of candy every day for years. They are preparing the way for functional neurosis. Then take the work of those clerks in the postoffice who assort letters all day long. All they have to do is to pass letters mechanically from one pile to another. After a while the movement of their arms becomes merely a jerk and occupational neurosis sets in.

"This gulping of food, this rush in working is "Americanitis"—the rush for the almighty dollar, the disregard of life. No wonder we have the story about the man in the streets of New York being warned to look out for the horses because horses cost money, while a new man can be hired most any time."

Common Language Mistakes.

[Harper's Bazar:] We rise in the morning after a refreshing night's sleep and say that we feel good or grand. If the sun is shining we say that the weather is good or grand; if it is raining, the weather is bad. If many people come to the lecture, the attendance is good; if few come, the attendance is bad. Our clothes for special occasions are our good clothes. The dust on the country road in August is bad. We have a bad cold; if only we could have a good one! At the party we had a grand time. Mrs. A's gown was simply grand. If the hayfield produces abundantly, we have had a good crop. Your sick neighbor looks bad. Your pen doesn't write good. You have got to buy a new hat. The man's hands began to get blistered. He has got to go home. We have got our lessons to get. You did not get to see them. We had like ourselves ready to go. One feels hunt sending a literary detective to get those who thus abuse them, to shut them in a cell with a book of synonyms, a dictionary, and Shakespeare's advice to Mend your speech a little,

Lest it mar your fortunes.

"The man rushes downstairs to a lunch counter, throws into himself a large quantity of beans, or other food, without properly chewing it, bolts his coffee and rushes back into his office. The fermentation goes on in his stomach all afternoon. It does not take long then for disease to set in.

"Many office clerks in Chicago eat as much as half a pound to a pound of candy every day for years. They are prospecting the way for functional neurosis. Then take the work of these clerks in the postoffice who assort letters all day long. All they have to do is to pass letters mechanically from one pile to another. After a while the movement of their arms becomes merely a jerk and occasional neurosis sets in.

"This gulping of food, this rush in business is "Americanitis"—the rush for the almighty dollar, the disregard of life. No wonder we have the story about the man in the streets of New York being warned to look out for the horses because horses cost money, while a poor man can be hired most any time."

downward extension of the prolific veins. This will involve considerable expense, but it is believed the company will be amply justified in taking the step. A modern pumping plant is recommended for installation in the Lent shaft by Superintendent J. R. Buchannan, to whose energetic direction the profit of the past year is largely due.

KERN ASBESTOS ATTRACTS.

Deposits of asbestos near Randsburg have attracted the attention of the Western Asbestos Company of Chicago, and a thorough inspection of the holdings were recently made by J. D. Thornton, representing the Chicago interests. It is said Thornton was highly pleased with the character of the material and that within a year active work will be in full blast and the asbestos turned to commercial account. Beside the extent of the deposit, which insures a steady supply, the asbestos is declared to contain the high quality long fibres that makes it particularly desirable in the manufacture of asbestos products.

MAINTAINS MAXIMUM.

The Skidoo Consolidated Mines Company is maintaining an approximate monthly output of $14,400 a month, and earning profits exceeding $4800. At this rate the annual profits of the company will approximate $57,000. The mill is handling 1175 tons of ore monthly, with the bulk of values recovered in the batteries. Ore developments continue to be kept well ahead of productions, according to late advices.

BONDS CALVERAS PLACERS.

The Rising Star placer group, at Central Hill, has been taken under bond and option by John L. Whitney, the Los Angeles mining man. The bond calls for inception or development within thirty days, and arrangements are pending for the initiation of work along broad lines. The property has received considerable attention, and a large deposit of good grade gravel is blocked out. Whitney is largely interested in other properties in California and Nevada.

THE WRECK OF THE TITAN.

"Step down, sir. That will do. Officer, was this offense committed in New York?"

"Yes, your Honor; I caught him meself."

"Who did he steal the child from?"

"That leddy over yonder."

"Madam, will you take the stand?"

With her child in her arms, Mrs. Selfridge was sworn and in a low, quavering voice, repeated what her father had said. Being a woman, she was allowed by the woman-wise magistrate to tell her story in her own way. When she spoke of the attempted murder at the taff-rail, her manner became excited. Then she told of the captain's promise to put the man in irons on her agreeing to testify against him—of the consequent decrease in her watchfulness, and her missing the child just before the ship-wreck—of her rescue by the gallant first officer, and his assertion that he had seen her child in the arms of this man—the only man on earth who would harm it—of the later news that a boat containing sailors and children had been picked up by Mediterranean steamer—of the detectives sent over, and their report that a sailor answering this man's description had refused to surrender a child to the Consul at Gibraltar and had disappeared with it—of her joy at the news that Myra was alive, and despair of ever seeing her again until she had met her in this man's arms on Broadway the day before. At this point, outraged maternity overcame her. With cheeks flushed, and eyes blazing scorn and anger, she pointed at Rowland and all but screamed:—"And he has mutilated—tortured my baby. There are deep wounds in her little back, and the doctor said, only last night, that they were made by a sharp instrument. And he must have tried to warp and twist the mind of my child, or put her through frightful experiences; for he has taught her to swear—horribly—and last night at bed-time, when I told her the story of Elisha and the bears and the children, she burst out into the most uncontrollable screaming and sobbing."

Here her testimony ended in a break-down of hysterics, between sobs of which were frequent admonitions to the child not to say that bad word; for Myra had caught sight of Rowland and was calling his nickname.

"What ship wreck was this—where was it?" asked the puzzled magistrate of nobody in particular.

"The Titan," called out half a dozen newspaper men across the room.

"The Titan,'" repeated the magistrate; "then this offense was committed on the high seas under the English flag. I cannot imagine why it is brought into this court. Prisoner, have you anything to say?"

"Nothing, your Honor." The answer came in a kind of dry sob.

The magistrate scanned the ashen-faced man in rags, and said to the clerk of the court: "Change this charge to vagrancy—eh—"

The clerk, instigated by the newspaper men, was at his elbow. He laid a morning paper before him, pointed to certain big letters and retired. Then the business of the court suspended while the court read the news. After a moment or two the magistrate looked up.

"You are the man who was rescued from an ice berg, are you not?" The prisoner bowed his head.

"Discharged!" The word came forth in an unjudicial roar. "Madam," added the magistrate, with a kindling light in his eye; "this man has merely saved your child's life. If you will read of his defending it from a polar bear when you go home, I doubt that you will tell it any more bear stories. Sharp instrument—umph." Which was equally unjudicial on the part of the court.

Mrs. Selfridge, with a mystified and rather aggrieved expression of face, left the court room with her indignant father and friends, while Myra shouted profanely for Rowland, who had fallen into the hands of the reporters. They would have entertained him after the manner of the craft; but he would not be entertained—neither would he talk. He escaped and was swallowed up in the world without; and when the evening papers appeared that day, the events of the trial were all that could be added to the story of the morning.

CHAPTER XVI.

On the morning of the next day, a one-armed dock lounger found an old fishhook and some pieces of string which he knotted together; then he dug some bait and caught a fish. Being hungry and without fire, he traded with a coaster's cook for a meal, and before night caught two more, one of which he traded, the other, sold. He slept under the docks—paying no rent—fished, traded and sold for a month, then paid for a second-hand suit of clothes and the services of a barber, then paid for a second-hand suit of His changed appearance induced a boss stevedore to hire him tallying cargo, which was more lucrative than fishing, and furnished in time, a hat, a pair of shoes, and an overcoat. He then rented a room and slept in a bed. Before long he found employment addressing envelopes for a mailing firm, at which his fine and rapid penmanship secured him steady work; and in a few months he asked his employers to indorse his application for a Civil Service examination. The favor was granted, the examination easily passed, and he addressed envelopes while he waited. Meanwhile he bought new and better clothing and seemed to have no difficulty in impressing those whom he met with the fact that he was a gentleman. Two years from the time of his examination he was appointed to a lucrative position under the government, and as he seated himself at the desk in his office, could have been heard to remark: "Now, John Rowland, your future is your own. You have merely suffered in the past from a mistaken estimate of the importance of women and whisky."

But he was wrong, for in six months he received a letter which, in part, read as follows:

"Do not think me indifferent or ungrateful. I have watched from a distance while you made your wonderful fight for your old standards. You have won, and I am glad and I congratulate you. But Myra will not let me rest. She asks for you continually and cries at times. I can bear it no longer. Will you not come and see Myra?"

And the man went to see—Myra.

The entire Magna Charta of organization is filled with thrusts e capitalists and repetitions of supposed doctrine of the class gle. Suffice for the purposes of article to give the preamble, h was the work of our friend, Rev. Haggerty. The best de- ption of this preamble was given Charles W. Thompson of the on Herald, during the Lawrence a. Mr. Thompson was trying to out something definite about this labor movement which was mak- thinks stir in the textile city. ting one of the members of rkers Mr. Thompson began to quiz regarding the places they had ady been organized. Philadelphia mentioned, and Thompson mptly asked if the organization much of a power there. Here e Worker's answer:

It's not much of a stronghold for for this reason: When the bosses d that preamble to our constitution eared the life out of them."

The preamble as it now stands is follows:

"The working class and the em- ying class have nothing in common. ere can be no peace so long as ger and want are found among illions of working people, and the who make up the employing class ve all the good things of life.

"Between these two classes a strug- must go on until all the toilers me together on the political as well on the industrial field and take hold that which they produce by or labor through an economic or- anization of the working class with- affiliation with any political party.

"We find that the centering of the anagement of industries into fewer and fewer hands makes the trades ions unable to cope with the ever- owing power of the employing class. e trades unions foster a state of af- rs which allows one set of work- n to be pitted against another set workers in the same industry, reby helping to defeat one another wage wars. Moreover the trades ions aid the employing class to mis- d the workers into the belief that working class have interests in mmon with their employers.

"Instead of the conservative mot- 'A fair day's wages for a fair y's work;' we must inscribe on our nner the revolutionary watchword, olition of the wage system.'

"It is the historic mission of the rking class to do away with capital- m. The army of production must organized, not only for the every- y struggle with capitalists, but also carry on production when capital ll have been overthrown. By anising industrially we are form- the new society within the shell the old.

"Knowing, therefore, that such an anization is absolutely necessary our emancipation, we unite under following constitution."

Now what does all this preamble ean? What do these principles and for? The best answer to these stion is given by one of the mem- rs of the organization in an in- rview with Mr. Thompson referred above. He asked a Worker to him what the organization stood for and received the following elucida- tion:

"In the first place we don't ask to be recognized by the boss; in fact, we refuse to be recognized by the boss. In this Lawrence strike, for instance, if the workers want to go back, they can go back as individuals, or go back in groups, but we can't make any agreement to go back on behalf of the Industrial Workers of the World. We don't recognize the boss and we won't be recognized by him.

"There are two main planks in our platform. First, we use the strike as our predecessors did; second, we use the master lock-out.

"Our use of the strike, though, is not for the half-way purposes for which the old labor organizations used it. We don't strike because of some inequality in payment. We strike because we intend in time to get hold of the tools of production. Each one of our strikes is a step in that direction. We don't strike because in a given case the men are getting a dollar or so less than they ought or are working an hour or longer than they ought. We cause we intend to get them what they produce.

"In one case we strike for a 15 per cent. increase in wages; when we get that we will strike for another 15 per cent., and so on until we get 100 per cent., and then the capitalist will have nothing at all of what we want to earn, unless, indeed, he wants to go to work. If he does we will give him a wheel and a bench. And, of course, we are going to get all this. We are going to keep at it until the men who produce the wealth shall have the wealth. It is a perfectly simple proposition. We may not get the 15 per cent. the first time we ask for it, but we will get it the second or third time, and the same will be true of the 30 per cent., and so on up to the 100 per cent.

"So much for the strike. Now as to the master lock-out. That means just what it says. We lock out the master. What we do is to find the possibilities of production. For instance, if we find, as we did in Minnesota, that the average production was five cars to the ton we cut down the product to four cars. The workmen would not load more than that. This gives work to the unemployed. The boss can't make the men load more than four cars. He has got to get extra men if he wants the fifth one loaded. The matter is absolutely in the control of our men. All that is needed is education. If the men once grasp the idea that the boss is absolutely in their power they can do as they please with him.

"Don't you see? We have the game in our hands. Take the eight-hour day. Let the boss say that we have got to work more than eight hours. All we have to do is to quit after eight hours. If you want a vocation, take it. Stay away as long as you please.

"When you get ready to come back, tell the boss that you have struck and have been defeated, and are ready to go back to work. Then go back to work and after eight hours, quit again. There is no use blinking facts, this is war. It is war between the working class and the master class. We have the power, only we have never known how to use it. The I.W.W. is teaching us how to use it. When we use it the capitalist will be powerless. He is the minority; we have the strength.

"Stay on the job. That's our motto. Don't quit. Strike if you want to, but strike always ready to come back. Strike not for a monetary advantage but for the sake of stepping forward toward your control of the product you make.

"We don't care a continental about politics; we don't aim to pass any laws. We can break up the capitalistic system without that by simply taking hold of the machinery of production. As for voting, a lot of the workers are not even American citizens and couldn't vote if they tried. But they have just as much right to the wealth they produce as you and I, and if the I.W.W. accomplishes what it aims at, they will get it."

In the last paragraph we have the whole story. The members of the Industrial Workers of the World could not vote if they tried to, yet they are insistent and persistent enough to compel American manufacturers to listen to their terms and to grant them what they demand. This is what happened in Lawrence, although it must be admitted in that particular case the textile employers went into fight under a great handicap. The high tariff, the high cost of living, and starvation wages entered into that affair to a degree which is almost incalculable. Yet the fact remains that the strikers—and they were all Industrial Workers of the World—won something. They were victorious over the first lap of their race toward controlling the product and practically confiscating the machinery of their employers at Lawrence. Their membership is chiefly a foreign membership and that is really the secret of their success so far.

While it is not to be said to the credit of the American workingman nevertheless it is a fact that in a few short years this new aggregation of laboring people has made much more rapid strides than the American Federation of Labor. It took that latter organization, in its allied trades, and with all sorts of help from politicians, students of economy, and what-not, twenty-five years to reach the million mark in membership. This new organization has been in existence but eight short years, and only about four of them actively, as will be shown hereafter, and yet their numbers now run into the hundreds of thousands. And this is not idle jest. Figures on their membership are hard to get and even if gotten would hardly be reliable, but at the same time the leaders of the federation are alive to the situation and are fighting tooth and nail to defeat them.

It was admitted by everybody—employees, labor leaders and employers—that in the recent textile strike at Lawrence over 22,500 people were out. John Golden, the president of the Textile Workers of America, and one of the leading members of the executive board of the American Federation of Labor, was forced to admit before the Rules Committee of the House, that his union had an infinitesimally small number of strikers. In fact, under close cross-examination by Victor L. Berger, the only Socialist member of the lower House of Congress, and who by the way has taken the part of the I.W.W. whenever the opportunity was afforded, President Golden stated that in the entire list of strikers at Lawrence the Textile Union had but 203. Hence the rest of the crowd belonged to the I.W.W. The leaders of the other labor unions, including the Knights of Labor, the old organization which still has considerable following in New England, are not ignorant of the new danger which has suddenly arisen. In fact they are alive to it, but are making but little headway.

What then is the answer?

The answer is simply this. The Industrial Workers of the World has picked up all of the foreigners and the cheap labor which the American Federation of Labor would not touch for the plain reason that they did not make enough money to permit of decent fees for the walking delegate and the other higher officials who had to be kept, clothed and fed, by the contributions of the men under them. For years the federation has fought shy of the common labor in mills, plants and all sorts of manufacturing industries which employ unskilled labor. In the main the unskilled labor of this country is foreign. The Italian, the Greek, the Polock, the Hungarian and others of the same caste will work for wages at which the high-minded Anglo-Saxon would sneer. Men making from $1.15 to $1.30 are not good specimens for the average labor union. The dues must be commensurate with their other members of the same allied craft and where the foreigner comes to America and barely a living wage, the other trades unions will have none of them.

But the Industrial Workers of the World will take them. It has done so and will do so again. Through its organizers, speaking almost every tongue, it has fed them the doctrine of social discontent, the same feed which they were given in their European homes. The lower continental class these days is brought up to believe that the very name of government is synonomous with everything that is bad and works to their destruction. Landing in this country, the famous land of the free, they are met at the pier with the same talk they have heard at home. They know what the rich and the royal have done to others of their kind at home and what is more natural than that they should follow the agitator who immediately tells them that the same class struggle is in existence in America? They know what the fight of the poor against the rich means. They are poor and when they learn that the same fight is on in the land of their adoption, they of course can enlist on but one side.

They get a job and then they strike. Out comes the militia and it is worse than the proverbial shaking of a red rag at a bull. They have been taught almost from infancy to abhor the man in the uniform. To them he represents the force of royalty. They have seen him before in the service of the Czar, or the Emperor, or the King, and they know that to cross his will and let him shoot or bayonet, is merely a true sign of the martyr. Rioting, except as a show of their displeasure, is furthest from their thoughts. The old idea gets into their heads, they hear the honeyed words of the I.F.W. agitator telling them to go ahead, and bloodshed is the inevitable result.

To illustrate more fully take some of the remarks made by the leaders of the I.F.W. in the Lawrence strike. Joseph J. Ettor, an editor of one of their papers and an organizer, kept the members at Lawrence constantly keyed up with speeches which should have struck an abhorrent note in the heart of every good American lover of law. Speaking, about the middle of February to a crowd of several thousand of the strikers, and discussing the possibility of the textile mill owners starving their employees into submission, Ettor said :

"If they drive us back to work by such methods we must get our revenge by whatever means possible. There is lots of emery dust to be put in oil and things like that. We will fix things, and you know what I mean by that."

It has been but a few months ago when the entire populace of this country, union sympathisers and non-union sympathisers, shuddered when they read some of the letters which had passed between men alleged to have been in the dynamite plots. Those letters were hidden. They were intended for nobody to see, but here is a case where an organizer stood up openly and practically counseled his followers—and they were legion—to go destroy property in the name of justice.

On the same day, Haywood was speaking before a crowd in Lynn, Mass., in an attempt to raise more funds for the strikers. 'During the course of his speech this noted leader said:

"It is a wonder to me that the Lawrence strikers have not gone into the mills and destroyed the machinery and burned up the mills. Certainly there has been enough of them to do this and I contend that the strikers have built up the mills and they have a perfect right to destroy what they have built up.

"All the strikers have done is to break a few windows with snow balls and the militia has been sent to Lawrence because the strikers have done nothing more or less than Harvard football youths have carried out time and time again when celebrating a football victory."

After reading a few extracts from speeches such as the foregoing, is it any wonder that the Massachusetts militia was called out and that for a time there was danger of the streets of Lawrence running red with blood?

We have now traced the Industrial Workers and their successes to some extent by showing how they have lived up to their principles as laid down in the speeches of their leaders and in their preamble to the constitution. Let us go back a little and trace their history from the first convention in Chicago until the present time.

Shortly after the convention, upon the return of the delegates and officers to the West, several of them, including Moyer, Pettibone and Haywood, were arrested for the murder of Gov. Steuenberg. As is well known, these men were all acquitted, although there are indications of a very recent date that details of that crime, which will to a great extent corroborate the story originally told by Harry Orchard, may be brought to the public gaze through the dynamite investigation of the government. The arrest of these men put a quietus on the Workers for a time and it was not until the year 1906 that they once more appeared in the public prints. Many of them had been at work while the leaders were awaiting trial and there had been clashes with municipal authorities all over the West. Free speech was what they demanded and what they got usually was the calaboose. Their organizers spoke from street corners in a vain attempt to raise public sympathy their way by causing the police to arrest them. In some cases, chiefly in Spokane, they were successful. Arrested there, the news of their arrest was telegraphed far and wide and they received advertisement which no money could buy.

From that time up to and including the present, the Industrial Workers of the World have figured very largely in each and every industrial dispute which has occurred on the Pacific Coast. In fact many of the minor disputes which have been so common in Seattle, Portland, Spokane and other leading cities of that section of the country have been directly caused by them.

In the East, however, they made but small headway until the recent textile strikes. In 1907 they conducted a small strike at the plant of the Pressed Steel Car Co. at McKees Rocks, Pa., but were beaten. They succeeded, however, in organizing the great majority of the unskilled foreign labor which was employed at this plant and two years later handled a strike there which startled America. This was really their first big strike in the country and rioting was the order of the day from its inception.

The Pressed Steel Car Company employed thousands of unskilled workers, all of whom had been fed the doctrine of syndicalism and general strike by the wily leaders and agitators of the Industrial Workers of the World, in the former strike. The skilled mechanics in the plant were much in the minority, but were organized under the American Federation of Labor. The unskilled workers struck first and spurred on by their leaders made preparations at once to gain their ends at any cost. The local authorities became frightened and finally the constabulary of the State of Pennsylvania—familiarly termed by the labor unions, the Cossacks—were called upon. Immediately after their entrance to McKees Rocks the real trouble began, although previously the men and deputy sheriffs had met in small encounters and some few broken heads had resulted. The most of the strikers lived in the houses owned by the company and after waiting a time and finding that none of the men were going to return to work, the company made preparations to evict the strikers as tenants. The evictions finally began, but in the evicting process a Deputy Sheriff was killed and before the summer was over several of the strikers were dead and members of the constabulary injured. The entire town was a hotbed of anarchy during the entire summer. This strike for a time bid fair to cause other upheavals of the same sort in the surrounding country, chiefly among the coal miners and the steel workers. Fortunately, however, the owners of the coal mines and the steel plants were able to stave off the trouble. After fighting the usual losing battle the Workers went back to work, but with a notice to the company that they would strike again and strike hard whenever they figured that they had the slightest chance of winning. After the strike had been settled it was currently reported that the members of the Industrial Workers of the World were purchasing and storing dynamite for the second strike. Searches of the homes of several were made, but no dynamite was ever found, although today all through the town of McKees Rocks will be found business men and merchants who are satisfied that the entire place is merely sitting on a volcano, which may erupt and kill at a moment's notice. The actions of the men at McKees Rocks have followed clearly the ideas of the organization as laid down by Haywood and other leaders.

The actions of this new organization in the strikes among the textile workers of Lawrence and Passaic are too fresh in the public mind to need repetition here. All of them, however, suffice to show just how the new crowd can do if they all put their shoulders to the wheel. The strikes already conducted show too that the new organization is to be feared for its violence far more than any similar organization with which the peace officers of this land have had to deal. Anarchy, pure and simple, with them is nothing. They will stop at nothing to gain the ends which they think that some God-given agitator has a right to drive them into.

One of the late pamphlets published by the Industrial Workers of the World furnishes some better ideas of their methods in the following:

"As a revolutionary organization the Industrial Workers of the World aims to use any and all tactics that will get the results with the least expenditure of time and energy. The tactics are determined solely by the power of the organization to make good in their use. The question of 'right' and 'wrong' does not concern us.

"No terms made with an employer are final. All peace so long as the wage system lasts is but an armed truce. At any favorable opportunity the struggle for more control of industry is renewed.

"The Industrial Workers realize that the day of successful long strikes is past. Under all ordinary circumstances a strike that is not won in four to six weeks cannot be won by remaining out longer. In trustified industry the employer can better afford to fight one strike that lasts six months than he can six strikes that take place in that period.

"The organization does not allow any part to enter into time contracts with the employers. It aims, where strikes are used, to paralyze all branches of the industry involved, when the employers can least afford a cessation of work—during the busy season and when there are rush orders to be filled.

"The Industrial Workers of the World maintain that nothing will be conceded by the employers except that which we have the power to take and hold by the strength of our organization. Therefore we seek no agreements with the employers.

"Failing to force concessions from employers by strike, work is resumed and 'sabotage' is used to force the employers to concede the demands of the workers.

"The great progress made in machine production results in an ever-increasing army of unemployed. To counteract this the Industrial Workers of the World aims to establish the shorter workday and to slow up the working pace, thus compelling the employment of more workers."

Just how the workers are considered on the Pacific Coast may be judged from the Seattle Times of April 15, last:

It is about time for the people of Seattle and the State of Washington to realize what the Industrial Workers of the World stand for.

They have maintained headquarters here; they have paraded the streets; they have outlined their peculiar doctrines in open meeting; and they have caused the disorders on Grays Harbor, where conditions have passed beyond the stage of mere threat and have taken on the aspect of menace and destruction.

THE CIVIL WAR

Through the Camera

A Newly Written, Impartial Story of the Great Conflict

By Professor Henry W. Elson, of Ohio University

Illustrated by the Famous Brady War Photographs

Published by Authority of the United States War Department

The opening announcements of these wonderful Civil War photographs—now offered for the first time to citizens of Los Angeles by THE TIMES exclusively—have met with prompt response. Readers everywhere have made haste to get their copies of these beautiful portfolios.

Think of it! Here are pictures whose originals cost hundreds of thousands of dollars and untold privation and suffering to procure.

They are the first actual photographs of REAL WAR—the most momentous war in the history of our country. They were lost for many years and have only recently been discovered—just in time to celebrate fittingly the semi-centennial of that titanic conflict. And by means of a nation-wide publishing alliance—cutting out all middlemen's profits—THE TIMES is able to offer this unique and superb work to the people of Southern California at the BARE COST OF HANDLING!

The occasion is no ordinary one. Interest in the Civil War is now intense. All intelligent men and women want to know, and want their children to know, the facts, about that mighty conflict, just half a century ago.

And here is the first chance for every citizen to get those facts. Photographs cannot lit. Here you see the very faces of the men who fought for principle and settled forever a burning problem that else would have disrupted our nation forever and ever! Here you learn in Elson's new impartial history the deeds of valor on both sides, fairly told, without prejudice to one or the other.

Here you have a stimulus to sacrifice and patriotism, a model for character building, told in a form more fascinating than any novel of romance, or knight errantry.

And every word is true. And every photograph is real—taken while the cannon were booming and your fellow citizens were laying down their lives for their native land.

Praise and Astonishment

Of Famous Americans Who Have Seen the Civil War Photographs

These are only a few of the letters received from prominent men who are amazed at the interest and value of the photographs.

The Secretary of War

Although I have long made quite a study of the great conflict, it has never before really been brought home to me in the way in which these pictures do it.—H. L. STIMSON.

Archbishop Ireland

Next to having taken an active part in the war—in its marches and bivouacs, its vigils and battles, its defeats and victories—I rank as a means of realization of its meaning and value the attentive inspection of those "Photographs." I should wish a place were given to them in every home, in every school house, in every public library of America.—JOHN IRELAND.

Theodore Roosevelt

A really noteworthy work. The photographs thus collected are not only of a permanent value, but will have a steadily increasing value for the historian as time elapses.

The Chief of Staff, U. S. A.

Of great value in giving to our people a better idea of the Civil War. The photographs are very good.—LEONARD WOOD.

RARE MINERALS, METALLURGY, CHEMISTRY.

ENQUIRIES FROM AND ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Asbestos.

SACRAMENTO, April 26.—Q.: Specimens of material wrapped and enclosed herein are from a lead near Bedrock, California, and very near the California-Nevada line. The mineral substance is supposed to be some kind of asbestos. Will you please state: (1) What is the name and variety of the substance? (2) I understand that there are two kinds of asbestos; if this is a correct view of the matter will you kindly give information of such subject matter that will show the varieties of the mineral, and in such form that a novice can read and learn?

G. C. C.

A.: Classified among the members of the "Hornblende" family and in the list of the Amphibole group of minerals we find tremolite, actinolite, and asbestos, the leaders, as it were. The mineral hornblende is the most abundant of nature's contribution to the amphibole group. The samples you submit are asbestiform actinolite the ordinary low grade "asbestos" of commerce.

It would appear somewhat paradoxical to refer to the low grade variety as "true asbestos," but nevertheless, this anhydrous silicate of magnesium is not the variety referred to in the various industries as asbestos of the much sought after, high-priced and what has been referred to by a certain author as "bastard asbestos." Bastard asbestos is a silky, "off-color" variety and it is further known as serpentine asbestos (chrysotile, of mineralogy.) Chrysotile is hydrated silicate of magnesium; an asbestiform variety of serpentine, and allied to picrolite. Amphibole asbestos is worth approximately twelve dollars per ton, f. o. b. cars, and the serpentine variety $75.00 up, to "all that the trade will bear," in carload lots.

The asbestiform variety occurs in beds or ledges; the serpentine asbestos is obtained from "pockety," so-called formations.

Asbestos possesses some remarkable qualities, when heated to redness all foreign matter is eliminated, but the fibres remain uninjured. One of the customs of our forebears was to wrap the bodies of their departed friends and enemies in asbestos cloth and consign them to the flames; leaving a residue of unconsumed osseous tissue and ashes. These ancient worthies made napkins and clothing from asbestos, and when it was necessary to clean such useful articles, all required was a "fire assay," adjunct and no other laundry. It is claimed that the Esquimos and some of the North American Indians used abeestos for clothing and fire-wicks, and the former use such wicks as an oil-burner at the present day.

Five Samples.

BISBEE (Ariz.) April 26.—Q.: (1) Is the crystallized lime in this package clear enough for optical use? (2) Are the pink spots in the yellow ore vanadium? (3) What is the red sample, and does it carry copper? (4) The gray rock what is it? (5) Is the black sample graphite? All of these samples are from prospects I have recently found.

J. W. W.

A.: No. 1 yes. No. 2 Wulfenite, (molybdate of lead.) vanadium absent. Do not confuse this mineral with wolframite (tungstate of iron.) No. 3 copper-colored with hematite, copper absent. No. 4 trachyte. No. 5 is high grade manganese ore (pellomelane.)

Zinc Traces.

LOS ANGELES, April 26.—Q.: Please inform me if the enclosed samples represent any commercial values? Is there zinc present?

C. S.

A.: No. 1 lime, magnesia, iron, and manganese present with zinc traces; a silicate ore. No. 2 belongs to the amphibole group, and is a radiated (in part glassy) actionlite, carrying lime, silica, iron oxide, magnesia, and fluorine a trace. Doubtful ores for commercial uses.

Lydian Stone.

LOS ANGELES, April 27.—Q.: These ore samples were sent to me by a friend at Tuba City, Ariz., and he asked me to send them to The Times for assay, etc. They come from a ledge about three feet wide and they may be radium or tungsten.

A. L. K.

A.: Uranium and tungsten not present in any sample. The rock is touchstone, and it is used for testing the purity of gold and silver. In addition to the uses referred to touchstone if streaked with native copper gives an appearance of gold, but drop nitric or hydrochloric acid on the streak and it turns copper-blue quickly on a gold streak, any ordinary single acid has but little effect. The samples are a compact, flinty slate, of flat-conchoidal fracture, and velvet-black in color. If gold or silver is rubbed on polished Lydian stone the streaks left thereon can be closely estimated (as to purity) by experienced testers of alloys.

Carbonaceous Shale.

SANTA BARBARA, April 27.—Q.: Under separate cover I hand you some shale samples from a locality within a few miles north of this city. Will you be so kind as to test, and advise me as to results through The Times columns, in reference to the samples? (1) What is the blackish mineral attached to the rock? (2) Is this rock oil-shale? (3) Is the locality worthy of exploitation for oil?

G. W. T.

A.: (1) Asphaltum. (2) No. (3) The question cannot be answered from a few samples, and it is somewhat irrelevant to the objective, and the following useful, facts of this department.

H. M.

A.: "Bismuth is 9:80 in specific gravity; it is silver-white in color and melts at 496 degrees F. Antimony is 6.71 in sp.gr., and melts at 809 degrees F. Antimony is bluish-white in color."

We prefer to refer to bismuth as grayish-white in color with a distinct pinkish tinge; streak gray; hardness 2.25; often brightly tarnished; melts in the alcohol flame; of metallic luster; brittle when cold, but slightly malleable when heated; fused and slowly cooled crystallizes in rhombehedrons. Bismuth fuses easily before the blowpipe on charcoal and gives off white fumes (volatilizes;) forms a yellow coating on the charcoal, and crystallizes in rhombehedrons on the coal. It dissolves in nitric acid, and if a little of the solution is placed in a test tube to which a liberal amount of water is added a copious white precipitate is obtained.

Antimony is tin-white in color and streak, and acquires a yellow tarnish on exposure; Of splendent-metallic luster; slightly sectile hardness 3 to 3.5; hexagonal, and occurs native reniform and amorphous. Before the blowpipe fuses readily, "continues to burn though the heat be removed, and can be entirely volatilized in the form of agray vapor, but if the fused mass be allowed to cool slowly, it becomes covered with brilliant white acicular crystals of antimony oxide." Antimony forms a white coating on charcoal b. b., and this white coating colors the reducing flame bluish-green. The sample in container marked "X," is bismuth, and the mark "XX" represents the antimony.

The peroxide (or dioxide) of sodium is probably the "soda salt" to which you refer, and we quote from the 1910 catalogue of "F. W. Braun of Los Angeles," as follows: Peroxide of sodium is quite a new commercial product, and is rapidly taking the place of other material as a powerful oxidising and reducing agent. It is a stable compound, when not exposed to the air. Chemically it is that oxide of the metallic elementary base Sodium, which contains the greatest possible quantity of oxygen. Expressed in figures, peroxide of sodium contains 19-20 per cent. available oxygen. It is a valuable material for industrial mining purposes, to supply oxygen in large quantities quickly. The oxygen is set free by the use of diluta sulphuric acid, as follows (we do not quote the chemical symbols but give the reactions in United States language, ed. note.) Sodium dioxide plus sulphuric acid become sodium sulphate, plus water, plus oxygen. Testing with 1-10 normal permanganate of potash solution.

Process For Fruit.

POMONA, April 29.—Q.: If my question is a proper one I would be glad to have you publish a process for preserving fruit so as to avoid cooking or preserving. Mrs. T.

A.: For canning all kinds of fruit without sugar or cooking proceed as follows: Take one-half pound of sublimed sulphur (be particular and get the sublimed;) one ounce of potassium nitrate (popularly known as saltpetre,) and one ounce of pulverized licorice root. Licorice root is known among druggists, and named in the U.S.P., as glycyrrhiza. Mix the sulphur, saltpetre, and licorice root together intimately, which mixture is the preserving powder. Next in order, peel, slice, and prepare the requisite quantity of ripe fruit sufficient to fill a six-gallon jar or enameled can. Further proceed: "Set a cup on a plate, pile fruit on the plate about one and half inches deep and place in a jar. Fill and place another plate of fruit like the first, and continue until the last plate reaches nearly to the mouth of the jar. On the top plate put the tin cover of a baking-powder can or a small lid, drop a tablespoonfull of the preserving powder on the tin lid or can-top and drop a red-hot coal into the center of the preserving powder, which will immediately burn. Quickly cover the jar wth a board to retain all possible gas, as this gas is the preserving element. Let stand an hour, then pack the treated fruit in glass jars, packing tightly, and then screw on the covers. Perhaps the powder will not all be burned, for when the jar becomes full of gas the powder, naturally ceases to burn. Be sure to use the red-hot coal, keep the jar securely covered and the powder will do the rest."

When the fruit is to be used as food place it on a platter, and in one hour the sulphur smell will entirely vanish. The recipe is harmless, and very sour fruit takes less sugar when so canned. The gas neutralizes the acid in sour fruit, and very little sugar is called for as a sweetener when cooked.

Septaria.

RIVERSIDE, April 29.—Q.: With this find two samples of some sort of boulders found in this county. They are such peculiar rocks that I send them to find out if they have any value?

J. S. D.

A.: Mineralogically the stones are septaria. The samples are rounded and somewhat flattened, nodular concretions of argillaceous limestone, usually occuring in clay formations. In layers parallel with the stratification. "During the consolidation of the beds the calcareous matter contained in them appears to have separated from the muddy sediment forming the clays in which the septaria are found, frequently collecting round shells, plants or other organic substances. In the contraction undergone by these concretions during the process of solidification they became traversed by cracks, which in many cases have subsequently become filled with an infiltration of carbonate of lime or calc spar, and it is from these septa, or divisions, that the concretions have derived their name of septaria. . . . In consequence of the regularity of the patterns produced by the septa, septaria are sometimes called "turtle stones," from their fancied resemblance to the plates forming the shell of a tortoise or turtle, the fossil remains of which they have been sometimes supposed to be by the ignorant."

By burning septaria (sort of roasting) and grinding up the burned product, the old Roman cement is made, and if you have a quantity sufficient of the stones in question you can make a good, useful cement.

Rock Soap.

SAN DIEGO, April 29.—Q.: Please give me some information on the samples I am sending with this. The locality where found is in Mexico, over the line. It makes a good slate pencil. Is it good for any other purpose? D. B. A.

A.: Glad to hear from you. The sample is named at subheading, and it is used for washing cloth and for artists' crayons. Color pitch black; opaque; feels somewhat greasy; streak resinous and shining; sectile; "writes as well or better than drawing slate;" sticks to the tongue; falls to pieces in water; hardness slightly over 1 and of specific gravity 2.1.

Pyritiferous.

CORONA, April 29.—Q.: Would you kindly tell me if these samples contain anything of value. All from the Baldy range, Los Angeles county.

R. B.

A.: No. 1 is a very impure soapstone of no commercial value. No. 2, carbonate of lime, iron carbonate, and trace of phosphoric acid. No. 3, pyrite (microscopical) and iron sulphate scattered sparingly throughout the mass. All samples of doubtful value.

Ten Samples.

DAGGETT, April 29.—Q.: I am sending you ten small samples, which represent part of my prospecting trip of 1911, the other lot of samples you so kindly named for me in 1911. The samples herein come from New Mexico territory, and some of the boys do not know what to make out of the propositions. No. 1 comes from Old Baldy, west of Springer. No. 2 from near Cimmaron. No. 3 was taken at 135-foot depth on the east side of Old Baldy. No. 4 is country rock, that is, it runs in lead form near the placers at Taos. No. 5 may be some gem, at least I think so. No. 6 gets me and all of us; I found it with more like it in the tailings of Taos. No. 7 comes from a dry wash between Springer and Cimmaron, and its great heft interests me. No. 8 comes from a foothill ranch east of Springer, and it may be copper. No. 9, acid does not injure it, and it is red. No. 10. I call this corundum, and from same locality as No. 9.

W. O.

A.: Glad to hear from you, and it's no ground of complaint to register an objection to the fact that ten samples at one time represent quite a number. No. 1 is quartz carrying "rusty gold" and not "lead ore" as marked by you; of course, it is hard "to amalgamate." No. 2 is anthracite coal of good quality. No. 3 is high-grade silver glance (argentite,) carrying over 85 per cent. silver. No. 4 is typical "iron gossan," and probably lying under this "country rock" is a ledge of some good ore. No. 5 is garnet (pyrope,) rounded, flawed, and of but little value. No. 6 is a variety of rounded and crystallized pyrite (iron disulphide) often confused with the family of "meteoric stones." No. 7 is high-grade (pebble) scheelite (tungstate of lime.) No. 8 is iron ore (hematite.) No. 9 is jasper. No. 10 is biotitic granite ("black mica" disseminated throughout the mass.)

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, May 18.—Three world's records and five Olympic records were broken, one world's and one Olympic record were tied and still another record was approached within one-fifth of a second today, at the Pacific Coast Olympic trials on the Stanford oval. Horine of the Olympic Club of San Francisco, with a wonderful new mark of 6ft. 7in. in the running high jump—⅝ of an inch better than his own world's record, and Ralph Rose Olympic Club, with a new Olympic and world's record in the shot put of 50ft. 6⅝in. right and left hand aggregate, were the two particular stars.

Forrest Smithson (unattached) was a surprise of the trials. The world's record holder in the 110-meter hurdles finished third. Fred Kelly (U. S.C.) won in 15 3-5s., three-fifths of a second slower than Smithson's best time.

GEORGIA CONGRESSMEN CONGRATULATE TY COBB.

COBB has received hundreds of telegrams from all over the country commending his action and approving the stand of the Detroit players. Of all of these he takes more pleasure in a message from Washington signed by Senator A. O. Bacon and H. K. Smith and the entire eleven members of the Georgia delegation in the House of Representatives.

It read:

"As Georgians, we commend your action in resenting an uncalled-for insult. We hope for your complete exoneration and speedy restoration to a place in the clean sport of baseball. We are proud of your record as a leader of your profession."

National Episode.

DETROIT TEAM THREATENS TO GO TO NEW LEAGUE.

Ty Cobb Receives Hundreds of Telegrams Congratulating Him on His Action in Smiting the Vicious Fan—Players Say It Means a Baseball Revolution Unless Johnson Gives in.

[THE TIMES WIRELESS, CABLE, EASTERN AND OVERLAND NEWS SERVICE.]

PHILADELPHIA, May 18.—Is it to be a rebellion or a revolution in the American Baseball League?

The Detroit players today raised the standard of revolt by refusing to play the game with the Athletics after Ty Cobb had been refused permission to play and joined issue squarely with the powers and the American League and the result is bound to be one of two things. The Detroit team to a man must back down and reinstate Cobb must take down and reinstate Cobb without disciplining the rebels.

That Johnson will back down is not regarded as at all probable and fans are eagerly discussing what the result is going to be. Messages received today from leading men in every one of the American League teams, leave no doubt that the sympathy of the players in entirely with Cobb. Just how far this sympathy will go is a question which will be only answered by time. If the players of the various teams stand behind the Detroit men, it must mean a backdown by Johnson or the disruption of the league.

PLAYERS WANT TO KNOW.

As one of the players put the matter today, "It must not be forgotten that there is such a thing as the United States League in baseball today. If the American League players stand together, there will be little difficulty in arranging so that the teams of the American League clubs can go over in a body to the United States League. The American League will be left with its magnates and grounds and nothing else. We have no fight with the owners or the managers, but this is as good a time as any to find out whether Ban Johnson owns us body and soul.

"We asked nothing unreasonable. We saw the whole occurrence which led to Cobb's suspension, and we feel that he was fully justified. Without hearing our side of the case, Johnson suspended Cobb indefinitely. There is no right or justice in this. He might at least have given Jennings an opportunity to present Cobb's side of the case.

COBB TAKES NO PART.

"We might not have taken the action we have, if this was an isolated case, but it is simply one instance of many in which Johnson and the high-muck-a-mucks of baseball have treated the men as though they really were chattels. This last straw has brought the whole question to a crisis. If the men of other clubs will stand by us, and I believe they will in both leagues, this question will be settled once and for all, and baseball will be placed on a much healthier basis."

It may be said that Cobb had no part in the action taken by the Detroit players. He was fully prepared to take his medicine. He was deeply affected by the action of his teammates and said today:

"They are the bulliest lot of fellows in the world. It brings my heart up into my throat to see the manner in which they stood together in this matter."

Some Excitement.

SCENE ON SHIBE FIELD MAY BECOME HISTORICAL.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PHILADELPHIA, May 18.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The scene on the field at Shibe Park this afternoon was remarkable and may be historic.

At 2 o'clock the Detroit team arrived at the park in taxicabs. They were in ordinary clothes. They entered the park quickly and without any demonstration from the fans outside.

Going immediately to the visiting club's dressing rooms, they donned their uniforms and at 2:30 o'clock appeared upon the field.

The spectators, several thousand of whom were in the pavilion and bleachers, recognized Cobb as he appeared among the first of the Detroit players on the field. He was greeted with a thunderbolt of handclapping and whistling.

The players started to toss the ball around, but as soon as the umpires saw Cobb, they went up to him and told him to leave the field, as he was under suspension.

As soon as Cobb was seen leaving the grounds, the other players picked up their gloves and followed. Silently they filed out through the exit under the grand stand.

As the players passed out the stand rose to a man, it seemed, and applauded their action with an even greater demonstration than that which marked their entrance. The "TIMES" OCEAN-TO-OCEAN ORGANIZER AT BRAWLEY.

Sunrise Meeting at the Imperial Valley Town When the Car Leaves for Yuma After Perfecting the Organization of the Last Southern California Highway Division.

BY BERT C. SMITH.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

BRAWLEY (Cal.) May 17.—The Times' Ocean-to-Ocean pilot car rolled into Brawley this afternoon at 5 o'clock exactly on schedule time. The Times' car conquered the desert sands and made the run in the fastest time ever from Mecca to Brawley, climbing a 30 per cent. grade out of a dry wash and fighting through ten miles of deep sand. Our actual running time from Los Angeles to Brawley was 13 hours 25 minutes. This proves the highway is open and can be toured, even in its present condition, but in another month any motor car can make the trip in two days.

BRAWLEY ORGANIZED.

Brawley is the last city in Southern California to be organized into a division of the Ocean-to-Ocean Highway Association.

Thousands of good roads boosters welcomed The Times' car as it rolled into the Imperial Valley city this afternoon. The citizens turned out en masse as the machine was halted at the Bungalow Hotel, and Mayor Frank Beal and Harry B. Stewart, president of the Brawley Chamber of Commerce, formally welcomed the car and its crew.

The car was parked in the main street, following a request from several road boosters who wished to examine the motor.

When the men of Brawley were told that the car is "The Times' car" and that no advertising of automobiles, tires, oil, or anything else is to be done on this ocean-to-ocean tour, rousing cheers were given for the big project which is to mean the building of a highway from the Pacific to the Atlantic.

HIGHWAY ORGANIZERS GREETED BY THOUSANDS.

"Times" Car Gets as Far as Yuma Amid Wild Enthusiasm — Hundreds of Arizonans Inscribe Their Names on the Tonneau of Organizing Auto—Mitchell's Speech.

BY BERT C. SMITH.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

YUMA (Ariz.) May 18.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Thousands of enthusiastic citizens thronged the streets this afternoon when The Times car with John S. Mitchell, president of the Ocean-to-Ocean Highway Association, rolled into Yuma. Twenty miles from the Colorado River the car was met by a delegation of citizens headed by Attorney P. T. Robertson, who piloted the car to the ferry. The Ocean-to-Ocean organizers were scheduled to arrive at 5 o'clock. Dr. James A. Ketcherside, president of the Yuma Automobile Club, and Frank Baxter, judge of the Superior Court, greeted the auto editor of The Times at exactly 5, and a procession of motor cars was formed and The Times car was driven through the streets of Yuma while auto horns tooted a merry welcome. Dr. H. Vance, chairman of the Arizona Republican Central Committee, and City Councilman Paul Moretti took charge of the crew and the car was parked in the main street, where one of the largest throngs that has ever gathered in Yuma pressed close to the machine.

NAMES SCRIBBLED.

Names were eagerly scribbled on the tonneau, and the hood. Indians came from the reservation and joined in the peculiar welcome given the ocean-to-ocean highway organizers. President Mitchell told the assembled multitude the purpose of the trip across the continent and explained that The Times is sending this car over the Santa Fe trail to form divisions of the association, which has for its object the building of a great national highway from the Pacific to the Atlantic. Honors were poured on the crew and the plan was indorsed heartily. A division was formed with Dr. Ketcherside in charge and a rousing mass meeting was held in the City Hall, where a record throng listened to a speech from the Ocean-to-Ocean Highway Association president.

ON THE ROUTE.

The Times car is now 298.2 miles from Los Angeles, directly on the proposed route of the national highway.

We are 139 feet above sea level but we have traveled from Brawley, 73.9 miles away, where we were 119 feet below sea level. It has been hot but our car fought its way through the heat in spite of the fact that three miles of deep sand bars barred our progress. The Mammoth wash was conquered. President Mitchell worked Boom Business.

MOTOR TRUCKS INCREASE TRADE

Delivery Service Is Made More Efficient.

Horses Are Unable to Cover Long Routes in City.

Merchant Wants to Save Time and Money.

The progressive business man of today avails himself of every modern device for doing things economically, which at the same time is always a saver of time and labor. Past-century methods, in this age of progression, are an impediment.

If merchants in all lines would make a practice of keeping itemized accounts of the cost of their delivery system they would become easier converts to the use of motor trucks.

All must concede that stable equipment must be maintained, whether business is active or dull, and that the horse out of use is just as expensive as the horse in service.

Compare this with the economy of the motor vehicle which needs neither fuel nor oil except when in service, and which requires but little stable room and attention.

This is the most forcible, and will in all probability be the decisive, feature in inducing merchants to abandon past-century methods in favor of power-wagon transportation.

The amount of saving, of course, varies with business requirements. Speaking in general terms, it may be said that a power wagon kept in constant service will cut delivery cost from 20 per cent. upward.

The cost of transportation can be determined just as logically as the cost of operating any other machine. It is merely a question of measuring the work required and measuring the cost, and placing one against the other. In other words, measured service is all that is paid for.

Delivery in large cities is becoming more and more difficult, owing to the enormous territory to be covered, where a large trade is established and maintained.

The range of delivery service has gradually become extended until the horse is incapable of covering the ground, and is practically unfit for service the following day, whenever extended routes are attempted.

With motor trucks these long routes are easily covered. This makes possible earlier deliveries in districts which previously did not receive deliveries until the following day.

The increased efficiency of this service means increased satisfaction among the merchants' patrons. It is a strong feature in attracting a greater volume of trade. Quick deliveries are always appreciated, and the trade will inevitably drift to the store which can guarantee such service.

How He Learned.

THE FIRST TIME I EVER DROVE AN AUTOMOBILE.

Earl Y. Boothe the National Man Tells of the Wild Night When He Tried to Drive His Brother's Car Home—When He Finally Got Started He Couldn't Stop—Hit Milk Wagon.

BY EARL Y. BOOTHE
(Manager National Motor Car Co.)

This is the first of a series by well-known automobile men who will describe for the Sunday Finds their first attempt to drive an automobile.

ONE of the most important events in every man's life is the first time he ever drove a motor car.

My first experience as a pilot of these gasoline propelled vehicles was eight years ago during the declining days of those curved dash runabouts. That I live to tell the tale has always been one of the wonders of my young life.

As this was eight years ago I was naturally eight years younger than I am today and like all young men, even those of the present day, I longed to touch the lever that would make the inanimate object leap forward. I envied my brothers who were raising the dust tearing about the county in those high powered speed demons. Sterling, of the family of Boothe, already considered himself an expert and held the record for changing nine tires in one day and replacing a drive shaft. All I could do was to get grease on my hands and wonder how a man could ever gain such wonderful mechanical knowledge. In the intervening years my knowledge has broadened on this subject to some extent. (I make this explanation so as not to frighten off friends who desire to ride in one of my new Nationals.) Note the clever manner in which I slipped in a little advertising for the National.

A WILD NIGHT.

But to return to the subject of my first wild drive. The scenery was properly set. It was a dark, stormy night. The wind howled without and the rain came down in torrents and then some.

My brother had an important business engagement and wishing to be on time had taken the street car, leaving his speed monster in front of our house. When the rain began to fall I felt for the poor machine exposed to the elements but not having had as much experience pushing automobiles as I afterwards secured I preferred to sit by the fireside and be comfortable.

As I remember I was deep in the mysteries of a Sherlock Holmes adventure when there was an ominous ring of the telephone. I arose slowly and said hello. And this is what I heard:

"This you Earle? This is Sterling. Say, is it raining out there? Well, take that car of mine and drive it home."

I had never driven a car, knew nothing whatever about it. But Sterling would rather risk it with me than have it washed away and so he proceeded to explain to me over the telephone how to run the car.

EASY STUNT! HUH!

Any motorist can appreciate what an easy task it must be to explain the operation of a motor car over the telephone to a novice. By taking notes I finally said I would undertake it. Equipping myself with boots and a rubber coat I went forth.

Starting it was some event. I turned the little crank and when that one lung engine began to pop I almost lost my nerve. Finally I got into the seat and shoved the low speed lever. The car gave one violent lunge and stopped. This was bad, but I did have a flash of intelligence and piled out to crank it again. Before cranking it I discovered that the cause of the sudden stop had been my failure to release the brake. I gave the engine a turn and with a snort the car shot down the street and left me standing there in amazement. I had left it in the low. Its progress was halted by a pile of bricks with no more serious damage than a busted tire and a battered lamp. Pulling it into the street again I once more started and, by great care, got it to running in the low. In my excitement I forgot I had a high and proceeded to rush along on the low speed at the terrific pace of five miles an hour.

THE MOTOR STOPPED.

I went fully two blocks when with a sputtering the motor stopped. This time I was stuck. I cranked that car until I was blue in the face. It would not shoot once. Then a remarkable thing happened. Some strange force whispered to me to see if I had any gasoline and, lo, the tank was dry. This meant a walk of several blocks back home for gasoline, and all the time the rain was coming down in sheets.

A delay of half an hour and I was again on my way. In a few minutes I reached Sterling's home and bravely turned toward the driveway. I knew nothing about skidding and when that car began to turn round and round in the middle of the street I was ready to jump out and beat it. Good fortune was with me and I finally stopped whirling with the front wheels headed for the driveway and in the car shot. Half way to the barn (we call them garages nowadays) a terrible thought came to me. I had forgotten how to stop. There was no time to think, and with a crash that could be heard a block, I went through the back of that barn and on into a vacant lot behind. I was frightened but game. I held onto that steering post as the car leaped the curb and started down the street. The crash had brought out Mrs. Boothe and a few friends. The policeman arrived and I presented a wonderful picture going round and round the block while a dozen people ran alongside giving me advice as to how to stop.

MILK WAGON RESCUE.

But luck was with me that night. When I had about given up hope a milk wagon turned in from a side street. Never before or since have I welcomed the sight of a milk wagon as I did that one. I got my eye on it and steered that motor demon straight into the rear end. There was a smash, a cry of alarm as the milkman shot through space and for a second I thought the milky way had been turned loose as the shower of cream and milk fairly drowned me. But that speed marvel stopped and I gladly paid for enough milk to start two dairies.

BENZ TO COMPETE IN GRAND PRIX.

Louis F. Benton has received instructions to ship the 120 Benz, driven by David Bruce Brown in the Santa Monica Road Race, to New York. From there, it will be shipped to France to compete in the Grand Prix in July.

It was through Benton's personal efforts that De Palma and Brown were secured for the Santa Monica and Motordrome events, and while the speed men were here, the Mercer man looked after their interests and is well informed as to their racing plans for the future.

He claims that both De Palma and Brown will be up on Mercer cars, in their class, in the French Grand Prix.

For the benefit of those who seldom have the opportunity of inspecting a racing car at close range, the manager of the Mercer Automobile Sales Company of Southern California, located at No. 23 West Green street, Pasadena, has placed both racing cars on exhibition today and Monday and extends an invitation to all motor followers to call and see them.

FORECASTS BIG SEASON.

Motor Car Industry Will Have Greatest Business Ever Known, Says Enterprising Manager.

B. C. Spitzley, assistant general manager of the Abbott Motor Company, believes that from the position the motor car has gained among the most important industries of the nation, there is no doubt but what the coming season is to be the greatest in the history of the automobile industry.

Political situations have forecast no trouble and it is unreasonable to believe that the business should be affected, for it cannot be given a separate classification in financial matters, as it is so thoroughly interwoven with every conceivable interest.

"The firm financial conditions and the prosperity of the country since the opening of the present season, have not only been sustained with surprising fidelity, but they have shown constant increase," said the Abbott man in talking over the automobile situation yesterday. "These have truly been important contributing factors to the growth and production of the automobile industry during the past seven months.

"Not for a single moment has there occurred the slightest fluctuation or uneasiness as to the security of the business, or output for the year. The motor car has gained an enviable position among the great industries of the nation. There is an imperative demand for cars ranging to the extreme in prices. From the great corporation down to the average farmer, the motor car is considered an indispensable article."

BULLETINS ON TRUCKS.

Sporting Goods House of Detroit Adopts a Novel Method of Advertising.

A novel way of advertising some of their special goods has been adopted by the T. B. Rayl & Co., one of the hardware and sporting goods houses of Detroit. They use one of their General Motors two-ton trucks and have made two panels about two feet wide and the full length of the vehicle, which they have placed at either side. They use these surfaces as their bulletin boards. The truck covers almost the entire city each day and they figure that this is about the best advertising they can get.

An electric truck test was recently made by C. L. Morgan, sales manager of the General Motors Truck Company. For strenuousness it would compare well with the stunts accomplished with the gasoline type trucks. During the last snow storm, one of the men from the plant drove a three-ton G.M.C. electric from Pontiac to Detroit. It was during a severe blizzard and the truck carrying a full load ran within 20 per cent. of its rated mileage.

The roads were in a bad condition, the snow piling high in some places, but through it all the little truck did its work well, covering in all a distance of twenty-six miles.

Preliminary to the erection of its new clubhouse and garage, the Automobile Club of Philadelphia will remove its offices. The contract for the clubhouse and garage has been let, and it is expected the building will be finished by the middle of October next.

He Is With Us.

GRAVES OF FORD BRANCH BOOSTS NATIONAL ROAD.

B. L. GRAVES, the Ford man, is one of the most consistent road boosters in this city. He first became identified with the good roads movement when in 1906 he routed a highway from El Paso to Dallas, Tex. This road is now in first-class shape and the citizens of El Paso and vicinity are fighting for the national highway.

URGED FEDERAL AID.

When Graves first became associated with the motor car industry he came out flat-footed for an ocean-to-ocean highway. He was one of the first dealers in this country to propose Federal aid. This suggestion was even more unpopular then than it seems to be at the present time.

While seeking for an outlet east from El Paso Graves decided to drive a Ford car through, and he made a run which was sensational. The little twenty-horse-power car was driven out into the desert, and in spite of the rough roads, Graves sent the car through and demonstrated that a highway could be built.

TRIP THROUGH ARIZONA.

When Graves first took charge of the local Ford branch he announced his intention of doing all in his power to promote the good roads movement. He recently made a run through Arizona which took in all of the principal towns of the new State. He was absent for more than a month, and visited every Ford agent on his long journey.

A Business Man.

OLDFIELD WILL MARKET CLUTCH PATENTED HERE.

BARNEY OLDFIELD will leave for the East in a few days to perfect arrangements whereby the Oldfield clutch, patented by Sam Carter of this city, will be placed on the market. This clutch appears to answer many of the questions which puzzle many motorists.

Though he has become one of the biggest boosters for Firestone tires, Oldfield has decided to devote at least a part of his time to this clutch for which he claims so much. The famous driver declares the clutch is "fool-proof."

This particular clutch was given an interesting demonstration by Sam Carter on Thursday and was placed on a Cutting car. Then Oldfield himself took the machine and sent the car through a gruelling test which was so thorough there seemed little room for argument regarding its effectiveness.

Another invention in which Oldfield is particularly interested is a transmission on which Carter is working. "From low to high" is an easy stunt for the Los Angeles man, who also sent the car through the paces from "low to reverse" gears with the car moving along at a lively pace.

MORE MOTOR TRUCKS.

Opening of Panama Canal Will Stimulate the Trade as Never Before—Easterner Enthusiastic.

It is believed by many of the leading motor men that the opening of the Panama Canal and the holding of the Panama-San Francisco Exposition in 1915 will add greatly to the increase in the demand for motor trucks along the Coast.

Many manufacturers realize this and are prepared to meet the demand. They have already representatives of their companies on the ground.

E. E. Haskin, traveling sales representative for the Alco, has spent four months in the West, and returned to the factory with the firm belief that this section of the country will be the field for the motor truck during the coming year.

"The oil, lumber, mining and fruit industries have created a steady growing demand for heavy-duty trucks," said Haskin. "Mining operations afford a particularly large field for trucks because here the cost of transportation by horses is excessive, and railroad facilities often are inadequate. In some sections terminals are from between fifty to 100 miles from the mine. Motor trucks in many instances have made a paying investment of what otherwise would have been worthless property.

"This condition had created an extensive interurban service in the West. In many of the mountainous sections where the railroads have not yet entered it is a common thing to see trucks hauling supplies along the country roads."

MOONLIGHT AUTO TOURS POPULAR.

Cool Summer Breezes Entice Tired Business Man.

Beach and Mt. Washington Trips Enjoyable.

Glittering Lights a Delight to Motorist Eye.

BY AL G. WADDELL.

Traveling abroad in the cool of the evening in his own automobile, after the cares of business have been put aside, the business man motorist enjoys one of the most delightful pleasures imaginable.

Moonlight motoring is popular all through the year, but with the coming of summer and the hot weather, the busy man, who, during the winter months never takes the car out of the garage after dark except on business, answers the call of the cool breezes and may be seen out with his family after the lights have been switched on.

There is a peculiar fascination about this moonlight automobiling. Winding above the city where the glittering lights appear far below on an enormous diamond, then dropping into the dark hollows of some canyon like roadway, is in itself, interesting. But, to climb in a touring car to a place from where the whole city is visible and to watch the sky transformed from that indescribable hue of "Western Sunset" to the black of night and to see the lights come on in film like radiance, is described by an Eastern visitor as "simply glorious."

SCENIC SHORT TOURS.

It is surprising how much of Southern California can be seen in short tours of say, from two to four hours. There are drives where you find yourself away from the lines of travel. There are drives where there is a continuous string of motor cars racing back and forth in one joyous race for pleasure and there are rides along the ocean front where the moonlit waters dance.

There is one trip which takes in Santa Monica, Ocean Park and Venice, a distance of thirty-five miles over good roads and one of the most attractive tours to be undertaken anywhere in the West.

In making this after dark run, drive out either Figueroa street or South Main to Washington. Turn west and follow Washington to the tracks of the Los Angeles Pacific Short Line electric cars. After passing the little city of Venice, it is possible to take the speedway to Ocean boulevard, on the ocean front. The return to the city is through the Palms and Hollywood. From Hollywood keep on Sunset boulevard to the city. There is a side trip that may be taken from West Hollywood, through Laurel Canyon and up Looking Mountain Drive.

From the summit of Lookout Mountain one enjoys one of the most beautiful views to be obtained anywhere. The trip is well worth while and may be taken in a short period of time.

MT. WASHINGTON TRIP.

A city tour of great interest is the trip to the top of Mt. Washington and through Elysian Park. Leaving the heart of the city, follow North Main street to Avenue 39, follow the avenue to North Broadway, which is reached beyond the new bridge. Then keep on North Broadway to Pasadena and follow Pasadena to Avenue 39. At Avenue 39 cross the Garvanza car tracks, turn north on Marmion Way to Mt. Washington drive and follow the drive to the summit of the mountain.

From the top of Mt. Washington a most beautiful view of the city is a delight to the eye. In returning to the city there are two loops which may be followed but the roads are not as good for the drive. One of these roads runs to Eagle Rock Valley and the other winds around the hill side into Garvanza.

SERIES OF TURNS.

To come down Mt. Washington drive does not take so long at the hotel. The view coming down far surpasses the ascent. The road is one continuous series of turns and it is necessary to keep a close lookout on the road. At the foot of the mountain, if there is still time to spare, a run may be made out Pasadena avenue to Garvanza, into South Pasadena and back to the city over Huntington drive.

AUTO LICENSE TAGS.

The Secretary of State of Wisconsin has settled an interesting question raised by owners who have had their cars repainted during the winter season. Requests were made for permission to repaint the license tags now carried on front and rear of all cars, the same color of the car. This permission was denied, as the new law requires that all license tags used during the year 1912 by all cars must be uniform in color. The color changes by the Secretary of state. This year tags are cardinal, with numerals in white. The combination appeals to some owners.

Walter M. Brown of the Brown-Symonds Company, will leave for the East Tuesday morning, to be gone at least a month. While combining business and pleasure, the Stutz man will visit New York, and a number of the large cities, and will take in the great 500-mile race over the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, May 30.

Oliver H. Perry of the Columbus Buggy Company, manufacturers of the Columbus Electric and the Firestone Columbus cars, is in the city, having stopped over on a flying trip to the Coast, which he is making for the purpose of looking over conditions of the automobile business.

Volney S. Beardsley has planned several trips of interests for his guest, and the two will visit a number of the suburban agents while the factory chief is here.

W. J. Burt returned to the city last Thursday morning, after an absence of one week and five days. The Auburn agent hurried to Detroit and other automobile centers of the East, taking advantage, as he supposed, of a dull week, that of the Shrine conclave, but, upon his return, was informed that his staff had sold more cars during his absence than during the same length of time at any part of the year. The joke seems to be on Burt. However, I imagine he can stand more of the same brand of humor.

The Mayor of San Diego has purchased a Stutz. After riding to a fire in the car operated by the Chief, he decided in favor of the car, which has made such a great hit in these parts of late.

The Warren-Detroit is attracting attention in the bean country, and last week Volney S. Beardsley delivered one to Santa Barbara and two to Ventura. These cars were driven overland from the local Warren house on West Seventh street by the new owners.

Reuce Anthony has turned his Reo racer into a runabout. Springs have been rigged under the seat, and tanks have been attached to the vetoran of the light car race. Young Anthony claims that it will be used for a joy-ride car, but without guards and a windshield, the speed at which the fourth place man drives, will be very annoying to say the least, and there is little sport to be had in riding alone.

The day after the Apperson "Jack Rabbit" arrived in Montreal, after the remarkable run from Kokomo, Ind., the Chief of the fire department was using it to answer calls. It had not been washed, but was just as it had finished the long overland run.

The latest Senatorial addition to the ranks of motorists is United States Senator Jacob H. Gallinger. He has purchased an Apperson "Jack Rabbit" from the Washington dealer and when Congress adjourns, will make a tour to his home in New Hampshire.

Notice has come from the Bakersfield Motorcycle Club warning automobile parties intending to pass through Exeter, in Tulare county. It seems that there is a great tendency on the part of some over-puffed official in that vicinity, to arrest parties for speeding when they are traveling at a speed of eight and ten miles an hour, and the Automobile Club of Southern California is called upon for assistance.

The Warren Detroit racer was shipped to Fresno last Wednesday afternoon. This car, though finishing fourth in its division, made a great showing. In a field of eight cars, there were four "40's" and the Warren was a "30." During the long run, the car made but one stop, that was for oil.

Although the Warren took only fourth place, just below the money, it proved that it was there as a racer.

Bekins-Speers Motor Company are doing a nice business since their 1913 announcement came out; and have a record of seven Loziers in seven days.

The six-cylinder left drive of the new Lozier is making a great hit and one Lozier enthusiast predicts that within two years, all high class cars will build nothing but the new left-hand drive.

Manager La Casse of the Studebaker Corporation's new retail department, has completed his sales organization, one of these all-star affairs. Those who are assisting La Casse in demonstrating Studebaker superiority are L. E. Kimball, J. H. Owings, and G. Ivan Hamblin. The shop is in charge of G. O. Shannon, an old veteran with the E-M-F "30" and Flanders "20."

The Vance-Canavan Motor Company, California distributors of Case, Cartercar and Halladay automobiles, have recently increased their garage space, and are now occupying the entire garage formerly used by the Motor Car Maintenance Company, who have moved to their new location at 1507-25 East First street.

With the garage space of 70-140 feet, the Vance-Canavan Company will be in better position than ever to take care of their rapidly increasing business, and they cordially invite all owners of Case, Cartercar and Halladay automobiles to call on them for service.

SIX CYLINDERS ONLY.

Lozier Factory Discontinues Building Four-Cylinder Cars to Specialize on "Big Six."

The Lozier Motor Company is the first automobile plant to confine itself exclusively to the building of the six-cylinder motor cars. The announcement that the firm has discontinued the construction of the four-cylinder car has just been verified.

C. A. Emlen, sales manager of the Lozier Company, in commenting on the change in the company's plans stated that it is the belief of the officials as well as of the general public that a six-cylinder motor is a necessity in a high-power car.

"The trend of popular taste in motor cars has been well illustrated in the past two years by the decreasing sale of high-priced four-cylinder cars," said the Lozier representative.

"It was several months ago, when we announced our 1912 models that our decision was reached to discontinue the building of the four-cylinder car. Our experience has been an example. Last year we sold on an average five cars of the six-cylinder type to every one of the four-cylinder models and this settled any doubts we may have had as to the abandonment of the fours in 1913.

"Because we were early in the field, our six-cylinder car was the first of that type to win a big event in motor car racing in America. Until the Lozier six won the twenty-four-hour race at Brighton Beach in 1908 the six-cylinder machine was an unknown quantity in racing events. In 1909 a few sixes were entered in racing events, and two Lozier sixes won first and second places in the twenty-four-hour race of that year.

It was then that the manufacturers began to take notice, and the following year there was competition and other six-cylinder motors appeared in the races. The Lozier six still holds the twenty-four-hour stock car record made in the second year of its existence.

"The six-cylinder motor not only gets favor from the public for its racing record, but for its superiority in meeting conditions of city traffic and touring. In hill-climbing and other features of cross-country touring the sixes have demonstrated times without number the increased efficiency obtained from the two extra cylinders."

To Handle Fords.

STEARNS TO EXTEND HIS CAMPAIGN WITH STODDARD

E. ROGER STEARNS has arranged to handle the Ford car at retail from the Standard Motor Car Company headquarters. The well known Stoddard-Dayton agent says the demand for a small car is such that he has decided to handle the Ford in addition to the Stoddard Savoy.

With a car like the Savoy the Stoddard line is most complete. It ranges from the high-priced Stoddard-Dayton Silent Knight, to the low-priced Savoy car, and with the addition of the Ford, it means that Stearns has the widest range of cars now on the market.

The Stoddard headquarters are fitted up in elegant style and on the salesroom floor, in addition to the cars already given space the Ford roadster and a Ford touring car will have positions of honor.

Business at the Stoddard has been particularly good the past month. Stearns is planning a campaign that should be one of the most strenuous the Stoddard-Dayton man has ever launched.

The Ford is to be handled at retail and is not to be made to conflict in any way with the Ford branch, which is in charge of B. L. Graves. The way Stearns put it is: "This means that justice will be done to all our customers."

Secretary of State Lamansky reports that 58,732 automobile owners and 30,470 chauffeurs have been licensed in New York State for the fiscal year beginning February 1. The State has received a total of $609,073 in fees, $539,954.50 from owners and $70,019 from chauffeurs.

Under the new traffic ordinance in effect in Newark, N. J., the automobilist who misuses his warning signal is guilty of a misdemeanor, and liable to a fine. The ordinance is the outcome of a consistent attempt to obviate the needless noise evil, and at the same time to increase the safety of the streets.

Creed of the Elmore

I

I am valveless.

II

BECAUSE I am valveless, I am simplicity itself in my construction.

III

I have only fifteen moving parts.

IV

BUT, I have twice the impulse to every turn of my flywheel than any other four-cylinder motor.

V

BECAUSE I am valveless, I am silent.

VI

MY power impulses overlap—that is why I can crawl along city streets when other cars jump, fret and jerk, in an effort to move slowly without shifting gears.

VII

I am sensitive—the slightest touch of the throttle and I am eagerly speeding up hill, down dale, through sand and mud at any desired speed.

VIII

I am sure of my spark, because I am equipped with a dual ignition system — the famous Atwater-Kent and the Magneto—two sets of spark plugs.

IX

I am the foe of the repair man—no carbon deposits, no valves to tinker, no springs to replace, no poppets to adjust. My few parts are so constructed that I am always adjusted.

X

I am made in my entirety at the Elmore factory by the one and most reliable engine builders in the country. I am a High Duty Motor; my position is permanent; I am endorsed by millions.

In the center is Wild Bill Russe, who timed the fast day afternoons at Washington Park, and now has the speed of every Portland and Vernon ball player down in his note book.

It all started this way. The Pope manager claimed that Kane of the Vernon Club was faster in getting to first base than Doane, the speed boy of the Beaver tribe. George Adair, who is Bill's first lieutenant in the automobile army, insisted that Doane was the faster, on account of batting left handed, which gave him an advantage. "Bill" Hosea and Walt McCredie were interviewed and the Vernon manager insisted that Kane was the "ist ter," while the ruler of the Beavers stood with Adair. There was but one way to do and that was to go out to the ball park and time the men in a game. This was done and some interesting features developed during the afternoon's play.

Bill Russe is known all over the coast as an accurate timer, and his word is a "bit there" with the stop watch also. Therefore, the figures figured out stand for the real thing in speed line.

The first round brought Doane down the 30-yard stretch in 4 seconds flat. This was considered fast, till Walter Rapps stepped off the distance in 3 4-5 seconds and Bancroft rambled the same distance in 3 3-5 seconds, in second inning.

Kane was not timed the first time. He failed to speed and merely trotted to the first landing; but the second time he came to the rubber, he started out one out to Rodgers and was compelled to ramble. His time was fast, the same as made by Doane.

Chadbourne reached first on 3 2-5s, and during the game and Litschi was but a second slower.

Adair, who bats right handed, managed to succeed in 7 1-5s., which is very fast time for the distance on a roundaway course.

Rodgers raced to first in 3 3-5s. and during the game and Baynes made it 4 flat once. Bill Rapps is not a slugger and made the ninety feet in 4 1-5. Burrell was not in form and was one of the slowest in the class, doing the distance in 4 4-5s.

The speed act of the afternoon was the three bag race, in eighth inning. Doane made it to third from the plate, of the bat in the remarkable time of 11 1-5s. That is real speed. Watching the turns a lot of time and 150 course stretches well over 90 yards, as the turn at first is also wide and at second there is also chance of making speed without losing a wide sweep.

One interesting discovery made by Bill Russ, was the difference in the time that fly balls to the outfield stay in the air. From the crack of the bat to the slap into the fielder's mitt, a fly to deep center was timed at 3 1-5s. In the eighth, Rappe made a low drive to the same spot which was caught in 3 1-5s. One high fleater to Kane was in the air 7s. and another was returned from the shadow of the fence to second in 7 4-5.

Infield hits were fielded to first from short, in 3 3-5 and 3 2-5. The fastest time caught on a play from second to first was 3 2-5, while a number of throws from the third station were recorded in 3 1-5. This was from the crack of the bat to the infielder and across to first.

From the time taken by Russ, it looks as if the left-handed batter has about two-fifths of a second on the right-handed slugger. Some of the infties are considered faster in the game than the right-handed lads, but in the get-away they have no chance when it comes to a race for speed.

What made Bill's timing of greater interest to the players, was the fact that they did not know that they were being timed, and in the clubhouse, after the game, both teams were anxious for the watch to be put on their paces again. Some time in the near future Russ will go out with his watch again and this time will tell the boys what he is up to.

NOVEL CAR FOR VANDERBILT.

Millionaire Purchases Alco, Which Is Furnished in Unique Style and Has Lines Like Racer.

The Alco car just received by William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., is unique for the novel body lines, which were designed after ideas of the owner. The car is of the tourabout type. Mr. Vanderbilt drove a racabout on the same six-cylinder Alco chasis last year, following the feat of the Alco in twice winning the race for the Vanderbilt cup.

With its new body, the car has the appearance of a racer. Among the conspicuous features are the rikish steering column and a considerable tilt of the fenders, which narrow down at the front. The seats are built close to the tonneau floor.

In place of running board along the sides, there is a step close to each rear door. The doors open from back to front. The body lines dip instead of possessing the straight line effect familiar among motor cars of today.

CARTERCAR POPULAR.

Pontiac Factory Running Day and Night in an Effort to Catch Up With Orders.

As a result of the steadily growing popularity of their friction-driven car, the Cartercar Company of Pontiac, Mich., is running both day and night, to catch up with their orders. They planned to put out only 1000 cars this year, and already far more than the number for the first four months have been delivered.

"In the East as well as the West our sales are increasing by leaps and bounds," said Harry R. Radford, general sales manager of the Cartercar Company, "we receive orders every day from sections of the country where just a few years ago the motor car was unheard of. In our morning's mail today we received over fifty orders, covering the country from Los Angeles to Boston, and the Canadian Northwest to Florida."

It is certainly unusual for a motor car concern to be so far behind their orders at this time of the year.

In order that you can get 100% value, we prefer to buy daily and keep our stocks always fresh.

The Strike.

HAP AND KANE DISCUSS COBB.

Declare Striking Players Have No Chance.

Hap Says that Ty Should Have Called a Cop.

Fans Sometimes Get Very Rabit in Abuse.

BY OWEN R. BIRD.

Many of the fans are wondering what the local ball players and managers think of the trouble in the East at the present time over Ty Cobb and his suspension by President Ban Johnson. When the local players learned that Cobb had been indefinitely put out of the game there was a great many opinions expressed on the subject.

Hap Hogan, manager of the Vernon Tigers, came out with the statement that there was no ball player in the world who could start what Cobb started, and get by with it.

"There is too much money invested in the American League," said Hap, "and if one or two ball players or two whole teams for that matter can get the best of $50,000,000, I will have to be shown."

Hogan went on to say that he was for Cobb in his actions, only he thought he should have dealt with the fan who insulted him outside of the park and not in the bleachers. It seems that the park management was some little at fault here, as there are several policemen in all the major league parks who have nothing else to do but put obnoxious fans out of the grounds. Evidently this particular fan was not touched, and Cobb had to take the law into his own hands.

PREVIOUS "STRIKES."

But if past history can be taken as any criterion it would seem that the players do not have much luck when they buck an organization of the size of the National or American League. In 1892 eight of the St. Louis players were blacklisted for throwing games, and the teams of the league tried to get them reinstated, but there was nothing doing, and the rest of the teams in the league supplied players, and the result in this instance was that St. Louis won 40 per cent of its games and the pennant on the side.

When the San Francisco earthquake occurred in 1906 the Pacific Coast League was nearly disrupted, and all that was left on the Los Angeles who had jumped their contracts during the trouble caused by the quake, and Los Angeles went on the road for three weeks and won 40 per cent of the games played.

Ban Johnson made the American golden team was Dillon, Cravath and Stuhe Ellis. The other teams lent them men to take the places of the League, and it is a cinch that the league officials will stand by anything he does, no matter what the players and the fans may think.

JOHNNY KANE SAYS—

On the other side of the question Johnny Kane came to the front with a few sane arguments. Johnny was in the major league during four seasons, and is one of the best-fitted ball players on the Coast to express an opinion.

The first thing Kane said was that if Cobb got by with this, he was the only player in the game today who could turn the trick. "That fellow has the players and the fans behind him," said Kane, "and I think he may start something in the East that will cause the league some trouble to finish."

Kane is right in view of the fact that Cobb is one of the greatest drawing cards the game has ever produced. He is the one head-liner in the American League today and it would hurt the league and the game itself to have him thrown out of organized ball and blacklisted on account of his actions in this case.

All the players seemed very rabid on the matter of personal abuse from the bleachers. They don't care when the fans roast them for bad plays or failure to hit, but when these same fans get personal and take up private matters for public abuse, then the player will fight because he is a man and the fans in the bleachers should respect the ball player's private life as much as that of any other citizen in the country. To a man, the players and managers are for trimming the fan who gets nasty in a personal way and one and all uphold Cobb for his action and blame the park management more than anything else.

Kane and Hogan both said that Cobb ought not to be put out of the game for more than three or five days or fined more than $100, but it was the indefinite stuff that would do the harm.

SMALL FINE ENOUGH.

Kane said: "The players would not think a thing about it if Cobb had been given five days or $100 fine, but to put him out for the season was too much and I think there will be a little trouble before it is finally settled."

In speaking of how the matter would affect the Coast League, Hogan said there would not be a tremor here and that the league was too strong for it, if there was anything started.

"We will go on in our own way," said Hap, "and take it from me, this league is in a place where it would make the National or the American League hump to hurt us; not that they could not do it, but it would make them hump, and just for this reason it would take a whole lot more feeling among the eastern players to cause any trouble here now, than has been raised over this affair with Cobb."

Van Court's Philosophy.

NEXT CHAMPION MAY BE A UNIVERSITY GRADUATE.

"The Old Master" Who Taught Jim Jeffries to Box Discusses Boxing in the Colleges—Says the Campus and Not the Boiler-Shop Is the Place to Look for the Next White Hope.

BY DE WITT VAN COURT.

I AM pleased to see that the eastern colleges are seriously thinking of adding boxing to their athletic work. Boxing will leave an opening for many college boys who cannot make other of the athletic teams. It is pretty safe to say that about ninety per cent. of the freshmen that enter college have a desire to make some of the athletic teams. Many are too small or too delicate for football and other sports. But boxing gives all who are not crippled in some way, a chance to try and win a championship.

The classes are eight in the amateur rules, under which all college contests are held. It also gives the slender chap an equal chance with the rugged and strong boy. In other words, the brain is given an equal chance with the brawn. The success of college boxing will depend entirely on the instructors, and attention should be given to get the best for this work. It will no doubt be carried along the lines of other college work and that is the scientific way. Boxing, if carried along the right lines, will surely bring better results than football or any other kind of athletic work.

Many college boys have made good as professional baseball players, and the brainiest players we have in the game today are college graduates.

It is quite possible to do the same thing with college boxing. If I were asked to hunt up a new white hope, the back woods, iron foundries and boiler shops would be the last place I would go to look for one. Straight to one of the big colleges for me. It is here that you can find a combination of the brawn and brains that are so lacking in most fighters. It should also be taken up just as systematically as any other college study. It is a science and an art. The scientific part would come from a close study and the art and skill from constant practice along systematic lines.

No really scientific boxer became such without plenty of deep study. The college boy has a very decided advantage over all others in this respect. If it is really intended to be given a good trial, it would be well to start by forming a class in the different colleges, for the express purpose of developing instructors for this work alone. This would take several years' time, but it would bring much more satisfactory results in the end.

Few, if any, professional pugilists would do for this kind of work. While many of these men are clever boxers, there are very few that are able to impart their knowledge to others. Boxing and fighting is one thing and teaching in an intelligent manner is another. It is to be hoped that it will be entered into in as serious a manner as other college work. There is no more reason why boxin should be any more degrading than baseball, and not half as much so as football.

FOUR STATES TOUR.

Great Western "40" Blazing Trail Through Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Kentucky.

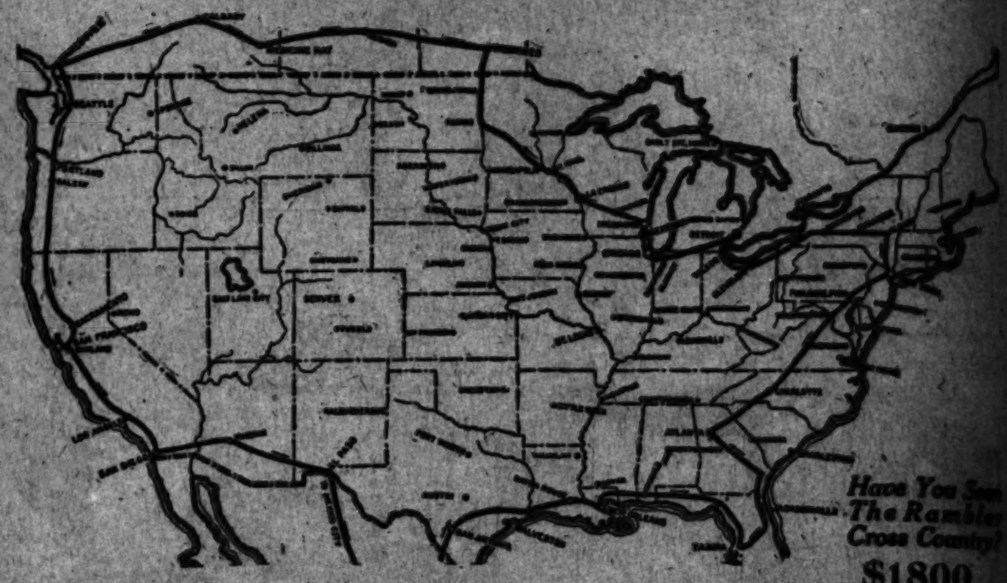
The trail for the Four States Tour of the Indiana Automobile Manufacturers' Association, which starts in the near future is now being blazed by a Great Western "40." This tour will cover a distance of 1450 miles and is looked upon as being one of the most important held in the Middle West this year.

Only cars are eligible to enter that are manufactured in the State of Indiana. There are forty-three automobile manufacturers in the State and it is believed that there will be a representative car of every one of the forty-three makes. The tour will take in the four States, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Kentucky.

Clarence LaMar is the driver on the Great Western car that was chosen by the manufacturers to make the pathfinding trip. It will be a hard strain on both the car and the driver. LaMar will also be at the wheel of the Great Western during the actual tour. He has handled these cars in many of the big events held throughout the country and has always finished with a good record. He will not get out on the pathfinding trip with the idea of making a record but will cover the 1450 miles and give an intelligent laying out of the course.

The interest of the motorists of the four States which will be invaded make it apparent that it is to be an enjoyable run to all participants.

What The Rambler 10,000 Mile Guarantee Means



This map gives you a graphic idea of what the Rambler guarantee means to you in point of mileage.

THIS guarantee is backed by every one of our Rambler dealers and branches. One of them is located nearby and is perhaps known to you.

Back of them is a factory employing eighteen hundred men, with a floor area of twenty acres and producing ninety-six per cent of the parts that go to make up this car.

This factory has produced twenty-two thousand Rambler motor cars and the average cost for repair parts on each one of these cars last year was only twelve dollars and ninety cents.

Some of these cars have been in use eleven years. One-half of them have been in use five years or more. These are the facts which warrant our confidence in the Rambler to the extent of giving the signed guarantee for ten thousand miles.

The Cross Country sales to date are three times those of last year.

See the car and you will learn the first reason—its appearance.

Ride in the car and you will know the second reason—its comfort.

Ask your banker about the stability of this company—his answer is the third reason.

This ten thousand mile guarantee is the fourth reason. Appearance, comfort, stability and the 10,000 mile guarantee.

Are not these reasons enough?

GET PREPARED FOR THE BIGGE... HELD IN SOUTHERN CALIFO...

On June 1, just two weeks off, one of the largest and most brilliant grammar school track meets ever held in Southern California will take place. It is expected that over seven hundred contestants will participate in the sports. A large crowd will witness one of the keenest meets that was ever arranged for the grammar school boy. The grand stand will have its representatives from each school from the surrounding towns and villages, while the city schools with their rooters and colors bearers, will make the day more brilliant. The different schools will have their track teams and each, or most of the participants will wear the color of his school and fight for a first or second place, and the coveted prize of a twelve days' vacation to each and every boy who is successful in getting a first or a second place in this big affair. There will be no limit to entries and every boy is entitled to take part in all the events of his division. If a boy is entered for all events and wins a first or a second place, he will be barred from entering any other event, as he might stop someone else from getting the treasured prize of twelve days at the Times Camp at Catalina.

Besides the prizes given by The Times, several merchandise prizes and numerous prizes from sporting goods houses will be given to the third-place winners for effort in trying to land the trip. Red, white and blue ribbons will be given to first, second and third-place winners of each event; these ribbons will count as follows: Blue five points, red three points, white one point.

The manager of the camp wants every boy who has a desire to become an athlete or who cares for sport in any way, and who is a member of some grammar school, to be present at this big meet given for their benefit, and with the hope that every boy who enters, will follow the out-door life more extensively than ever before, and wishes that each one may make good as one of our star athletes of Southern California.

The meet will probably be held on the Y.M.C.A. Field. All boys should have track suits, but they are not necessary. Spikes will be allowed.

Five events will start about 11:20 a.m. All boys should be on the field by 11 o'clock. Watch the Pink and Blue columns for further news.

Boys' Tennis Tournament.

A whooping big tennis tournament for grammar school boys and girls is to be held on the Mt. Washington hotel courts Thursday, May 30, Friday, May 31, and Saturday, June 1.

The inter-grammar school tennis will consist of the following events: Boys' singles, two entrants from each grammar school; boys' doubles, one team from each grammar school; girls' singles, two entrants from each grammar school; girls' doubles, one team from each grammar school.

The semi-finals will be played on Thursday and Friday and the finals on Saturday, June 1. There will be several prizes for the winning teams. These Catalina Camp of four days each in the boys winning the grammar school singles championship, and one trip to each of the boys on the championship doubles team.

All entries close Saturday night, May 18, with L. A. Henry, at Henry & Curatts sporting goods store, 443 South Spring street.

Every entrant must be a bona-fide student in good standing in the institution which he represents.

An entry fee of fifty cents will be charged for each entrant in each event in the college and high school classes and twenty-five cents for each entrant in each event in the grammar school class.

The tournament is sanctioned by the Southern California Lawn Tennis Association, which is a member of the National Lawn Tennis Association.

A large number of clever players from the various grammar schools have entered the tournament and interest is at fever heat, as it is about the first time that the "Little Fellows" have had a chance to show what they stand in the tennis world.

J. M. Quin, manager of the Mount Washington tennis tournament, which is to be featured by the play of the younger tennis players of Southern California, stated yesterday that the courts on Mt. It is expected that one hundred contestants will participate in the sports. A large crowd will witness one of the keenest meets that ever took surround for the grammar school boy. The grand stand will be filled by representatives from each school from the surrounding towns and villages, while the city schools with their rooters and colors banners will make the day more brilliant. The different schools will have their track teams, and each, or most of the participants will wear the color of his school and fight for a first or second place, and the coveted prize of a twelve days' vacation to Catalina Island, and every boy who is successful in getting a first or a second place in this big affair. There will be an incentive to entries and every boy is entitled to take part in all the events of his division. If a boy is entered for all events and wins a first or a second place, he will be barred from entering any other event, so he might stop someone else from getting the treasured prize of twelve days at the Times Camp at Catalina.

Besides the prizes given by The Times, several merchandise prizes and numerous prizes from sporting goods houses will be given to the third-place winners for effort in trying to win the title. Red, white and blue ribbons will be given to first, second and third-place winners of each event, these ribbons will count as follows: five points, red three points, white one point.

The manager of the camp wants every boy who has a desire to become an athlete or who cares for sport in any way, and who is a member of some grammar school, to be present at this big meet given for the benefit, and with the hope that every boy who enters, will follow the rules more extensively than ever before, and wishes that each one may make good as one of our future citizens of Southern California. The meet will probably be held on the U.S.C. Field. All boys should have track suits, but they are not necessary. Babies will be allowed. The program will start about 12:30 o'clock, and all boys should be on the field at 11 o'clock. Watch the Pink and Green for further news.

Basketball Tournament.

The annual big tennis tournament for grammar school boys and girls will be held on the Mt. Washington courts on Thursday, May 30, Friday, May 31, and Saturday, June 1. Each grammar school division will be represented by one of the following high schools: Manual Arts, Los Angeles, Polytechnic, Hollywood and Pasadena. The tournament must be a bona-fide meeting in the interests of the schools represented.

Entry blanks will be given out by the Y.M.C.A. secretary, and every boy entered in each event must be a bona-fide member of the grammar school and high school classes for which he is entered. Entry blanks for each entrant must be signed by the principal of the grammar school he represents.

The tournament is sanctioned by the Southern California Lawn Tennis Association, which is a member of the National Lawn Tennis Association.

Besides the grammar school players, there will be championships in the collegiate and high school classes, in singles for boys and girls, doubles for boys and girls and mixed doubles.

With this large number of events, there will be more tennis in the short space alloted to this tournament than was ever seen in Southern California before. Some of the preliminary matches will have to be held on courts adjacent to those of the Mount Washington Hotel, but all the final matches will be held at the hotel on the mountain.

This tournament will be a truly championship one in every way. It has the sanction of the Southern California Lawn Tennis Association, which is a member of the National Lawn Tennis Association, the governing body.

Entries will be accepted from any bona fide student in any institution in Southern California, reaching from Santa Barbara and Bakersfield on the north, to San Diego on the south. Entry blanks will be sent to as many players as can be found, but it is impossible to reach them all, so those who do not get one the first of the coming week, should take notice where they can be found and get one immediately.

Each grammar school will be limited to two entries in each of the boys' singles and girls' singles, and one team in the boys' doubles and girls' doubles. The same rule will be carried out in the high school and college classes, except that there will be one team allowed from each institution in the mixed doubles. There will be no mixed doubles events for grammar school students.

The grammar school departments in private schools will have the same opportunity to compete as those of the public schools, and this same rule will be carried out with the preparatory departments in the colleges, who can enter their students in the high school events if bona-fide scholars in these departments.

All entries close May 25. Get your entry blank and fill it out right away, so that you will be sure and get your name in among the entries before it is too late.

To Fight It Out.

The Violet, Echo, Downey and Slauson baseball teams are all tied for first place in the playground league. A hard fight will take place when these teams split up for the championship series, as they have some speedy boys in the four teams. Some good ball and a lot of excitement can be expected before the winning team is determined.

Acrobatic Stunts.

Last night at Recreation Center, sixteen boys ranging from seven to nine years of age, gave an exhibition of tumbling and mat work. Some of their stunts were diving over boxes, chairs and boys. Their work was very interesting and instructive, and extra good for boys of that age.

The intermediates gave some excellent exhibitions on the parallel bars, building pyramids and showing other feats of strength, which very rarely take place among a lot of boys who do not practice every day.

Bernood and Bordon made the night more pleasant by giving the spectators one of the best wrestling matches that has been held at Recreation Center for some time.

Something New.

A blind-folded boxing match was held at the Recreation Center Clubhouse last evening. The fighters tied a cloth around their eyes and were tied to a ring in the floor, then set loose. The boxer who hit his opponent the most number of times was declared the winner of the battle.

There was also high boxing. The boxers got on the shoulders of their trainers and fought from that position. It was a hard fight, as the reaching was quite strenuous for the glove donners. It was very amusing to watch the unique struggle.

New Plunge.

Last Wednesday about thirty boys from the Downey-avenue playgrounds took their first plunge in the Eastlake pool that has recently been finished for the purpose of the boys. Much classical swimming sport took place on this first swim, and the boys are very enthusiastic about organizing swimming clubs when they get a little more accustomed to the new pool.

Y. M. C. A. Vs. Echo.

Echo First team defeated the Y.M.C.A. 17 to 5 on the Echo Park grounds. Y.M.C.A. did not have a chance during the whole game and the Echo boys just walked off with the plum. However, the Y.M.C.A. lads show true sportsmanship and say they will come back.

Baseball.

Violet got their revenge on the Hazard team when they beat them 7 to 4 last Tuesday. Hazard and Violet are a part of the school league and they are rivals from beginning to end. Hazard, however, has beaten the Violets the most number of games, but Violet is by no means in the hole.

Indoor Ball.

The Broadway Department Store's team, with their noble bunch of indoor mushers, showed that they could defeat their opponents, Bullock's, by a score of 8 to 6 when they met on the half-sized diamond for a championship game. Broadway boys beat that rag-stuffed sphere all around the field and followed the ball for eight good runs. Bullock's had little difficulty in getting their six, but were unsuccessful in getting the extra one needed for the game.

The Broadway boys also hit on the Hamburger team for a 13-to-7 game and not so much hard work was needed to capture the honors. Hamburger's have a good team, but luck was not on their side.

Y.M.C.A. Basketball.

Another game of the series between the Trojans and Wasps was played May the 10th, which resulted in a 10 to 9 game in favor of the Trojans. The Trojan boys showed their name up good when they captured this game, as they had to work pretty hard for it.

While the Trojans and Wasps were playing, the Spartans and Aleris were mixing it for a 21 to 17 game in favor of the Spartans. These Spartan boys are a mighty bunch of fighters and seem to be doing excellent work this season with the basketball championship ahead of them.

Teddy Boehncke.

Teddy Boehncke (senior) won the eight-day trip to the Times Camp by winning the home field meet of the Avenue Fifty-four school. Fye Rogers of the junior division made it hard for Teddy by scoring twenty-one points, while the victor was only able to roll up a score of twenty-two points.

Brooks Montgomery gave Teddy an awful scare when he started the ball rolling by winning both the 50 and the 100-yard dashes. Following are the results:

Junior division: 50-yard dash, Ralph Lincoln 1st, William Dunn 2nd, Howard Soper 3rd; 100-yard dash, Fye Rogers 1st; George McGrane 2nd, Ralph Lincoln 3rd; 220-yard dash, Fye Rogers 1st; Ralph Lincoln 2nd; Pierpont Wambold 3rd; 440-yard dash, Walter Sherwood 1st; Alberto Yorba 2nd, Fye Rogers 3rd; shot put, Fye Rogers 1st, Gerald Myers 2nd, Ernest Crandall 3rd; broad jump, Fye Rogers 1st; Pierpont Wambold 2nd, Gerald Myers 3rd.

Senior division: 50-yard dash, Brooks Montgomery 1st; Louis Levine 2nd, Richard Stringfellow 3rd; 100-yard dash—Brooks Montgomery and Teddy Boehncke tied for 1st; Richard Stringfellow 2nd; 220-yard dash, George Sherwood 1st; Teddy Boehncke 2nd; Brooks Montgomery 3rd; 440-yard dash, Teddy Boehncke 1st, Richard Stringfellow 2nd, Dean Kline and Brooks Montgomery tied for 3rd; shot put, Teddy Boehncke 1st; Louis Levine and George Sherwood tied for 2nd; broad jump, Teddy Boehncke 1st, Brooks and Newton tied for 2nd.

Your Move!

Beginning last Monday, the checker tournament opened at the Y.M.C.A. for a run of four weeks. These checker players can move to perfection, and will make things look exciting around the squared board for the next four weeks.

Grammar School Tennis.

In the tennis annals of all Southern California, there has never been a tournament that has attracted as much attention as the one scheduled for the Mount Washington Hotel courts the latter part of this month. Contests will be held for grammar school students in singles for both boys and girls and doubles for both boys and girls. These events have already created a large amount of enthusiasm among the school players and they are working hard to perfect their different styles of play in order to make a creditable showing when the time comes.

Beautiful prizes will be given the winners of all the events besides a four-day trip to The Times Catalina Camp for the winners in the boys' grammar school singles and to each of the boys of the winning team of grammar school doubles. These prizes are certainly worth striving hard for. The winners of these events will be proclaimed the champions of all Southern California for one year.

Entry blanks will be ready Monday and can be obtained from either Arthur Lee of the Los Angeles Times or Lee Henry of the Henry and Cornett Sporting Goods Company, No. 442 South Spring street.

The date of the tournament will be May 30, 31 and June 1. May 30 will be a holiday and those who remain in the tournament after the first day's play will have to be excused from school work on Friday in order that their matches can be completed in time to play all the final matches off on Saturday.

Going to Camp.

For the purpose of organizing the branch of the Boy Scouts of America in Los Angeles and operating it through the Y.M.C.A., a meeting has been called by Harry D. Cross, boys' work secretary of the Y.M.C.A., for Wednesday, at the association building, when examinations will be held. It is planned to form 250 patrols of eight boys each now, and further the work in July, when an international field scout will come here.

"It is proposed at a very early date to call a mass meeting of the citizens in order that the boy scout movement may be presented to them in a way that will set forth its value as an asset to this community," said Secretary Cross. "Following this, it is hoped that a local council may be organized which will include prominent men of the city and representatives from every organization which is working for boys. The Y.M.C.A. in addition to having its representatives serve in the capacity of advisers, will establish in its building headquarters for the Los Angeles organization.

Will Co-operate With Suburbs.

"The Los Angeles patrols likely will co-operate with those of Glendale, Tropico, Alhambra, Long Beach and Santa Ana. The Boy Scouts movement is separate from the order of American Boy Scouts which has been introduced here."

The examination test provides that a tenderfoot must be familiar with the scout law, embracing a number of points. A scout must be thrifty—that is, he may work for pay, but must not receive tips for courtesies or good turns. The law also says that a scout must be trustworthy, loyal, helpful, friendly, courteous, kind, obedient, cheerful, brave, clean and reverent.

"The scout movement is not military as many suppose," continued Secretary Cross. "Boys must be prepared for service for mankind. Boys of all kinds from 12 to 18 years of age make up the personnel of this movement. Rich boys, poor boys, black, white and yellow boys, Protestant boys, Roman Catholic boys, Hebrew boys—in fact, every kind of boy, if he can pass the test and will take the oath, becomes a member of this great army. The Boy Scouts are to make war upon bad habits of modern civilization. They propose to fight bad habits with good habits."

Hollywood Meet.

In the Hollywood district meet of The Times Camp series, Peverell Marley, a junior from the Selma school, finished first with seventeen and one-half points. Everett Moulton, a junior from the Gardener school, and Arthur Earl, a senior from the Grant school, were close seconds, each securing seventeen points. All are winners of twelve-day trips to The Times Camp.

At the end of the 440-yard dash, seven were running within one point of each other. As the relay would decide who would win the twelve-days' trip to The Times Camp at Catalina, it was the most exciting event of the day. In the junior division the Gardener school held a five-yard lead until the last lap, when young Marley of the Selma school barely nosed out Harold Taft for first.

The senior event was a see-saw affair between the Selma school and the Grant school. Bob Hayes of the Selma school really won this event by overcoming a big lead and beating his opponent in the second lap.

Boys' Y.M.C.A. Camp.

The Young Men's Christian Association of the city is planning a great summer camp at the Modjeska ranch for its members in the boys' division. The camp will open June 25 and last until July 6 and will be open to members of the Y.M.C.A. The cost of the twelve days' good times will be $9.50 to members. Outsiders, however, are welcome and will be admitted to the camp upon payment of an additional fee of $2. The camp will be located on the beautiful Modjeska ranch, fifty-three miles from Los Angeles, in the Santiago Canyon on the banks of a stream of fine mountain water. No better location can be found within the same distance of Los Angeles.

The boys, while on the trip, will be under the careful supervision of the secretaries of the boys' work department, headed by Mr. Hamilton. The men leaders plan for a number of camp doings. Swimming, hikes, baseball, all forms of athletics, photography and nature study will be participated in by the campers. The camp will be limited to seventy-five and the good times which are held out as inducements are already attracting the keen interest of the city boys.

This is a great opportunity for boys to benefit by an outdoor life.

Boys' Circus.

The Playground circus is the latest wrinkle for the young folks, which the Los Angeles playground department has launched, and Charles Miller, supervisor of boys' work, and Mrs. Maud W. Hammond, supervisor of girls' work, are engaged in arranging for the event, which will take place at the close of the school term.

Good for Cross.

For the purpose of organizing the branch of the Boy Scouts of America in Los Angeles and operating it through the Y.M.C.A., a meeting has been called by Harry D. Some Schedule.

TIGERS MEET OREGON AND DENVER NEXT FALL.

THE hopes of the followers of the English game of football for a united South playing Rugby have been rudely dashed to earth by the unexpected announcement by the Occidental College management of their plans for next season.

There has been considerable talk that the Tigers were going to go over to the English game next season, but here they come now with an announcement of the biggest thing in the way of an American football season that the South has seen in many a day.

This past season the American game suffered a great deal because there was not enough of it played in the city to advertise it, but when the games were played here they always drew huge houses. This year there will be no less than four of the biggest kind of games played right here.

Just take a look at this schedule: October 19, O.C. vs. Redlands; October 26, O.C. vs. Denver University; November 16, O.C. vs. Pomona; Thanksgiving Day, O.C. vs. Oregon Aggies. St. Vincents in its palmiest days never attempted any such schedule as this and the local followers of the old game are certainly going to be treated to some great sport.

In addition, Pomona has opened negotiations with Michigan with a view to bringing them to the Coast sometime during the season, but even without this last game there will be enough of the old game dished up to keep anyone from thinking that the days of the Walter Camp stuff are over on the Coast.

The two big games will probably be played at Fiesta Park and it is likely that the O.C.-Pomona argument will be played at Fiesta. The Tigers are making big preparations, as can be seen by the fact that they have been having spring football practice for over two months.

Coach Pipal has his plans laid for the team already and says that it will be the fastest ever seen in action in the South. He says that the big heavy men, who made the team this year, will have to show something in the line of ten-second speed if they expect to win their letters next season.

The Tiger forces will be undoubtedly greatly strengthened by the addition of new material and the development of some of last year's second team. Sid Foster will be a whole set of backs all by himself and with Seay, Kirkpatrick, Yakeley, Bradbeer and Johnny Cook will make the dust fly when it comes to speed.

Bill Smart, Lane and Drury Wieman will very likely form the nucleus of the line with such men as Bats, Dill, Brown, Crawford and Crebs to hold down the end positions. There are certainly great possibilities in the Tiger team for next year.

POLY PLAYERS OUT FOR SPRING PRACTICE.

Poly Spring Practice.

Karl Haney was elected captain of the Poly Rugby squad last Wednesday afternoon after a most exciting run for it. L. Mead was the other candidate for captain and gave Haney a hard fight. After the election, Karl Haney went through the regular line of legal ordeals that captains have to do when they are put on the throne, he made a long flowery speech to his team and school mates. Cheers—Then prolonged cheers.

The following Monday after school had dismissed, the newly-organized pennant snatchers bunched up for some light prictice and got the men placed where they will be most likely to make good. Some keen competition is expected in the scrum and back field positions on account of the boys who left the schools last year. The biggest loss will be the old captain, "Bill" Haney, he was the strong man of his team last year. Bill is one of the best-posted and well-trained Rugby players in the South, if not in the State. He will go to U.S.C.

Toolan and Saunders, two other front-rank men, will leave school for Stanford this summer. These two boys played a great game for the past three years and are among the best scrappers in Southern California.

Meyers, the "Giant Lock," graduated in February, and went on a ranch; his loss will be felt by the team. Ted Secor, the full-back, will go to U.S.C. Ted was one of the coolest men on the team and had the ability of doing some very good work at the right time and place.

Leon Harris, a Poly scrum man, will probably take Meyers' berth, Beyrle giving him a hard fight for it.

As to the old men, there will be Hanes, Grant and Jones in the scrum. They expect to slip a great surprise on the other high school teams this year. Those representing the back field will be Karl Haney, G. Craig, L. Mead, M. Fullaway and Framington.

Four-Forty in Doubt.

One event that will give the dopesters a lot to think about between this and the running of the Olympic games in Stockholm next summer is the 400-meter run. America will send a bunch of good quarter-mile men to Sweden, but there will be no "world beaters" and the Yankee team for the "quarter," as in some of the other events. At this writing the logical man to lead the American quarter-mile men is Ira Davenport of the University of Chicago. Davenport is one of the greatest all-around runners in this country today. He is very fast in a short sprint, and can carry his speed up to the half-mile point without any trouble at all, as his record of 1.54 4-5 testifies. Davenport is preparing especially for the quarter this spring, with the Olympic campaign in view, and this means that he will be faster than ever over the double furlong route.

Trailers Follow the Winner

Text of a Current Winton Six Advertisement

IN every industry a few virile originators create fashions and establish standards: the rest trail along. You know how it is in your own line of business.

These trailers usually adopt a new fashion only after the success of the original has been fully proved, and they think they are always on the safe side, since the public eagerly buys proved successes.

But the success of the original does not mean the success of the trailer; the latter must go through its own proving period, and is invariably as far behind the original as its maker's experience is less than the pioneer's experience.

Today the market is full of Sixes, most of them new this year. The Winton Co. has been making Sixes exclusively since June, 1907, and the 48 H. P. Winton Six has had nearly five years of thorough service to prove its superiority. The Winton Six created the Six Fashion and established the Six Standard.

Today the market is full of Self-Starters, most of them new this year. The Winton Six Self-Starter has had nearly five years of thorough service to prove its success. The Winton Six created the Self-Starter Fashion and established the Self-Starter Standard.

Today makers are talking about the service they render their buyers, and about the low cost of upkeep of their cars. The Winton Co., by years of close co-operation with its buyers, has made service the necessary fashion, and through years of record keeping by Winton Six owners has given the world sworn figures of low upkeep cost that established the standard for all other makers to aim at.

These facts are part of the history of the American automobile industry. Their meaning to you as to Sixes, Self-Starters, Service and Low Upkeep, is that it is unnecessary for you to experiment; you can have the car that created the fashion and established the standard for these things when you buy a Winton Six.

SOUTH IS NOW FIGHT MECCA OF THE WORLD.

Four Banner Battles to Be Staged This Summer Here and at Close of Campaign Two New Champs Possible. Moran and White Look Good — Langford and Jeannette to Meet for the Eighth Time.

BY OWEN R. BIRD.

FROM June 8 to Labor Day, Los Angeles will be the fight Mecca of the world. With four banner cards already scheduled and several more to come, the fans of the South are going to get a run for their money which has never been equaled, and it will take a long time to beat the record that is going to be set this summer by the local club.

Fight Summary.

Every fight of the four is crowded with interesting features and in summing them up we will have to deal with only the main points. Moran and White have never met before, but as both are clever the fight should be worth going a few extra miles to see. Rivers and Wolgast have never met either and this makes another of these hard ones to dope. Jeannette and Langford will meet for the seventh time, while Kilbane and Attell have had it out once and this time it will be a question of how good is Abe?

The other fights that are in the wind is the White-Moran winner with Joe Mandot, and then Willie Ritchie is to be brought south for a go with the winner of this fight. Of course if Ad Wolgast goes under, one of the above mentioned boys will be put in with Rivers on the Fourth, and then the rest of the battles will follow in order, and when the best man has won out he will be sent against Wolgast, if the Champion is then ready, or will claim the belt by forfeit.

The Unexpected.

In the White-Moran fight I look for the unexpected to happen. It is a cinch that Owen Moran can make Jack White travel faster than ever before, but just how fast can Jack go is the question. Moran is clever and has the punch, and the same holds true of White, so at any time after each man has felt the other out, there may be a Knock out pulled off. If it is the old Moran that faces White on June 8 we will have a man who has a little more ring generalship than Jack, but White will have something on him in the wallop as he carries sleep in both hands while Moran only has K. O. results in one hand. White's short left is one of the best blows in his assortment and will win the fight with Moran if anything can.

Moran in Fine Form.

Charlie Harvey, Owen's manager, says that the boy has been good since his return here and when the fact is taken into consideration that he is fighting almost every week in New York over the ten round route, where they have the best men in the world at that distance, we are forced to admit that Moran can claim a come back.

Harvey stated that he would not have taken Moran over at all, if he had not signed a contract to behave, as Harvey had enough trouble with the little English lion after the Wolgast battle.

Now, there is another thing which marks this fight as one of the best cards of the season, and that is the fact that when Owen Moran gets out here he is going to have to train hard, as after being once fooled by Abe Attell, Uncle Tom McCarey will not take any more chances with these fellows who know the game so well that they consider their opponents not worth draining for. So Uncle Tom will have a look at Moran and White every other day to see that nothing is going wrong, as he wants to protect the public in all the fights held in Los Angeles. There is no doubt but Jack White will be trained to the minute, as with two titles in view he would be insane to take any chances with his physical condition and with Fred and Harry Gilmore are on the job, if anything is missed, it will have to be pretty smooth.

White's Style Good.

White's style of boxing can be termed as a clever mixing of a willing strong boy. The fact that he hits hard when he lands makes the general impression that he is an awkward fighter, but it will be remembered that Frankie Conley did not lay a glove on him, and that Jack stood off and punched the battling Italian into a meaningless pulp in twelve rounds.

White Watchful.

White fights like Dal Hawkins of yo olden days, the only difference being that White watches the face while Hawkins watched the feet. They are equals in hitting power, and when we see White at his best some of the fans here are going to get the surprise of their lives. This White is one of the best boys that has been in the south, for many a day and when he has hammered a few more of the good ones, the public will be willing to admit the fact.

A Fighting Family.

Jack White comes of a fighting family and at the present time has three brothers in the game who are making good almost every time out. There is Brother Charlie, a featherweight; Brother Billie, a lightweight, who is known as Billie Wagner, and "Al Kid" White, a bantam. Jack says that when he gets to the top next September he is going to bring out the bunch and have a real fighting trust and all in the family at that.

They laugh at White when he says that he is going out to fight for two titles, but "when the thing that could not happen has occurred," as Kipling says, Jack White will be receiving the fight world at his feet.

After the White-Moran fight we run into that famous engagement between Wolgast and Rivers, which will take place on Independence Day—that is, if Wolgast can get into shape. At the present time there are some rumors to the effect that he will throw up his $1500 forfeit and not fight, but if this is the case, Mandot, Ritchie, Moran or White will be put on and, after the question of the best man is settled here, the winner will be sent against Ad if he is right at the time.

Looks Like K. O.

However, until something definite is decided, we must figure out the championship battle on the Fourth. And right here let it be known that somebody is going to get knocked out in the fight. Wolgast has to knock 'em out to win and Joe can turn the trick on any of them if he can land.

Rivers likes the fighter who will bring the battle to him, and you all know that Wolgast can't fight any other way. Can Wolgast stand Rivers's punches and then deliver his finisher? Knowing Joe, we are forced to think that he (Wolgast) will have some real trouble.

Joe Rivers is a remarkable little fighter and has been pushed to the front faster than any other man in the game, past or present. He is getting as much for this fight as many a champion received for meeting a contender, and, again, it has only taken him one and a half years to work up to the doorstep of the title.

Rivers has a natural defense and in his style of milling reminds the old heads of Joe Gans. He is getting so that he smothers the punches before they start, and this was the secret of Gans's success. The little Mexican is getting serious and is actually growing up under the leadership of Joe Levy, who has taught him to use his head more than any other man. Just one thing more before leaving Joe Rivers: He will be the best short-ender in the history of the fight game.

The Cave Man.

This will be the seventh time that Jeannette and Langford have crossed bats in the ring, and as seven is supposed to be the perfect number, somebody should be dropped.

In the past Jeannette was Langford's meal ticket, till one night in Chelsey, Jeannette shaded Langford in fifteen rounds of the hardest fighting ever seen in the world. This made Sam mad and another match was arranged for New York, and again Jeannette put several hard ones over on the famous cave man.

Well, all this started a nice little grouch and now, when the pair get into the ring, it is do or get killed. After the fight in Chelsey, Langford said Jeannette was no human being, and Joe said the same thing about Sam, and thereby a goat was lost and they are going to hunt for it July 39 at Vernon. If Johnson retires, as he says he will after his fight with Flynn, it will be up to Langford and Jeannette to fight it out for the heavyweight title, with a little of Sam McVey mixed in for good measure; but if this is the case it is nearly a sure bet that a crop of white heavies will spring up and set one of these stone-age-products on the floor, but it will not happen until Jack Johnson gets out of the way some way.

Langford and Jeannette are due here from Australia on June 11, and before going into active work for their fight expect to take a few trips throughout the East.

How About Abe?

Abe Attell says he can come back, Billie Nolan says he can come back and Uncle Tom McCarey thinks he has a chance, and besides this, there are about a million fans who think that if Abe ever gets into the same ring with Kilbane again he will almost kill that game little Irishman. Abe did not train for the last fight and got licked for his pains, as he should have been; but he is making up for lost time at the present time. Nolan is putting him through a tough course before sending him out again, and it is nearly a sure bet that Abe will be different when he comes out this time. He carried the guns till just before the fight with Kilbane and then lost to a clever boy, who beat him at his own game of infighting; but Abe has brains of a superior type, and if he gets left this time there will be any number of fans walking home from the fight draped in barrels.

Stanley Ketchel came back after being trimmed by Papke in much the same manner; now Abe knows Kilbane and it would be safe to say that he would fight on altogether new lines and Abe can do anything with his fists.

After Honors.

COLLEGIANS IN OLYMPIC GAMES.

MORE STUDENTS WILL WIN POINTS THAN EVER BEFORE.

Entry List Includes Some of the Best Athletes from American and English Universities—South African Sprinter Rings Walker to Coach Team.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, May 18.—College athletes will play a larger part in the Olympic games than ever before, in the opinion of the American committee. While former teams from the United States have contained men from the colleges, their point-winning has been of negligible nature.

The number of points gained by such contestants at the London Olympic was exactly six, but the men from the educational institutions included in the team this year will more than hold their own with the pick of the athletic club representatives.

The college men who are regarded as almost certain point-winners this year include:

John Paul Jones and Tel Berna Cornell; Charlie Redpath, Syracuse; Ira Davenport, Chicago; George Horine, Stanford; S. D. Wagener, Yale; J. Nicholson, Missouri; A. L. Guttman, Vermont; S. S. Babcock and R. L. Beatty, Columbia.

Probably the same forecast will hold true of England's entry list, which will include most of the following collegians: Duncan McMillan, Cambridge, 100, 200 and 400 meters; H. M. MacIntosh, Cambridge, 100 meters; F. C. Black and J. L. Farria, Cambridge, 400 meters; G. L. R. Anderson, Cambridge, 400 and 800 meters; F. J. Baker, Cambridge, 800 and 1500 meters; A. L. S. Jackson, Oxford, 1500 meters; E. G. Taylor and C. H. Porter, Oxford, 3000 and 5000 meters; Kenneth Powell, Cambridge, 110-meter hurdle; H. S. O. Ashington and S. S. Abrahams, Cambridge, broad jump; W. S. Stephens, hammer throw.

Reggie Walker, the South African sprinter, who won the 100-meter event at the last Olympic games, will be seen at the games in Stockholm as the coach of the South African team.

The team consists of R. Lewis, cyclist; K. K. MacArthur, marathon runner; G. H. Patching, sprinter; J. A. Victor, mile runner; L. W. Richardson and G. W. G. Gibson, distance runners; A. G. St. Norman, walker, and Reuben Fevey, sprinter.

After the Olympic games Walker will visit the United States and Australia, in an endeavor to win the world's professional sprinting championship. It is said that Walker has regained his old form, having recently beaten a half-dozen world's professional running records.

The initial tryout for the pentathlon event at the Olympic games has just been held at the Northwestern University field, near Chicago. Avery Brundage of Chicago Athletic Association defeated Austin Menaul of the University of Chicago in three out of five events.

Brundage won the broad jump with 21ft. 4½in., and the javelin and discus thrown with 137ft. 6in., and 121ft. 11in.

RODE ON THE WIND.

Nebraska Girl Takes a Ten-Miles' Ride in a Tornado and Suffers Little Damage.

[Kansas City Star:] A 10-year-old daughter of L. B. Carley, living north of O'Neill, in Holt county, Neb., was swept out of her father's arms while he was rushing to a storm cellar, and carried ten miles by a tornado. She landed practically unharmed in a grove, where she remained in the cold all night, being found next day. The girl had suffered from the cold and her clothing had been torn when she struck the trees, but she will recover.

Details of the girl's thrilling experience were received in Norfolk in a special dispatch from O'Neill.

The tornado swept through Holt county at various points and covering a territory six to eighteen miles wide and fifty miles long.

Mr. Carley was hurrying to a storm cellar when the tornado dipped down and picked his little girl from his clutch and swept her away through the swirling tempest for ten miles. She was somewhat scratched, but not severely injured. The storm came about 6 o'clock in the evening, and the child was in the grove of trees all night and until the next forenoon. Hail and rain had fallen during the night.

A Prehistoric Chair.

[New York Herald:] The Yale University Museum has received from Ecuador, South America, an interesting prehistoric relic in the shape of a lárra stone chair, carved as a crouching human figure holding up a stone seat.

The chair is of a kind of stone found nowhere in the world except on some of the Ecuador hills. The donor is Charles C. Brown, Yale, 1903, who has been living in Ecuador, and who formerly was assistant to Secretary Stokes of the Yale corporation.

Among the fifty-seven racing-car drivers who will conduct cars in the impending Grand Prix race in France, twelve are licensed pilots of aeroplanes.

Tires That Pay Us Only 8½% Profit

Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires are made 10 per cent over the rated size, to save the blow-outs due to overloading.

They are made so they can't rim-cut—made so they stay on without hooking into the rim flange.

They are made of costly materials, by the costliest process, to give you the utmost mileage.

As a result, our profit last year on this patent tire was only 8½ per cent.

Your Saving, 48 Per Cent

The 10 per cent oversize means 10 per cent more air—10 per cent added carrying capacity. And that, with the average car, adds 25 per cent to the tire mileage.

Tires that can't rim-cut mean an average saving of 23 per cent. For statistics show that 23 per cent of all ruined clincher tires—the old-type tires—are rim-cut.

So these two features together, under average conditions, cut tire bills right in two.

200,000 Users

Over one million Goodyear tires have been tested out on some 200,000 cars. These 200,000 separate users have proved that our claims are true.

As a result, these tires outsell any other tire in existence. In two years the demand has increased 800 per cent. It has trebled in the past twelve months.

Our factories are running night and day, with three shifts of men, to meet the call for these patent tires.

Why Not You?

Don't tires that can't rim-cut, oversize tires—sent home to others to you?

If so, insist on Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires. Make your comparisons. After a test you will never again go back to the old-type tires.

Our 1912 Tire Book—over 100 pages of tire making—is filled with facts you should know. Write us to mail it to you.

College Ball.

ALL SOUTHERN TEAM SELECTED.

Four Sage Hens, Two Cards, Three Tigers.

Men Selected for General Value to Team.

Pomona Battery Best in College Ranks.

The picking of an All Southern College baseball team for the season of 1912 is more difficult than one would suppose after looking at the relative showings of the teams in the championship games. Pomona seemed to clearly outclass all of the other teams, but this was due in large measure to the great work of their battery, in command of Gen. Hunt.

The receiving end of the battery is as good a place as any to start in on as we commence by saying that Dutch Smith is about the best catcher that ever played on a college team in this part of the country. He was the leader of the Sagebrush aggregation in both baseball and football during the whole of the last four seasons and while perhaps not the best mechanical catcher in the business, has earned his position by his headwork.

The selection of Becker as pitcher is largely due to his great work against U.S.C. whom he defeated for two successive games, during one of which nineteen Cards fell victims to his mighty arm. No doubt a great deal of credit is due to Shutt for the good work of Becker. Oliver and Allan are the only other possibilities for the box. Allan pitched mighty good ball in most of his games, holding the Quakers to one hit in their second game. Oliver was handicapped by playing on an inferior team and there is no telling what he might have done had he had good support during the season.

Kingman, an last year, stands without a peer at first base. His errors are few and far between and he was there a million with the big club, winning several games for Pomona by the use of the big stick at critical moments. Allan of Occidental improved greatly during the season but cannot be put with Kingman.

For second base and shortstop there is no one in sight but Duffy Seay and Harry Kirkpatrick of Occidental. These two young gentlemen are two of the best infielders playing ball in the south today. Seay batted .321 and added .314 for the past season, while Kirkpatrick was not far behind in the batting department of the game. The former shortstop covered more territory than any other two men in the conference and the work of both Kirkpatrick and Seay on the bases was responsible for a great many Tiger runs. Third base presents a more difficult proposition. No one man stands out particularly at the difficult corner. Either of U.S.C. and Warren of Occidental are the two best men and the edge is given to Decker on the strength of his batting, Warren was the better fielding third baseman, but was far exceeded in batting by Decker, who is rated because of his greater usefulness as an all-round player.

Hillman of U.S.C. is one of the best centerfielders ever developed here. He has a great whip, uses his head to good advantage, is fast on the bases and wields a mighty club. Shares the game in his league style and is a class by himself as a centerfielder. Frannie Baer of Occidental is the second choice as a fielder because of his batting average of .459 and his perfect fielding average. Frannie Baer has been blamed for a little "mild-frory stuff," but is in a class with Merkle in this respect, as he has made one bobble during the season and it simply happened that it was at a bad time. He is exceptionally fast and covers a great amount of ground. Fuzzy Daniels is awarded the catching job for three reasons. First, he is a good fielder, second he is a very good batter and third, he is a good coach as a pitcher, should his services be required. He is chosen because his services would be of greater value to the team than those of any other outfielder who played this season.

All Southern Intercollegiate baseball team picked by Owen R. Bird of The Times:

Becker	Pomona	Pitcher
Dutch Smith	Pomona	Catcher, and captain.
Kingman	Pomona	First base
Duffy Seay	Occidental	Second base
Decker	U.S.C.	Third base
Kirkpatrick	Occidental	Shortstop
Hillman	Pomona	Left field
Frannie Baer	U.S.C.	Center field
Warren	Occidental	Right field

JOHNSON OF STANDARD PREDICTS BIG SEASON.

W. L. Hughson, president of the Standard Motor Car Company is spending a few days in Los Angeles as the guest of E. Roger Stearns. He has just returned from the East after visiting the various factories owned by the Pacific Coast by the Standard Motor Car Company. Speaking of conditions as he found them in the East, Hughson says that there is the very severe winter throughout the Country, which is the worst in thirty years, the automobile selling season opened very slow but at present the spring rush is on and the factories are taxed to their limit to keep up with orders. The business prospects for the dealers are bright and better than ever before and all reports bear testimony to the smoothness of the opportunities for motor car sales this spring.

WISNEY FOR MANAGER.

Many friends of Glover P. Widney will be surprised to learn that he has decided to embark in the automobile business. He joins the forces of H. G. Harrison company, in the capacity of manager of the electrical department. The H. G. Harrison Company recently took over the Silent Gray line of electric pleasure cars in this city and Widney was chosen as manager.

WHAT I FAN

"I THINK Cobb was right in slugging the umpire who declared Earl Smith safe at the plate while watching the game from the grandstand at Washington Park. He is supposed to stand up for every game in the league because he makes a living when he goes into a theater and sees the actors or creates a disturbance in church. The management of baseball should throw all such fans out of the grounds.

"There is not room for rowdyism on the ball field or among the fans. All such persons should be thrown out.

Art Krueger, Portland: "I think Cobb was right in slugging the umpire. No player should be blamed for the insults hurled at him during a game.

Henry Berry, manager of the Oakland team: "The league is better off without such players. Real baseball fans do not want to see the rough stuff of some players. Real baseball fans like this is bad for baseball. Cobb may be right, but there is no occasion for any such actions."

Umpire Pearl Casey: "No player should be allowed to abuse a baseball fan. Not one fan in a thousand knows the rules of the game."

players walked quickly to the clubhouse that had brought them to the park and were taken back to their quarters at the Alsace hotel.

JENNINGS DIGS UP.

Anticipating the arrival of Hughie Jennings, who resembles a miner with "Bill" Maguire, the new Portland baseball manager, now a member of the Detroit, and Joe Sugden, another star back-stop for the Detroit team, who is also with the Detroit club, had a team of amateurs out under the grand stand and they trotted out upon the field and began warming up in preparation for the game.

In answer to the Detroit players' ultimatum, the following message was received from Dan Johnson of Cincinnati at noon today:

"Cobb's suspension should remain on the ground as it is. Let the whole case can be thoroughly investigated and all sides of it can be heard. I wired Hugh Jennings last night from Cleveland, stating that Cobb must stay out till the whole case can be reviewed. So far as I am concerned, I will stand pat and that's the best I can do in the matter."

The Detroit players held a meeting in conference to consider this message Jennings presented. At a meeting Jennings announced that

PAIGE Quality is not an abstract thing

Paige Model Fourteen, Five-Passenger Touring Car, Fully Equipped, $1009

YOU can see it in every part of the Paige car. We do not need to speak of it in generalities. We can point it out in every feature of this extraordinary Paige mechanism.

Go from one sales-room to another, and in merely looking at any number of cars in any particular price class you won't see many striking differences. The cars will all look pretty much alike. Paint is paint. Wheels are wheels. Standard body-types on one car are like the same standard body-types on another.

But if you could go clear through the thousand dollar price field and take the cars to pieces, get down into the insides of them and investigate the materials and workmanship, you could see for yourself, even with slight knowledge of automobile construction, why we say Paige Quality is not an abstract thing, but a definite, concrete thing of which you can say: "Here it is."

We do not claim the Paige is a $2000 car or a $3000 car. It isn't, and neither are the other low priced cars whose makers try to fool you with such ridiculous claims. But the Paige is the best built, most enduring automobile sold at $975 and $1000. From the motor to the last detail of construction and finish, the Paige car is built to fix for all time the standard of high quality in its field.

Regular Equipment on all Paige Models:

Top and Single Vision Windshield

3 block control battery, generator, horn, tools, jack and tire repair outfit. Quick Demountable Rims (set of 5) on touring car models, including tire irons, $15. Stone equipment on roadster, $12.50. Self-Starter and Frost-O-Lite tank installed for $25 if desired.

Come and study the Paige car. If you are not an expert in automobile construction, bring an expert with you and satisfy yourself that Paige Quality is not an Abstract Thing.

Overland

What Proves the Value of a Car?

IT is actually amazing and almost insulting to see the large number of automobiles on the American market which strive to get your attention and prove their worth by constantly featuring some one, more or less, unimportant feature, such as a rim or a starter. These things are absolutely trivial. When you buy a suit of clothes do you buy it because of some new fangled pockets or buttons? No. You purchase fundamentals—material, fit, cut, style and tailoring.

The value of an automobile is arrived at on the same basis. Rims and guards, color schemes, etc., should be considered last.

Fundamentals establish values. With automobiles it's the speed, power, capacity, construction, service, comfort and appearance you should look to. While the Overland is the most modernly equipped and finely appointed car made, it is these basic fundamentals which we have always pointed to as exceptional value.

A case in point is our Model 60 priced at $1200. The important things about this car—the things that really count—are fundamentals that cannot be purchased elsewhere for less than $1500. It has a big powerful thirty-five horsepower motor which can easily take you fifty miles an hour if you so desire. It seats five large people with comfort. The chassis is big and strong; made of the best materials the world produces. It is practically indestructible.

All of our special steels are rigidly inspected and thoroughly tested in our own laboratories. The axles are drop forged in our own plants. The frame is of pressed steel and has a single drop. The rear system is unusually rugged.

The finely cut and accurate gears are made of Vanadium steel. The transmission is of the selective type, three speeds and reverse, fitted with the best bearings. The upholstery is of good leather, hand stuffed with fine hair. The finish of the car is beautiful, rich and handsome, being in dark Overland blue, and battleship grey wheels.

This description will fit any $1500 car on the market. Compare and be convinced.

So far as the other features go, you cannot find a car that is more complete nor more up-to-date than the Overland.

It is a combination of everything that has proven practical in the motor car world. One small but important feature is the famous Overland center control. We adopted this several years ago. In fact, we practically started center control in this country. By degrees the others fell in line. They had to. One well known $5000 car has adopted center control for 1913—something we did three years ago. And until we find something better we will continue center control simply because it is the most practical location for both operating levers and it gives you full use of both fore doors.

But don't make the serious and costly mistake of buying a car on the strength of a single feature or two. Stick to power, speed, comfort, service, appearance and life and you'll get the most for your money. Other makers being higher in price incorporate in their cars one or two of these featureless features, and this is their sole excuse to get a much higher price for a car that is fundamentally no better, and in the majority of cases not as good as the Overland. That is why you find so many $1500 cars that are point for point the same as our $1200 car.

Our $1200 (Model 60) car gives you every identical practical thing found in any $1500 car made. Investigate and see. Our dealer is at your service. Handsome catalogue on request.

Overland Center Control

The center of the car is the only practical location for both operating levers. Easy to operate, always in reach, and you have free use of both fore doors.

Any other style is clumsy and out of date. Insist on the modern Overland center control. A demonstration will prove its superiority.

Hot Discussion.

WHAT LOCAL PLAYERS AND FANS THINK OF TY COBB.

"I THINK Cobb did exactly right in slugging that spectator," declared Earl Rogers yesterday while watching the Vernons practice at Washington Park. "No ball player is supposed to stand for being called every name in the dictionary simply because he makes an error. No one goes into a theater and bawls out the actors or creates a disturbance in a church. The management of all parks should throw all such rowdy fans out of the grounds.

"There is not one-tenth as much rowdyism on the ball field as there is among the fans. All rough ones should be thrown out of the grounds."

Art Krueger, Portland fielder: I think Cobb was right in what he did. No player should be forced to stand for the insults hurled at them in every game.

Henry Berry, manager of Los Angeles team: The league should protect all the players. Real fans don't like the rough stuff of any kind. Anything like this is bad for baseball and while Cobb may be wrong, there should be no occasion for any such action."

Umpire Pearl Casey: I'm for Cobb. No player should be insulted by any fan. Not one fan in a thousand knows the rules of the game and nine-tenths of them simply go to ball games to roast someone.

Walter McCredie, Portland manager: No man has any right to insult a ball player any more than to create a rough-house in a theater. I'm for Cobb.

Doc Schmeder, Portland team trainer: Cobb did just exactly right and took the only means any man has to resent an insult. Such roughs as the man who tried to take a cowardly advantage of Cobb should be thrown out of the grounds.

Roy Brashear, Vernon second baseman: If some of the decent fans could hear what the roughnecks in the bleachers call ball players sometimes they would praise Cobb for his act. There is not an inning in which some player is not called a foul name. No player makes an error if he can help it. Any good man is always doing his best and all players should be protected from ignorant fans.

Lennie Burrell, Vernon third baseman: Don't ask me, for I know how the fans talk to players. All the rough ones should be thrown out of the grounds.

Col. Bullin, local sport: Cobb did the right thing and if more players followed suit there woul be less ruffianism in the bleachers.

players walked quickly to the taxicabs that had brought them and were taken back to their quarters at the Aldine hotel.

JENNINGS DIGS UP TEAM.

Anticipating this action, Manager Jennings, who remained on the field with "Bill" Maguire, the old Cleveland manager, now a scout for Detroit, and Joe Sugden, at one time star back-stop for the Brooklyn nine, who is also with the Detroit team, had a team of amateurs in uniform under the grand stand. They were trotted out upon the field and began warming up in preparation for the game.

In answer to the Detroit team's ultimatum, the following was received from Ban Johnson in Cincinnati at noon today:

"Cobb's suspension stands. He remains on the ground as it were, till the whole case can be thoroughly investigated and all sides of the matter heard. I wired Hugh Jennings last night from Cleveland, telling him that Cobb must stay out till every angle of the case can be reviewed. As far as I am concerned, that is all. I stand pat and that's the last word in the matter."

The Detroit players held a long conference to consider this with Manager Jennings present. At its close, Jennings announced that the team had decided to play if he (Jennings) was unable to get substitute players together.

The players took the stand, Jennings said, to save the Detroit club the forfeiture of the game and a consequent fine of $5000. Cobb, after reading President Johnson's statement, made this comment:

"Johnson has always believed himself to be infallible. He suspends a man first and investigates afterward. It should be the reverse."

A GREAT RUN.

Frenchman Drives Apperson "Jack Rabbit" From Kokomo to Quebec in Record Time.

From Kokomo, Indiana to Montreal, Quebec, a distance of 1176 miles in three and a half days with stops for meals and at night, is the record made last week by Emile Barlatier in an Apperson "Jack Rabbit" 4-45 roadster.

Barlatier is distributor for Apperson cars in the Province of Quebec and is also known as one of the most daring balloonists France has ever sent to this country.

Monsieur Barlatier is not able to speak a work of English, but managed to express his admiration for the "Jack Rabbit" while in Kokomo arranging for the long overland journey.

No trouble was experienced with the car and at the finish there was not a piece or a bolt broken. The crew was given a grand reception and the Apperson is now in the foremost ranks of cars being sold to Canadian trade.

Trojans Fixed.

GREAT RUGBY SCHEDULE FOR U.S.C. THIS FALL.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY (Cal.) May 18.—(Exclusive Dispatch.) Rugby enthusiasts in the South are to be treated to the best brand of the English sport that has been dished up on the Coast, next fall. Warren Bovard of U.S.C. today arranged with Manager Burbank of Stanford to have the Cardinal fifteen appear on Bovard Field October 26 against the warriors who almost played the Stanford men to a standstill last year. The crack Australian team that is to visit California in the fall is counting on at least one game in Los Angeles, and Bovard says it is practically certain that that aggregation will meet the Trojans.

The Antipodeans will be the classiest bunch of Rugbyists that has ever shown on the Coast, and it is probable that it will make a clean sweep of its games with the northern universities. It is probable that the Australians will perform in Los Angeles on either Thanksgiving Day or Christmas, and the California varsity probably will fill with U.S.C. the date of the above two that is not taken by the Australian team. With the prospect of both the northern universities and the Antipodeans appearing in the Southland during the autumn months the English game will receive the biggest boost it has yet had in the South.

U.S.C. has shown that it is catching up with the northern universities in Rugby prowess and the contests promise to develop more class than any games since the northern varsities used to struggle with the Sherman Indians and St. Vincents pulled off its interstate contests.

Stanford will go south this year determined to put up the best game it has ever played in the South. The Cardinal skipper this year, Louis Cass, is eager to make a clean sweep throughout the season and no chances are to be taken of having U.S.C. break in, as it nearly did last year. The Stanford team next fall will be a veteran aggregation and when it hooks up with the Trojans the real possibilities of the English game will be brought out.

COAST SWIMMERS FAIL.

Wally Robb received a letter a day or so ago from Gustavus Kirby, president of the A.A.U. of this country, relative to the time made in the recent tryouts for the Olympic swimming team held at Redondo Beach.

Mr. Kirby took special notice of the work of Johnson, the one-legged wonder from the San Francisco Y.M.C.A., who carried off the honors in both the 220 and 440 events in record-breaking time. He stated it as his opinion, however, that the record was not good enough to win a place for Johnson on the American team.

There have been a number of men in the country who have recently bettered the record of 2m. 40 3-5s. made in the furlong and 5m. 53s. made in the quarter-mile swim. Riley of New York, McGillivray of Chicago, Hussagh of Chicago and several others have managed to make better time than that made by Johnson, so it looks as though the Coast is going to be left out again.

However it does not look as though the American swimmers would have much of a chance against the fast Australian and German entries so perhaps our swimmers have not lost such a chance after all. One thing is certain, and that is that the rate at which swimming is going ahead on the Coast, it will not be long before we are in the lead in that sport.

"Times" Experts.

WHAT A SWIMMER SHOULD DO IF SEIZED BY CRAMPS.

Frank Parks Holborow, the Swimming Instructor at the Los Angeles Athletic Club, Gives Some Important Advice Concerning the Opening of the Swimming Season — Rest Before Plunging.

BY FRANK PARKS HOLBOROW.

THIS paper by Frank Holborow is the first of a series of articles to be printed by the Sunday Times.

The series will be entitled, "The Times' Summer Sports School."

The articles will be practical, pointed advice from well-known experts addressed to those who are about to flit from Los Angeles to the shore and the mountains for their summer outings.

Frank P. Holborow
Swimming instructor of L.A.A.C.

"Today is Sunday and I must go down to the beach and have a swim. Which beach will I go to? I think Venice or Ocean Park will be fine for a dip today. I will go down town and take a car."

This is something that many say on a pleasant Sunday morning. While you are on the car, you are usually asking yourself what you are going to do when you get there. What kind of a bathing suit you are to wear and how far you intend to swim when you get into the water; how you will fight the breakers and how brave you will be if they are running high.

Now just let me say a few things to beginners and others who are in the habit of swimming at the beaches.

DON'T HURRY.

When you reach the beach, do not rush to the bathhouse and into your suit in too much of a hurry. If you did, you would be in no fit condition to enter the water. Always take your time in getting into the water after a run or any other violent exercise, or exactly after you have eaten.

When you are into your suit, just walk slowly down to the beach and sit down awhile and take a rest. After you have rested ten or fifteen minutes, walk into the water slowly and you will be in no danger of taking cramps.

CRAMPS.

There is more danger of getting cramps from entering the water soon after eating than any other. You will be in danger of getting a cramp from some quick move while in the water, such as jumping or diving through the breakers, both of which require quick movements of the muscles.

Never try to venture beyond your depth, or go out too far even if you are a good swimmer. It is usually the good swimmers that have the most trouble. This is from over confidence in themselves. I have worked at every beach in Southern California, as a life guard and swimming instructor, and have never ventured beyond the danger mark unless I was accompanied by some good swimmer, unless it was to rescue some one in danger of drowning.

I will admit you may go beyond your depth for years, but if you follow up this practice, sooner or later you are pretty sure to get a cramp, and when these things happen, it is usually when you are beyond the help of the life guards.

TIDE RIPS.

Always be careful when swimming at the beaches, there is always danger of the tide rips and undertows, especially when the tide is running out. A tide rip is the most dangerous of all. It holds you in its grip until you fight yourself out, and go down. The safest way to get out of it is not to fight against it. Just keep yourself afloat but swimming along easily and treading water until the tide carries you out of it. Then you have a chance to swim for the shore.

With an undertow it is different. It will sometimes knock your feet from under you, and this usually causes excitement and nervousness that causes you to forget just what to do. All that is necessary is to keep your head and keep cool. When you go down, simply turn over on your back and float. That will carry you out of danger. Then swim for the shore or any other safe place. If you ever get into trouble in the surf always remember that the life guards are on the beach ready to offer assistance.

Above all things, never throw your hands up into the air. Keep them under the water at all times, and holler as loud as you can for help.

DON'T DIVE DEEPLY.

When diving through the breakers never dive too deep; you are in danger of getting hurt if you do by being rolled over. Most all the beaches have a life line that is a good thing to stay close to at all times. It is a good thing to hang onto for a rest.

Trying to swim to the floating rafts is one of the most dangerous things to do. If the tide is with you one way, it will always be against you the other. The return trip is always the most dangerous; you are never as fresh as when you start. If the trip is ever undertaken always take a good long rest before returning.

Most everyone goes into the plunge before or after taking a swim in the breakers. Always remember not to run on the decks or walks around the plunge. They are all made of cement and when wet are always slippery. Many accidents have happened from this. Another danger is in going down the slide; always go down on your back, stomach or in a sitting position. Never try to stand up, or any other fancy stunts when using it.

Always be careful about diving into the plunge unless you know the depth of the water. It is a common thing to see people run right out of their dressing-rooms and into the plunge without knowing just how deep it is.

Never be in a hurry about entering the water until you have looked around carefully for these things. Keep off the high dives and be careful on the trapeze bars and traveling rings. These things are intended for the expert swimmers and divers.

There is little to choose between the different beaches. They are all safe enough if proper judgment is used in not getting beyond your ability as a surf swimmer or diver. If you cannot swim always keep close to the life lines, and if you can do not be too daring.

These are all simple warnings, but too little heed is often taken of these dangers. Be careful and on the safe side.

Big Show.

OLYMPIC GAMES SHOW HAS A VARIED PROGRAMME.

THE big Olympic games benefit show which comes off at the Auditorium on the 28th of this month gives promise of being the best athletic benefit ever held in the city. The men who take part in the show are all well known in the athletic world and number among them some of the best minstrel men in the city.

Such men as Fuss and Fay Halbriter, Arden Day, Tom and George Donahue, the three Pats-Higgins, Holton and Clark, Bob Weaver, Ben Rocks, Jay Welton and Westley Ruggles need no introduction as comedians of the first water. It will be worth the price of admission alone to see all this array of class on the platform at once even if they didn't open their mouths.

There are no less than twelve all-star numbers on the programme, all of which are real head-liners. Some of the best of the L.A.A.C. gymnasts and athletes are donating their services and all of them are practicing faithfully for their stunts. Even Al Treloar, the perfect man, has consented to do some feats of strength for the edification of the audience.

The Mercury Six, pyramid builders and all-round gymnasts are too well known to need any introduction to a Los Angeles audience. They have been performing too long and too well to have to be press-noticed. The same can be said of the acts of Shackles and Madona, the hand balancers, and Glass, Conte and Deets, who perform feats of strength on the Roman rings.

In addition to the regular numbers on the programme there will be a wrestling exhibition between Dick Retser and Jones. Retser is one of the men who is to be sent East to Chicago to the Olympic tryouts, and he has a mighty good chance of getting away with a place on the Olympic team.

What do you think of a chorus girl's contest and a rag-time piano-playing contest? These two numbers should be as productive of amusement as anything ever seen on the local stage as well as being highly entertaining from the artistic point of view. Another mirth-provoking spasm will be the comedy act of Dudley and Folmer, which, is said to be funnier than Mr. Wud.

The real feature of the evening, however, will be the one-act minstrel show by Ruggles and Halbriter Company. This is said to be the last word when it comes to the black-faced funny-work. Imagine Fuss Halbriter officiating as interlocutor. The announcement of his appearance in this capacity is certain to draw a crowded house.

Westley Ruggles has had more experience in the amateur minstrel line than anyone in the city and it is a certainty that the show will be a howling success under his able coaching. He has a great bunch of singers and funny end men among his latest discoveries and expects to make his part of the programme the hit of the evening.

Arden Day says that there will really be some new jokes and some original songs among the offerings and it is expected that the budding Carusos among the society young men of the city will be on hand to show their talent in the show. The society of the city is becoming very much interested in the raising of money for this Olympic games fund and the elite are expected to turn out in full force.

The full programme for the evening follows:

One-act minstrel show, Ruggles and Halbriter Company; Al Treloar, feats of strength; Mercury Six, Pyramid building; Glass, Conte and Deets, feats of strength on the Roman rings; wrestling exhibition, Dick Retser vs. Jones; Sheckles and Madona, hand-to-hand balancing; ragtime piano-playing competition; chorus girls' contest; Miss Edna Shaw, soubrette; Godfrey and Gambold, comedy act; Dudley and Folmer, duet; Miss Cleva Creighton, the second Tetrazzini.

VANDERBILT BUYS AN ALCO TOURABOUT.

William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., has just had delivered to him an Alco car of the tourabout type. The body lines of the car were designed by the owner and give the car a unique appearance. Following the success of the Alco in twice winning the Vanderbilt race, young Vanderbilt purchased the car. Last year he drove a raceabout on the same six-cylinder chassis.

In place of the running boards along the sides of the car there is a step close to each rear door. The doors open from back to front. The body lines dip instead of having the straight line effect, which effects most motor cars of today. With the new body the car has the appearance of a racer. One feature is the rake in the steering column and there is considerable tilt to the fenders, which narrow at the front. The seats are built close to the tonneau floor.

Plans have been practically completed for the new home of the Grand Rapids (Mich.) Automobile Club, and work on the structure will be begun soon.

Origin of "Laconic."

[Washington Star:] William Lyon Phelps, Yale's brilliant professor of English literature, was discussing, at a dinner in New Haven, the significance of words.

"Some words," he said, "have a history, and a knowledge of their history gives them a richer meaning. Take, for example, the word 'laconic.'

"Philip of Macedon was threatening the Laconians.

"'If I enter your city,' he said, 'I will level it to the dust.'

"'If!' was the Laconians' reply.

"And the pointed brevity of that reply is imbedded in our word 'laconic' like a fly in amber."

Negroes on the Farm.

[The Crisis:] The value of farm property owned and rented by colored farmers has, in the Southern States, increased from 50 per cent. to 225 per cent. in the last ten years. In Texas, for instance, it has gone from $56,000,000 to $113,000,000; in North Carolina from $29,000,000 to $81,000,000, and in Georgia from $45,000,000 to $156,000,000. Nor has this been merely increased in the value of the same land. In ten States the negroes controlled, in 1910, 3,483,154 more acres than in 1900. It is not possible to separate the land owners and the renters. We only know that the owners have increased in eight States from 125,413 to 149,-325 in these ten years. We dare affirm that no class of white peasantry in any European State has in the face of the most favorable ordinary conditions paralleled this record which the colored people have made in the midst of outrage, discrimination and lawlessness. This is the answer which the young post-bellum negro is making to the southern gentleman.

Ford

John Ruskin says that beauty is "that which is adequate"—that which completely fulfills its purpose. Measured by this standard the Ford is the most beautiful car in all the world—another reason why we are forced to make seventy-five thousand of these this year.

All Fords are Model T's—all alike except the bodies. The two-passenger runabout costs $590—the five-passenger touring car $690—the delivery car $700—the town car $900—f.o.b. GOLF NOTES.

BY ALMA WHITTAKER.

A public golf course certainly be[comes] a more urgent necessity every [day] and it does seem a pity that the [city] cannot be induced to recognize [the] fact while land is still available [and] comparatively cheap. All over the [world] the large cities are equipping [themselves] with municipal links. Chi[cago] being one of the first to do so [in] the United States.

In England the game has even won [its] way to the point where a municipal [links] for golf has been instituted at [Cowes], in the Isle of Wight, and according to the latest accounts, the innovation is proving an unqualified [success].

At all events, it is time Los Angeles [took] official cognizance of the game [which] is growing by leaps and bounds [and] rapidly becoming a very real [factor] in the community. Anything [that] is as wholesome, as legitimately [exciting] as golf, which keeps men [happily] employed in the open air, [should] be encouraged in every way. [Golf] is essentially a game that must [be] played, not looked on at, and therefore [finds] its chief attraction for many [men]. Any fool or weakling can sit [in] the bleachers and watch someone [else] display the skill, the agility, the [nerve] and the quick intelligence required in athletics, but it takes a [healthy], able being to acquire such [a] [game], such humbleness, such perspicacity himself.

And it is a matter for congratulation that our 2000 local golfers represent in nearly every case, substantial men of affairs, men who have [proved] themselves men in every day [life] as well as in their taste in recreation.

[illegible] Golf.

A match that is attracting some attention is that arranged between the Bishop of London and Mr. Acland against the Bishop of Khartoum, [Dr.] and James Braid, the famous professional.

Both the Episcopal dignitaries are [keen] golf players as well as the most [extremely] popular men in the [church], and Mr. Acland, who partners the Bishop of London, is the well-known publisher and a skilled amateur golfer. Braid, of course, needs no introduction.

Another match is that between Sir [Francis] Wingate, Sirdar of Khartoum, and the Bishop of that place, against the Bishop of London and his private secretary, Walter Heath is the course [to be] used and July 1 the day. Their [Lordships'] and Excellency can rely upon an enthusiastic gallery.

[illegible] Lands.

Mr. Dash it all, you know, the [Bishop] Pigeons have only invited me [over] to their place because I play a [good] game of golf.

His [friend] (soothingly.) Oh, you must be [mistaken].

Braid's Good Start.

Harry Vardon, the world's champion, has started the season well by [defeating] both James Braid and J. H. Taylor in two separate matches in England. A long series of exhibition [matches] have been arranged between [Vardon] and the various world renowned professionals and so far he has won each match that has been played.

In the match with Braid he came [out] better by five strikes than his old [time] opponent, and five strokes [ahead] was his lead over Taylor.

Even in a professional foursome between Vardon and Noel Farrington [against] and Gallop, Vardon's side [won] by 1 up.

Size of Balls.

The output of balls is probably one of the best indications that golf is [growing]. One ball manufacturer has turned out the colossal number of 1,600 during the month of October, and when one thinks that there are something like 150 of such [firms] supplying the game, the possible [output] is quite bewildering—and most [balls] are at 75 cents a piece, too.

The rubber-core ball has certainly [come] to the same, rejuvinated it both [in] knowledge and made it accessible to the multitudes. And yet [only] a very little while since British [golfers] were paying $5 apiece for the [original] Haskell and lovingly [polishing] it by means of a lighted [match] at the end of each day. For [the] rubber core proved incredibly [superior] to the gutty, and in the early [days] they were shockingly hacked [about].

Advice to Golf.

The Chicago Golfers' Magazine has [some] articles in the April number which [sound] the alarm against gambling in [golf] and several other writers have [taken] up the subject in deadly earnest. [However], I do hope we are not going [to] let the prude on the prowl in golf as well as in society. Where on [earth] is the harm of a man betting [a] [sum] that he thinks he can win [and] [which] he can afford to, and in my debased [opinion] it is rather a creditable, sporting [thing] to back yourself in tangible [form] of the realm. But, in any case, [there] is nothing disreputable about it [and] [there] is nothing in common with or[dinary] gambling, where one backs [one's] chance. The small bet is [simply] a voucher that a man means [business] and is prepared to [pay] the penalty if he loses. As to [betting] that bets on another player, [golfers] are perhaps not quite so [pure], but surely it is a transgression [on the] side of loyalty to preference, [rather] than a vice, as the critics main[tain].

Immoral or harmless, I am all [against] in such matters. Let [those] who don't like it cut it out, and [those] who enjoy risk perdition if they [will]. I am comfortably convinced it [is] a very mild perdition.

CONFERENCE OF AMERICAN TEAMS.

Several Detroit players said [they] were being perfected to [make] the striking team on a [coast]-scouring trip. They say [they] will quit the league and [the] exhibition games until the [organization matter is settled.

A movement has been started [to] call all the American League [clubs] to a conference tomorrow, [either] in Philadelphia or New [York], to plan the organization [of] a players' protective associa[tion]. Agitation for this has [been] under consideration for [some] time. Delahanty puts the [matter] in this way today:

"We must stick together, or [they] will not have any [of] us. They are not dealing [with] Ty Cobb now. They are [dealing] with eighteen players [who] are headed together to get [their] rights. This is not a

MARMON CARS TRUE AND TRIED.

Gilhousen Sends Report from Big Factory.

Jig Testing Interests Agent Who Is on a Visit.

Expects to Return After He Has Studied New Cars.

C. H. Gilhousen, the local Marmon agent, is at the Marmon factory for a visit. He is inspecting the new goods for the 1913 season and has examined the cars from pig iron to the finished product. He expects to remain in the East several weeks. He sends an interesting report of the work being done in the Marmon plant where the high-grade cars are thoroughly tested.

"One of the interesting features of the work in the Nordyke and Marmon Factory, where the Marmon automobile is made, is the co-operation of all the different departments of the big plant" says Gilhousen." In this big factory every part of the Marmon car, even to the jigs and special tools used in the manufacture are made. H. H. Rice, sales-manager of the company, states that it is his belief that the success of the Marmon lies in the absolute co-operation of all the forces, even to the sales department.

"One of the unique features of the daily routine at the Marmon plant is the 'jig meeting' which is held. At these meetings the factory superintendents and engineers gather together or to formulate their plans. Each department is taken up and discussed and the work laid out so as to work with the rest of the factory to the greatest advantage. Suggestions are made and discussed and when the meeting is over every superintendent is informed, not only what is to be done in his department but also what is going on in every section of the entire plant.

"An interesting fact came out at the Marmon plant recently when a party of visitors were making a tour of the factory. It was stated that there is over 10,000 different inspections necessary before one of their cars as well as other high grade cars, is ready to be placed on the market. Every tiny part of the cars has the minutest inspections and the different parts vary from five to eighteen inspections. The raw material which is received at the plant is in the shape of steel sheets. Each bar of steel, bronze and aluminum is numbered and shavings taken from the bar, placed in an envelope with a corresponding number is sent to the chemists for analysis. If they fail in any way to come up to specifications the bar is rejected and returned to the steel mill.

"After this process the construction work of the car is begun. At the meeting of the foremen it is decided what limits of hardness, measurements and other details shall be set for the day's work. The minutest one of the foreman's calculation may be inferred from the fact that the outside limits of variation in gauging the motor's parts is one-tenth of one-thousandth of an inch. Then comes the operation of the tests for hardness. An instrument called the sclerescope is used to determine the degree of hardness.

"The method of inspecting the assembling of the motor is interesting. The parts are drawn from the stock room and assembled into 'units,' every motor being divided into twelve or more units, all of which are drawn separately from the stock room. After being assembled they are put back, and another department does the drawing, assembling and inspecting. After this the motor is ready for the initial testing.

SEVEN TESTS.

"One of the first tests of the new motor is on the 'lapping stand' where the motor is not run under its own power, but is pulled by another motor. This is kept up for about ten hours. Another test is the fan test, during which the motor drives a large fan for about from ten to twelve hours. If there are any weak spots they are sure to be seen after this grueling test. At this point the motor is taken apart, reinspected and re-assembled. Then comes the horse power test. While most of the cars which the motorists buy are rated at a certain horse power, in the Marmon which is thirty-two the motor has to have fifteen horsepower in excess of the rating in order to pass inspection. After this test the motor goes to the chassis department and is installed. The rear axle is also put through a strenuous test, being built in 'units' the same as the motor. It is tested on the grade for quietness which proves one of the most exacting tests in the whole routine. After being passed the axle is also sent to the chassis department and is installed in a test car.

"The outdoor test which comes next is probably more or less familiar. It is a more common sight to see the mechanicians take the stripped chassis out on the streets. All the Marmons have their outdoor tests on the Indianapolis Speedway. All the engines must show a certain high mileage on the track and the test is continued for two and sometimes three days, when all the weaknesses if there are any have come to light. After this test the motor is cleaned and again inspected, valves ground and carbon removed and sent to the paint shop. From there to the final assembly room where bodies, fenders, accessories, and other fenderes are installed. They are then put through another rigid test before the final stamp of approval is put on the now finished car. There are from one to fifteen inspections for every minor piece of material and about twelve for the complete parts."

Wind at Lincoln Cathedral.

[London Chronicle:] We have plenty of wind in London just now, especially at that corner by Blackfriars station. But the men of Lincoln claim that the breeziest spot in England is outside their cathedral. According to a local legend, the devil, some hundreds of years ago, met the wind outside the cathedral and told him to wait there while he went in to see the dean and chapter. The wind is still waiting, for the devil has not yet been able to tear himself away from the congenial society he found on paying his visit. Consequently, all the year round a strong breeze blows in front of Lincoln Cathedral.

IN THE BUSHES.

Baseball.

The Ville de Paris Juniors won from the Highland Park Outlaws by the decisive score of 20 to 3 last Sunday afternoon. The feature of the game was the pitching of Cook of the Villes, who only allowed one base on balls, while thirteen of his opponents were unsuccessful in connecting with his puzzling offerings. The Outlaws' twirler, however, did not fare so well, he being exceptionally wild, giving no less than twelve passes in the first two innings. Chauncey Thomas of the winners played a fine game at first base, while his stick work was also of a gilt-edge order.

The Independents, a young bunch of ball tossers, organized to play independent ball on Sundays, are scheduled to clash with the Ville de Paris Juniors this afternoon at 3 o'clock on the Eastlake and Henry-street diamond. This will be the boys' first game under the name of the Independents and under new management. The boys feel confident that they will be able to make a good showing.

Downey had a hard time to get the game away from the Neverouts when they met on the Downey playgrounds for a 14 to 13 game. It was a hard-fought battle, and some very interesting playing was witnessed by the spectators. These Neverout boys have a good, lively team and will play games with any team that wishes to sign up.

Baseball.

Custer and Berendo played a very fast game of ball when they met on the Custer-avenue grounds for a game that would decide whether or not Custer would remain in the league. The score resulted in the favor of Custer by 6 to 5.

When Custer and Fourteenth street met for the decisive battle to settle the question whether or not Custer or Fourteenth street would drop out of the league Custer fell heavily to defeat when the Fourteenth-street boys came out with a 6-to-1 score. It was a hard beating that Custer received and a strong effort was made to make the game Custer's, but the tide turned in the wrong direction and the honors went to the snappy little baseball squad from Fourteenth.

Club.

The Downey club had their usual layout of wienies and beans last Tuesday, accompanied with a musical entertainment that was provided for the occasion. This club has frequently been having numerous affairs of this kind and the men and boys enjoy every minute of them.

Midgets.

The Midgets from Downey and the Midgets from Recreation Center played a 24 to 20 game in the favor of the Downey Midgets. Downey claims they did not have to take their last raps to beat their opponents in this hotly-contested game.

New League.

Downey and Echo, two of the teams that formed last Saturday, struck off their first game of baseball, which ended in a 11 to 1 score in favor of Downey. This new league will play Saturday only. It is comprised of all the playground teams in the city and some very good games are expected from these fast boys.

Sad Defeat.

Krueger Bros', baseball team want to defeat for the first time this season when they clashed with Downey for a score of 9 to 4. It was a hard game to lose and the Krueger boys felt quite bad over it. This is the first game of a series of three which will be played to decide the championship of California amateur baseball. Krueger Bros. have about the best team in the city and when they fell before their rivals for a first defeat out of some twenty or thirty games they have played, a sad-looking bunch of balltossers walked off of the field.

Baseball.

The Downey intermediates defeated the Fifty-second street intermediates by a score of 6 to 0. Downey played a brilliant game an Fdifty-secon street did not have a look in.

Pippins.

The Pippins took the plum when they met the Downey juniors for a 14 to 11 game on the Downey play grounds. Pippins are some ball heavers and very good hitting and fielding by these young ball scouts were the features of this game.

Postponed.

The Custer and the Nationals postponed a game last week on account of rain. These two teams are a part of the Out Door Boy League that has recently been formed. The boys have had quite a hard time to pick their different colors designating their team from the others. The Nationals are the first ones in the league to buy their suits and uniforms. Their colors are red with white stripes, and a large letter "N" on the left side of the blouse. The other teams' colors will be blue with white stripes for the Normals; gray with blue stripes for Cambria; cream colored suits with blue and white stripes for the St. Vincent's.

These teams are playing some fine ball for such a newly organized league and the results ought to be very gratifying. These teams will play other teams if you consult with their captains for a date. The captain of the Cambria squad is Metcalf, while that of Nationals is Wood. The other teams have not made a definite statement whether they will play outside teams or not, but will announce in this column if they decide to do so.

Baseball.

Slauson won the game they had with the Westminster bunch by a score of 3 to 2. The game was played on the winner's grounds, and maybe that had something to do with it. Westminster made signs like ball players once in a while, but the Slauson boys had little difficulty in defeating them.

Baseball.

The second teams from the Downey and Echo Park playgrounds clashed for a 11-to-1 game in favor of Downey. This was the first game of the second series in the playground league second teams and it looks as if Downey would have little trouble in getting the desired pinn.

Purposes Object to Mines.

[Brooklyn Times:] Horses, mules, elephants, camels and oxen have been pressed into the military service of man for many centuries, long before the dawn of written history, and birds have been the couriers and messengers of the armies, but, according to a Constantinople dispatch, it has been left to the Italians in this twentieth century to enlist an efficient auxiliary corps from the fishy tribe. According to this dispatch, a large number of the contact mines that have been laid down in the Dardanelles are missing, and several are known to have been exploded. The exact whereabouts of these mines was, of course, Kept a profound secret from the Italian naval authorities, and the only explanation the Turks can give of their disappearance is that they have been discovered and exploded by a school of porpoises. The porpoise is a pretty robust animal, and when it undertakes to give a whisk at an intruder with its tail it can do some damage.

Fairness for Motorist.

"REASONABLE" SPEED FOR AUTOMOBILES ADVOCATED.

"THE normal motorist is law-abiding, but the normal motorist has red blood in his veins and refuses to be a nonentity," declared P. H. Lyon, the well-known junior member of Chansler & Lyon, yesterday. He was asked to give a reason why the staid business men, when they became owners of motor cars, insist on "hitting it up a little" when no motor cop is in sight.

After hearing many experiences, Mr. Lyon says he has come to the conclusion that there are too many ordinances and too many statutes that say "don't" and there is not entirely a spirit of fairness displayed by the lawmakers towards the man who owns a motor car.

"Our solons are too much imbued with the idea that every motor car is used for no other purpose than a joy-riding machine, when on the contrary the great majority of business men who own cars have them because they facilitate the quick dispatch of their business," he explains.

RAPID BUSINESS DEALS.

"Since the motor car came into vogue business methods have been much affected. Where formerly an hour would have been considered a reasonable time in which to keep a business engagement, now the minutes of the clock are taken at their full value, and many engagements are made and deals consummated in a brief quarter of an hour.

"For the contracting parties to get quickly together they must have recourse to a motor car. Now these business men are not intentional violators of the law, if they exceed by a small margin the prescribed speed limit, but they must be made to suffer because an occasional rattle-brained chap driving a car has endangered public safety.

HOW TO SOLVE PROBLEM.

"The solution of the problem is the adoption of the present European method of discontinuing the prescribed number of miles per hour at which a motorist may travel and using the word 'reasonable,' to which all may be amenable, and let it rest with the status of traffic what shall be 'reasonable,' and what 'unreasonable' speed.

"Then, too, all owners of cars like the exhilaration of a brisk drive where conditions are favorable, and there are many stretches of road outside the corporate limits of municipalities where theer is a clear vision of the highway for miles and where a speed of fifty miles would no more endanger the public than four miles in a congested district. Such a public road is that to Whittier after leaving the Los Angeles city limits.

SPECIAL SPEEDWAY.

"The recent action of the owners of the Lankershim and Van Nuys lands in reserving a portion of the boulevard for an automobile driveway without a speed limit, when the other portion was dedicated to the county, is a protest at the foxy jurisprudence that will not give proper credence to the modern method of transportation by motor car.

"If motoring laws would incorporate the word 'reasonable' as to speed, the great majority of motorists who are careful in their driving would see to it that the speed maniac observes the same interpretation, and would willingly inform against all such for flagrant violations."

SOCIETY GARAGE RECEPTION.

Volney S. Beardsley, president and manager of the California Automobile Company, has issued invitations to all owners of Columbus Electric and Firestone cars to attend a reception at Society Garage, Nos. 1250-1260 West Seventh street, on Monday evening, May 20, from 8 to 11 o'clock.

The reception is given in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver H. Perry of Columbus, O. Mr. Perry is one of the head officials of the Columbus Buggy Company and as his stay in Los Angeles is limited, Mr. Beardsley decided to hold this reception and give the owners of these popular selling cars an opportunity of meeting one of the men who made their car. Mr. Perry is considered one of the keen men in the automobile industry and one only has to exchange a few words with him to become enthused over the Columbus line.

Two carloads of late models, both in gasoline and electric cars, will be placed on the salesroom floor; the employees will all be in attendance to take care of their guests, and a general good time is expected. A noted harpist has been engaged for the evening and refreshments will be served. The invitation is also extended to those interested in the purchase of a car.

ALCO Motor Trucks

How to Solve the Rush Season Delivery Problem

Everyone knows that it is foolish to work a horse to death. Ten hours a day is a mighty long day for a horse. If you work a horse that long you ought to rest him one day out of every five. You get better results in the end.

But there are times in the year when it's rush work to make delivery—Christmas, Special Sales, Spring Seasons, Summer Seasons, The Fall, The Winter.

Every business has its seasons and at the top of each season the problem of delivery is difficult.

Now the solution is not by working the horses from dawn until midnight. That is false economy—and your horses under such pressure rapidly lessen their days of usefulness.

Consider Alco motor trucks. They can work twenty-four hours a day, seven days a week, right through the severest rush of the severest season.

It has been demonstrated in Philadelphia. An Alco truck in the service of the Adams Express Company ran night and day for one hundred and forty-four hours. In the week before Christmas. The truck delivered 450,000 pounds of merchandise.

There are many other similar instances. An Alco truck ran continuously in New York—three hundred and thirty-six hours without the motor stopping—for the United States Express Company.

Think this over and anticipate your next rush season by looking over the Alco truck now.

WHAT CY SAYS OF PITCHING.

Old Veteran Tells Why Spit Ball Hurts Arm.

Lajoie, Wagner and Cobb Are Hard to Deceive.

Clarkson Was Best Pitcher that Ever Performed.

"When I got to Boston, all of my friends were warning me to watch out for this Young Cy Young. They said he was likely to beat me, and that I would have to pitch my head off to win. I still have that old love for a hard fight, and as my pride was somewhat aroused I made up my mind to win this game. My arm was not exactly in shape for great speed, so I decided to fool them all by using the spitter.

"Very few of the players on the other team knew that I could pitch the spitter, and when I started in with it they couldn't hit at all.

"Well, I won't go into details about the game, but I won easily. That didn't change my mind in regard to the spitter, however, for I knew it would be a bad thing for my arm, and I never used it except for a bluff or an occasional fooler after that."

"Would you advise a pitcher just breaking in to develop the spit ball?" I asked as he hesitated for a minute.

"If he had a bad arm, and if he didn't have much of a curve, I certainly would. It would be a salvation for him. But if a young pitcher has a good, free, easy movement, plenty of speed and a good curve, I think it would be poor judgment for him to take a chance with the spitter. You see, pitchers like Mathewson, Alexander, Brown and those fellows never use it. I have heard that Mathewson occasionally tried a spitter against Hans Wagner, but as a regular thing he never tries it."

"Just what makes the spit ball hard on the arm?" I asked him.

"It hurts a pitcher in the forearm. On account of the ball slipping from the moistened fingers with no spinning motion, it has to be thrown with a hard snap of the forearm. That is a continuous strain on the muscles just below the bend in the elbow on the inside of the arm. Once those muscles get out of shape, a pitcher is practically gone, as far as a good curve ball is concerned.

"Another evidence that the spitter is not needed by a good fast ball and curve ball pitcher is that none of the old-time stars used it, and were still workers. Take John Clarkson, for instance. Now, there was a great pitcher. In fact, I would almost say that he was the greatest of them all. He had everything that a good pitcher ought to have, and with it he had a cunning brain. He would continually outguess the batter and mix him up so that hits were few and far between. I often wondered why Clarkson quit when he did, because I believe he was just as good at that time as he ever was."

"But, say," I suggested to the famous old pitcher, "we are getting away from those old-time days that we were talking of."

"That's right," he said with a laugh. "But you asked me about the spitter, and we got on that subject and couldn't get off. Still, I guess that's about the only way we could draw a comparison between the old days and the new. What would you suggest?"

"Who do you regard as the greatest of all batters?" I asked.

"Now, that is not an easy question to answer," he replied. "As they stand now I don't think there is any doubt about Cobb being the greatest. When we look at the records that opinion becomes more certain. He has everything that a batter should have. If he has a weakness I don't know it. He is fast on his feet and is a great outfielder. He comes pretty near being the perfect ball player."

"Of course there are other great hitters. If you will remember, Capt. Anson was a wonderful hitter and he had a record for many years that has never been equaled. I don't think, though, that he had the game down to as fine a science as Cobb. Anson was not a fast man in comparison. But you must remember that speed did not play as important a part in baseball in those days as it does now. On the bases Cobb would run away and leave Anson.

"In the old days the main thing in a batter was an ability to hit the ball hard and often. Any other fault that he might have had was forgiven if he could only lace the ball. Nowadays a player has to be able to take advantage of every little slip on the part of an opponent.

HARD TO FOOL LAJOIE.

"Now, Hans Wagner was a great hitter and is yet for that matter. He is also very fast. Still, I believe one of the greatest natural hitters that ever lived was Lajoie. He can hit anything and everything and pitchers don't know how to pitch to him."

"Who is the hardest man that you ever pitched to?" I asked.

"Well, that is a hard one. Lajoie is hard to pitch to, and so is Cobb. With a batter like that facing me, the best I can do is to try and mix him up and get it over at that. Some batters are weak on low balls, others on high ones, and then some of them cannot hit a curve on the inside or outside corner. But men like Lajoie, Cobb and Wagner have no weakness. They can hit anything, and the best that the pitcher can do is to try and outguess them. Chief Meyers of the Giants is also a great natural hitter. If he was a little faster he would come pretty near leading the National League. He hits any kind of a ball and as yet I have been unable to find any particular weakness in him. Now I am going to surprise you by telling you that the toughest batter I ever had to deal with was Tommy Leach. Tommy was not a great hitter, but he had something on me. I don't know what it was, but for some reason or other he always managed to get a hit as good as .300. For years he always managed to connect with me. It is a queer thing about baseball, that they always have some batter who always gives them a hard time. They can get along fairly well with the heavy hitters, but that batter is always a thorn in the pitcher's side.

"Mathewson has always had trouble with Joe Tinker. Joe is not one of the heavy hitters in the National League, but he can always hit Matty. It is a queer knack that none of us understand of being able to fool Mathewson nearly every time. Just when Matty thinks he has conquered Tinker turns around and does the same thing to him. It was the same thing when I fooled Tommy Dowd. I tried

He is a hard batter to outguess or surprise you by his actions. He is the toughest batter I ever had anything to do with. Tommy Leach was not a great hitter, but I never could see why he always managed to get on base. If I don't remember wrong, he batted about .300. It is a queer thing about baseball players. Bresnahan had trouble with Joe Wood, but Joe is not one of the best pitchers in the National League. He always hit Matty. Matty had a knack that none of the others had of being able to outguess Joe nearly every time. Some batters think he has a queer curve around and others think the same thing about Mordecai Brown. I tried every way to pitch to his weakness, but just when I thought I had him

"When a batter is continually stacked up against a certain pitcher, which do you think improves the most," I asked. "In other words, which gets on to the other first?"

"That's a funny kind of a question," observed Cy as he scratched his head. "I don't know as I ever thought of that. Since I come to think it over, though, I don't believe either of them gets an advantage. The moment a batter sees that a pitcher is getting something on him he switches around so as to get something on the pitcher. It then becomes a game of guess and in the long run I guess it would about break even.

"There are some pitchers who have it on certain batters at all times. One of the good batters back in 1902 went through a whole season without getting but one hit off Matheweson, and I have had them fall to get more than one or two off me all season. But that also breaks even. There are certain batters, as I have mentioned, who always have it on the pitcher.

REASON OF THE CURVE.

"You must always remember," said Cy, "that luck is a big element in baseball. You have often seen a batter hit ball after ball squarely on the nose only to see them go straight at some fielder on a line. That is nothing more than plain hard luck. Two out of three times that a batter hits a ball squarely on the nose it ought to fall safe. Our whole idea in pitching is to keep the batter from hitting the ball solidly. That is one reason why curves are so advantageous. We try to put that fooling twist on the ball so that the batter will hit under it or above it and drive it to the infield or lift a fly to the outfield. But we mustn't let them crack the ball on the nose.

"In the good old days, a man could get by with terrific speed even if he didn't have a jump on his ball. The batters gradually got onto speed, and the speed merchant who sent one over 'as straight as a string,' no matter how much speed he had on it, the batters would meet it squarely and rap him hard. Nowadays, a pitcher must have a jump on his fast ball to get by. When I say 'jump' I do not mean a curve. I mean that the fast ball must be thrown so that it takes some kind of a hop as it nears the plate, so that the batter cannot get hold of it. It's a rather hard thing to explain the 'hop,' but those who have played baseball know what I mean."

CHAMPIONSHIP PLAY ON THE LINKS AT BEVERLY.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

THE Los Angeles Country Club golf championship opened on the links at Beverly yesterday, but the qualifying round will not be completed until this morning, the Green Committee conceding this privilege.

About sixty players took part yesterday, including several of the star players. Norman Macbeth, Nat Wilshire, T. W. Wilson, George H. Schneider and Edward Tufts, but as E. S. Armstrong, Judge Frederickson, Jack Jevne and several other first-class men are playing this morning it was not possible to gauge how the qualifying round would evolve. When I left Mr. Seaver's 84 was the best in. Only eighteen holes are being played for the qualifying round.

NEW STUDEBAKER STORE.

Combined Salesroom and Garage Is Fitted up in the Most Commodious Manner.

A conspicuous addition to Automobile Row is the new retail store of the Studebaker corporation on South Olive street.

This new store represents the very latest in a combined salesroom and garage. The entire front is a series of plate-glass windows, affording an excellent view of the cars on the floor.

The interior is decorated in light blue, buff and gold, with a paneling of leather around the lower walls. The upper border is a beautiful example of frescoes' art, with alternating trademarks of the Flanders "20" and E.M.F. "30" wrought in colors.

In the salesroom there is a complete line of cars, with a cut-out chassis of an E.M.F. "30" occupying the center and affording salesmen an opportunity to demonstrate by actual operation the gear shifting and operation of the working parts.

In the rear of the salesroom and railed off with brass are the desks of the salesmen and the private office of the manager, William J. La Casse, who has been associated with the Studebaker corporation for the past four years as a traveling representative.

NOVEL SELF-STARTER.

Harry Lord Applies for Patent on Device Which Appears to Solve Many Peculiar Problems.

For the past three years numerous and various kinds of self-starters have made their appearance on the market, but none has as yet met with universal approval.

Harry A. Lord, vice-president and manager of the Lord Motor Car Company, has recently applied for a patent on a gas engine starter that gives promise of solving the starting question. The device as outlined in the patent papers is a combination three-cylinder air motor and compressor in one unit, operating at all times in the same direction, and the change from the motor to a compressor is obtained by the use of a rotary valve and a sliding piston valve. The mechanism requires only one pipe running from the motor to the compressed-air tank, and the air motor is hooked to the front end of the crankshaft inside of the crankcase by means of either gears or Renault silent chains. To start the gasoline engine you pull a lever on the dashboard, thereby allowing the air to enter a rotary valuve, and on the tops of the pistons, generating sufficient power to turn the motor over from twenty-five to fifty times, and by pushing the lever on the dashboard back into its natural position it makes an air compressor out of the motor, and when the pressure is brought back to normal working pressure of 150 pounds, little tapered dogs automatically release the compressor, acting as a safety device.

The air motor and compressor crankcase are cast right in the main engine base, and gets its lubrication from the splash system provided for the lubrication of the main engine.

This device has the added feature of having compressed air on tap at all times sufficient for inflating one or a dozen tires, and having three cylinders, 2x2 inches, enables the compressor to compress 150 pounds of air in less than seven minutes.

Lord has used one of these starters on an E.M.F. car for the past two months, and its operation has caused the favorable comment of everyone who has seen it. Its principal advantages are that it has a capacity to compress a great amount of air very quickly and noiselessly, and it does not necessitate turning the compressed air into the gas engine, which so often interferes with carburetion; in other words, this device has all of the advantages of the present compressed-air starters without their disadvantages.

There is no stock for sale and none is to be sold.

GRABOWSKY AGAIN.

Great Storage Tank Hauled Over Puente Grade on Motor Truck on High Gear.

The Puente Oil Company is putting the motor truck to practical use in the great development work being done on the property above El Monte, and last week the first of nine storage tanks of 30,000 gallons capacity was hauled over the Puente grade and delivered at the company's new station.

This great tank weighed over three tons and was hauled on a three-ton Grabowsky. Will R. Forker, manager of the Grabowsky truck department for Hawley, King & Co., and W. A. Chipps, superintendent of the Puenta, accompanied the tank and both expressed themselves as well satisfied with the work done by the truck.

The oil company is at present operating five Grabowsky trucks and has found that the motor wagons are far more practical than the teams formerly employed on their property for freighting purposes.

Its Tires are a Car's Foundation

When a man starts to build a house he thinks of the foundation first.

When he buys a car—or has it equipped—he is likely to think of the tires last.

Yet the kind of tires means much in the life of the car—the protection of its costly mechanism.

Mileage is a big essential. Yet your car's protection is of equal importance.

Firestone Tires offer you "Most miles per dollar of cost." That's been proved.

And they are the only tires that afford such liberal resilience that all jar and vibration is taken up, the car given perfect protection, the passengers perfect comfort. To get this double tire service you must insist on

"Firestone" Tires

It is the unmatched efficiency of Firestone design, the high percentage and extra volume of pure rubber in the tread, in the side-wall, in the cushion and in the breaker strip of Firestone tires that insures this extra resilience and extra wear.

Such materials developed by selected experts for every operation, with inspection of uncompromising standard at every stage of workmanship cost more in the tire but far less on the road.

You get insurance against blow-outs—insurance of riding quality—insurance that no matter how delicate the mechanism of your car—the tires will stand between it and hard usage.

The unfailing quality of Firestone Tires tells in their record of never an off year in twelve years.

They are the true foundation for your car. They mean True Tire Economy.

All high grade cars are equipped with quick-detachable demountable rims. Don't experiment. Insist on Firestone, the only rims that have stood the test of time and are universally acknowledged correct in principle and service.

Roaring Wonder.

RUSSELL FORD DOPED AS GREAT SLAB ARTIST.

NEW YORK, May 4.—No pitcher of greater promise than Russell Ford ever bid for public favor. The star of Harry Wolverton's New York Americans is a law unto himself. A youth with the most brilliant part of his career still ahead of him, this wonderful tosser has already established a record of which the greatest might reasonably be proud.

Let us analyze his case quite briefly. Ford has been in the big show but two seasons. In that time he has won forty-eight games and lost only seventeen. He came to the club at a time when it was hard up for pitching talent. In his first year out he set the most glowing record ever established by a green tosser, that of winning twenty-six games out of thirty-two pitched. His average in 1910 bettered the .800 mark of winning percentage, a notch reached only by one other recruit, "King" Cole of the Cubs, the same year, and surpassed by veteran tossers such as A. G. Spalding and "Wild Bill" Donovan, but four times in history.

NO FLASH.

Ford is no flash in the pan. "King" Cole may or may not be. So may "Rube" Marquard, the champion southpaw of professional baseball last year. Lots of tossers have loomed upon the horizon for one flitting season of superhuman endeavor only to sink back into oblivion. Krause, the portsider of the Athletics, flashed out like a comet in baseball's sun in 1909. He has made little noise or trouble since. Cole went away back in 1911. Marquard must this year live up to his 1911 form to justify his claims to lasting fame. Ford had a great deal better season in 1910, his first start, than he did last season, but only in so far as winning percentage is concerned. In 1910 he established one of the most flattering records of all time with a club that finished second in the strife for Ban Johnson's pennant. He was with a sixth position aggregation—a very, very badly mismanaged sixth position aggregation—last season. Yet he came out of the fray with a record of victories in two-thirds of the games in which he worked. This in spite of the fact that he had very little encouragement from his backers.

GAMES KICKED AWAY.

More than half the games he lost last season were kicked away from him. More than half were lost by one run. He had no sinecure. From the time he first reported to the Highlanders Ford has had to work for every victory. The various managers, realizing that he was the main dependence of the tossing corps, have always handed him the toughest assignments. It is Ford who invariably catches the star contemporaries of the opposition. He has been forced to fight his way to the top over such brilliant rivals as Walter Johnson, Ed Walsh, George Mullin, Joe Wood, Vean Gregg and Chief Bender. But for an unfortunate incident last season his work, even with a six games out of seven, might have proved quite as brilliant as that of his debut. He lost about half of his games while he was physically unfit for duty. Early in the season he "beaned" Corhan of the White Sox. For days it looked as if the Chicagoan would not recover. Ford, who is a highly sensitive young man, was completely unnerved by the accident. In two weeks he lost ten pounds. He was on the verge of physical collapse, when the injured athlete finally recovered.

Russell Ford is a pitcher bound to go down through history as one of the brightest stars of the game. His work in the two years of service has justified a claim to one of the highest niches of fame. He will go on to greater achievements in the future if ill luck befalls. For Russ is a pitcher blessed with an unusual amount of grey matter. He is nobody's fool. He will last many a year.

He has not jumped to the top of his profession because of any unusual physical qualifications. In fact, he is but of average size and strength. He weighs only 175 pounds in fighting trim. That is perhaps a trifle under the average in this age of giant tossers. Ford realizes as much as anybody that his physical body is not equipped in a manner to proclaim him any "iron man" of the national pastime. The fact that he insists upon four full days' rest between games proves that he possesses common sense enough to insure the conservation of his good right arm to the longest possible tenure of efficiency.

Russell Ford is commonly classed among the American League's great horde of spitball pitchers. Yet he does not throw the spitball. He will tell you so himself. He tosses something that very closely resembles the salivary slant in gyration and break, but something also so far removed from this difficult shoot as Matty's fadeaway differs from Marquard's fast one. What his freak delivery is Ford alone knows. He is telling no one. Its virtue lies in the fact of its mystery. Pitchers for two years have been trying to solve the nature of the delivery. Aside from the results he gets with it they have been able to learn absolutely nothing.

QUEER SPITBALL.

For Russell Ford is the only pitcher of baseball who can throw what exactly resembles a spitball yet with such perfect control and manipulation that he can make it break either to the right or left at will. The ordinary spitball is mighty freaky in its behavior. It is liable to break almost any way, but usually for a right-handed pitcher breaks away from a right-handed batter. Wherefore a pitcher who can at will hook the ball to either side is doubly effective in that he can make batting for a left-hander just as difficult as for a right-hander.

No pitcher can get away in fast company with any one stock in trade. Aside from his "freak" Russell Ford has as much "stuff" as anyone in the business. He has one of the wickedest fast balls in captivity, a speedy offering that hops up a couple of inches as it nears the batter. He has also a book "hook" or curve, and a passingly effective slow ball. He pitches everything with the same motion, and as he always masks his grip of the ball with his glove before starting his swing the batter is absolutely in the dark as to what is coming up. Harry Davis, leader of the Naps, once said after Ford had struck him out four times in a row: Hitting that fellow is simply luck. Close your eyes and swing blind and you have just as much chance as to try to outguess him." Lajoie, Crawford and Cobb have expressed similar views.

CURVE SECRET.

Ford used to be a spitball pitcher pure and simple. It was his wonderful side-arm "spitter" that won a pennant for Atlanta in the Southern League in 1908. He depended chiefly on this asset in 1909, when he was with Jersey City in the Eastern League. But all the time he was practicing on his "freak," which he discovered in the winter of 1908-09. Ford realized that a ball "curved" in a direction opposite to that of its rotation. A ball spinning from left to right breaks from right to left and vice versa. That gave him the idea.

He simply figured out how to shoot the sphere from his hand in order to command at will the rotation in either direction necessary for a sharp break without sacrificing the speed of propulsion. Simple, isn't it? He'll show you how to do it if you care to believe him. Say he does it by slightly moistening either the thumb or the first two fingers while keeping the rest of his hand perfectly dry. He says the moisture acts in the manner of mucilage; that the leather adheres to the damp surface of his hand while it readily breaks away from the dry part, and that with the same delivery and wrist motion he is able to spin the pellet either to the right or to the left. That's what he says. But no other pitcher, no matter how hard he practices, can get the same result in the same manner. And it is a significant fact that Russell Ford, who has two brothers who figured in professional baseball, has been unable to teach either the wonderful delivery that he has mastered.

BUYS NOBBY TREADS.

Supply Dealer Comes All the Way from Amsterdam to Investigate Tire Field.

M. Adler of Amsterdam, Holland, has been in this country for some time looking over the tire field. Adler is one of the largest automobile supply dealers in Europe. As a result of his investigation he has ordered from the United States Tire Company, a consignment of Nobby Treads, which will be immediately shipped to him.

Adler operates big stores in Amsterdam, Birmingham, Eng., Brussels and Paris. He will in the future handle not only the Nobby Tread, but other styles made by the United States Tire Company, as a part of his regular tire line.

It is a fact that while the foreign countries have been building automobile tires for a great number of years the rubber tread type of non-skid pneumatics is practically unknown there.

The interest that the European dealers are taking in these tires shows that there is a demand for our non-skid types abroad.

In the purchase of tires in this country Adler paid little head to the cost, but gave strict attention to the quality.

While American tires cost more than the makes of the European manufacturers, it is believed that the difference in price can be offset by the difference in service.

An American Consul in Austria reports that the sales of gasoline and naphtha motors are rapidly increasing in that country and that several hundred American makes were sold last year.

Real Come Back.

BOBBY WALLACE STILL A VERY MARVELOUS MAN.

THIRTEEN years ago a little fiery, fidgety, dark-haired lad was playing short for the St. Louis Cardinals. He came to town when the Robison brothers transferred their Cleveland club of stars to St. Louis. He was young and unknown, but promising. He had a dash about him that surprised everyone who saw him then; he was quick as a tiger, leaped after the bounders in all directions with perfect accuracy. In a year St. Louis praised him. In two years he was a wonder.

When the Browns took the field at Sportsman's park against the Detroit Tigers, a fiery, fidgety, dark-haired athlete occupied the position between the second and third sacks. The lad of 1899 and the athlete of 1912 are the same; yes, indeed. He is Rhody J. Wallace.

Wallace has come back; his hat is in the center of the arena, and all the shortstops of today are defied. Watching Bob Wallace shortstop for three days in 1912 shows but little difference in the lad the writer saw parade on the old Vendeventer-avenue park back in 1899, when he was such a sensation around the National League circuit.

Jimmy Callahan startled the baseball community when he came back last spring; Mike Donlin caused just as much furore when he turned the trick last summer, and now Bob Wallace is going to eclipse both Jimmy and Mike.

No king of the pastime, not even Hans Wagner, Nap Lajoie or Ty Cobb, ever gave a more brilliant exhibition as a player than did Wallace last week. He was starting out his fifteenth year as an infielder, his eighteenth as a major league player, yet he made plays in the field that might be equaled but never excelled.

Where is the player who can boast of Bob Wallace's record? Few, if any. Originally he was a pitcher with the Franklin, (Pa.) independent team. Some one told the Robison brothers about Bob back in 1894, and in the middle of that year he went to Cleveland. However, he didn't blossom forth until 1897, when he succeeded Chipper McGarr, then rated the king of third sackers, as the third baseman for the Cleveland Spiders.

The far corner was strange to him, but he tried and made good. Coming to St. Louis, he remained a third baseman. When the two clubs switched about Lave Cross remained in St. Louis. Lave was a third baseman and so was Wallace. A change had to be made. Wallace said he'd try shortstop. He did, and he is there today, just as clever as he was thirteen years ago.

In answer to where is the player who can boast of Bob Wallace's record, the names of some of the stars that came to St. Louis from Cleveland might be mentioned. There were Jesse Burkett, Emmett Heidrick, Pete Childs, Ed McKean, Harry Blake, Chief Zimmer, Cy Young, Lou Criger, Nig Cuppy and others. Young alone remains. But none of them has been in the game as constantly as Wallace.

In developing into a manager, Wallace has adopted a system that is quite different from many others. His attack does not border on the style used by McGraw, Bresnahan, Clarke, Dahlen, Callahan and that kind. Wallace, like Connie Mack, believes the diamond battles can be won without the rowdy work, bluffing with the umpires and kicking up the dust.

If Bob Wallace can be as brainy and brilliant a manager as he has been a ball player he will be one of baseball's greatest men. And St. Louis is proud that it owns Bob Wallace.

The record compiled by Bob Wallace as shortstop probably will stand supreme forever. The record books do not show where there is an infielder who has performed at that position for thirteen years and has such a remarkable average.

In the thirteen years Wallace has fielded for a percentage of .940, indeed phenomenal. One year he topped the field. That was in 1902, when he broke into the American League. However, he always has been near the top. His total number of assists and putouts shows that he covers acres of ground in his territory.

Wallace's complete record as a major league shortstop follows:

Rank—Year.	G.	P.O.	A.	E.	P.c.
3—1911	138	269	417	42	.943

A BANNER SEASON.

Tire Business not Affected by Presidential Election and Goodyear Plant Is Working Overtime.

The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company's plant at Akron, O., has not been the least affected by the Presidential year. R. W. Rabson, of Boston, after delivering a lecture there, stated that he did not believe a Presidential year has any affect upon business conditions. The rubber business at Akron, O., has increased enormously, during the past year. More tires are being turned out today than ever before in its history.

The 1911 sales of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company increased over 500 per cent. over 1910 sales, and 1912 will greatly exceed that large percentage. During the last year, enough tires were turned out to equip 102,250 cars, and this year, 1912, tires will be manufactured at this plant alone to equip 250,000 automobiles.

E. Lingenfelder, the local Goodyear branch manager, is pleased with the outlook. He has a great deal to say about the methods of "double-curing" used in the manufacture of a Goodyear tire.

The makers of the Goodyear No-Rim-Cut-Tire divide the one cure, full-moulded process of their competitors into two parts. The No-Rim-Cut tire passes through a certain process between the time it leaves the tire maker's hand and the time it is ready for shipment.

"Before it is cured, the rubber of a tire is soft and plastic," said Lingenfelder, in talking over this process. The first curing process for a Goodyear is in a tire mould. This is continued long enough to give the tire its shape, and to insure that the layers of fabric and gum of the carcass have been thoroughly cemented together.

At the end of the first cure, the surface is roughened and the heavy rubber tread attached. When the tread is in position, an air bag is placed inside the carcass and the tire is wrapped firmly in a long strip of damp muslin. Then the air bag is inflated so the tire, in the final cure, will be distended and take the exact shape."

NELSON APPRECIATES CALIFORNIA ROADS.

"A motorist who has been touring in California for half a dozen years can appreciate the wonderful road improvements that have been made," said F. O. Nelson, local manager for the Diamond Rubber Company. Nelson is one of the old time motorists and for years has been traveling to all corners of the State.

"During the past month I have occasion to make a number of long trips," he said. "I have made the Kite, driven to Ventura and over the San Fernando road and into the Sespe. On every side the road improvements are noted."

ELECTRIC STARTER PUT TO HARD TEST.

In a recent test of the powers of the Cadillac starting device, two important points were made clear. First, that it has sufficient power or positive action under every possible condition of weakness of motor and battery or severest weather conditions we have to second, sufficient margin of power for extreme conditions.

This test was made on one of the steepest of grades, one in which to climb the spark plugs were removed from the cylinder heads so that those who watched the test from the rear might know that no gas was generated, the starter was operated.

The Cadillac electric starting system gives in addition to the above mentioned facilities an electric lighting system. Recharging is done by the generator while the car is in motion.

If You Were an Expert, What Car Would You Buy?

The time has passed when automobiles can be sold to you on their appearances or claims. This is a day when you and every purchaser must be shown what the car for which you pay your money will actually perform; what it will do. Beware of an automobile salesman who attempts to beguile you with a pleasing story. Tell him to show the goods and prove to you that his cars are worth the money. Find out whether his car is a real car or only an assembled automobile built to sell.

You have a right to your money's worth, but it is up to you to see that you get it. Deeper than all appearances, there are a few expert tests which ought to be applied to every car.

Who makes the car? Is it an assembled car or made from top to bottom by one manufacturer? What kind of a guarantee is on it? Does the manufacturer respect his own product with a real guarantee, or does he want you to take the chance? What do parts cost you and how conveniently can you get them? How many cars of this make are in service and how many are giving satisfaction? Questions like these go deep into the heart of the case, and if you put them rigorously upon any car you will find out with a certainty whether or not that car is worth its price.

We are selling Studebaker E-M-F "30" and Flanders "20" cars because we know that, dollar for dollar, their equal is not sold in the market today. The records of many thousands of cars in all kinds of service have convinced us absolutely. Studebaker E-M-F "30" and Flanders "20" cars are built to run, and because they run they sell. If we cannot prove to you under the most searching test that Studebaker cars are absolutely the best automobile values in the market, we do not want your business; but we can prove it, and your neighbors who drive these cars will tell you the same thing.

Be an expert when it comes to buying a car. You can, by getting from us some further ideas on real tests of an automobile. Clip the attached coupon and send it to us now because we have something new to tell you which you ought to know, whatever car you have in mind.

President Taft and Gov. Baldwin

Leaving Connecticut State Library Building in Pope-Hartford. The President has repeatedly indicated his preference for the automobile, both on public and private occasions. He has practically refused to ride in a carriage and those who arrange the details of his tours and visits are instructed to see to it that an automobile is provided to meet him at the station and convey him to his destination. At the time of the President's last visit to Hartford, the committee on arrangements had planned that the Chief Executive should ride from the station to the State Library building in a coach-and-four, but a seven-passenger Pope-Hartford had to be substituted at the last minute upon receipt of instructions from the President's representatives.

THE JUMP-UPS

VERSES BY PAUL WEST
DRAWINGS BY WM. H. LOOMIS

1.—Jim Jump-Up sadly watched his wife grow cultured day by day.
Her voice was good; she learned to sing, and even learned to play.
And every new accomplishment brought envy deep to Jim,
Who felt that she was growing far superior to him.

2.—He tried to learn a dozen things—he even tackled singing,
Until the neighbors all complained and started boot-jacks flinging!
But still to find his "sphere" he strove with perseverance tragic,
And finally he found it, as he thought, in Parlor Magic!

3.—Week in, week out he practised tricks and apparatus bought;
Then showed his skill to Genevieve. 'Twas wonderful, she thought.
"Let's have some folks to dinner, dear," she said, "and then, you know I'll sing and you'll surprise them with your clever magic show!"

4.—The dinner was a fine affair, and Jim behaved all right,
And Genevieve sang afterward, to everyone's delight.
Then Jimpson placed Jim's box of tricks upon the parlor table
And Jim began to give his show as well as he was able.

5.—Though Genevieve was nervous, Jim performed with easy skill
And made a great success until he said: "And now I will Present my most astounding trick. 'Twill startle you indeed!
A lady's watch, a dozen eggs and one silk hat I'll need!"

6.—He borrowed Mrs. Bullion's watch and G. Howe Rich's hat,
In which he placed the watch and eggs and mashed the whole mass flat.
And while they gasped in wild alarm he stirred it 'round and 'round,
And said: "Now don't be frightened, please. The things are safe and sound!

7.—"Now Mr. Rich, put on your hat. You'll find it dry inside!"
And G. Howe Rich with smiles obeyed. Then, "Here! what's this?" he cried,
For from it flowed a sticky mess and then a broken watch,
And everyone was staggered, for 'twas plain there'd been a botch.

8.—Jim tried to calm his victims' wrath. No use! They left in rage.
The other guests avoided him like something in a cage.
He left the room, he sneaked upstairs, his bedroom door he shut.
"I guess," thought he, "my sphere in life is just to be a Mutt!"

New Aspects of the Bridal Veil

Pointed at the Top

LENIENCY, a short word for the departure from any strict, conventional line, has crept into the realm of bridal-veil fashions. Not such a long time ago one arrangement of the soft tulle or lace was the accepted style for the bridal headdress. Now there is a pleasing variety, which multiplies the becomingness to the happy women who walk to the altar.

A continued favoritism is accorded the caplike arrangement of hand-run lace. The soft net in this instance is placed over the hair, with a ruffle at the front and side. Over the cap the wreath of orange-flowers, tiny roses or the bride's favorite flower is placed. The ends sweep back over the shoulders and down as far as the owner wishes. Many brides use the priceless lace from the treasure-chest for this attractive drapery.

Tulle or maline is swathed around the head and ends in almost an oriental turban effect in another style. It is caught to the coiffure by threads and the folds are quite flat at the top. Orange-flowers hold down the soft fabric, and the veil floats off into filmy clouds from the wreath of blossoms.

Loops of Lace Veil

With Silk Leaves and Roses

Another arrangement of the veil is shown with a circlet of silk leaves and roses. Here the maline is caught in folds at a point in front and the tulle falls back over the hair, fastened here and there under the flowers. A low coiffure is necessary for this veil. It is very simple in arrangement, yet undeniably lovely.

If the wreath is not to your liking, try the bunch of upstanding flowers over each ear, holding loops of the tulle. Lilies-of-the-valley, spirea, orange-blossoms or any small flower can be used. The veil sweeps over the hair backward in soft folds. The top of the head is practically uncovered.

There is a high effect now in vogue, taken from the Russian peasant veil. A pointed support of small flowers is placed on a net circular band and fitted down over the head. From the top of the flowers the veil falls in long folds. It is suggestive of the Normandy arrangement, and adds to the height of the wearer.

Juliet has given us an idea for the bridal veil. A cap of pearls is placed over the head, its circular disks coming down at the ears. From under the side and back edges the veiling comes in a soft, folded arrangement. This pearl cap is especially good for regular features and carries out any decoration of pearls that may be used on the bridal gown.

Since an elegant simplicity should characterize every bridal gown, the only opportunity for originality and decorative touches comes in the draping of the veil.

Remember that any becoming arrangement is permissible this year. The new aspects of the bridal veil are promising in the general beauty that they show.

COMMON SENSE in the HOME
EDITED by MARION HARLAND

COOKERY FOR THE INVALID.

ONE of the brightest of cookery feats understood is that of providing food for a sick person.

Stop and think about it a little. When some one is sick in the house what are your ideas for feeding him? You may feel that beef tea and gruel and toast are the correct thing, you may have some ideas about jelly and clam broth and a broiled squab. Does your fancy go beyond that?

If the patient is well or departs this life promptly you may have need for no further knowledge. But if he lingers for a long time in a half recovered condition, able perhaps to take something besides milk and broth, what do you give him?

Don't think you will receive valuable suggestions from your doctor unless he is an exception to the general rule. If he has any ideas they probably revolve in a narrow circle and end pretty nearly where they began. One doctor I knew always advised clam broth or mutton; another made his pièce de resistance of malted milk. Still a third had no famous beyond rice boiled in milk and beef tea.

So it is worth while for you to learn a little something about invalid cookery on the chance that you may some day need it, as you might take a course in First Aid to the Injured. You never can tell when occasion may arise to make your knowledge worth while. The following recipes can be commended as good and their fitness to the especial case of sickness you may have on hand can be determined by the doctor and nurse:

* *

Recipe for Beef Tea.

BEEF TEA.—Have a pound of beef from the round chopped coarsely and put it into a broad topped glass jar with a pint of cold water; let it stand for two hours, stirring it from time to time. Set the jar in an outer vessel of cold water, bring this slowly to the boil, and let it cook for an hour after reaching this point. Salt the liquid to taste before giving it to the patient.

BROILED BEEF TEA.—Broil half a pound of round steak just enough to start the juice to flowing. Two or three minutes over a clear fire should do this. Cut it then into small pieces, put it into a bowl with a half cup of hot water—it should be almost boiling—let it stand for five minutes and squeeze the juice from the meat in a meat or vegetable press. Add salt to taste. When you heat it for the patient, be sure it does not come to the boil.

CHICKEN BROTH.—Clean a chicken and cut it apart, removing all the fat possible, dip the feet in boiling water, scald off the skin, put all the meat, bones, and feet over the fire with cold water, bring to the boil slowly and let it simmer until the meat is tender enough to slip from the bones and to fall apart when touched with a fork. Set aside to cool on the bones and when entirely cold skim off all the fat. This may be used for frying or shortening.

If you wish the broth clear, you can use the white and shell of an egg in clearing it as you would in coffee, putting these with the strained broth, letting it come to a sharp boil and then removing the scum which rises to the top. Season the broth to taste with salt, pepper, and any other seasoning you may wish. A few drops of onion juice and a dash of celery salt are not amiss if the patient is convalescent, or you may squeeze in a little lemon juice. You may vary it further by adding rice and barley, which have been previously soaked and cooked tender, by putting milk with it or a teaspoonful of whipped cream on top. All these "trimmings" will be determined by the condition of the invalid who is to eat it, as well as by his taste.

Preparing Clam Broth.

CLAM BROTH.—Wash and scrub six large shells containing clams and put them over the fire with a cupful of water. The shells will open and the juice from the clams come with the water. When this stage is reached the broth is practically done. Remove the shells and the clams and serve the broth. It will not need salt, but you may add whipped cream to it, or plain cream, if the patient is able to have it.

MUTTON AND RICE BROTH.—Cut the meat from a neck of mutton and have the bones well cracked; put them over the fire with a quart of cold water, heat slowly, and simmer until the bones are bare and the meat cooked to shreds. Set aside to cool, skim off the fat, put in a cupful of boiled rice, cook fifteen minutes, add half a cupful of milk and a beaten egg. Season to taste with salt.

ARROWROOT JELLY.—Add four teaspoonfuls of Bermuda arrowroot wet in a little cold water to two teacupfuls of boiling water, boil for three minutes, and take from the fire. Turn into jelly glasses and when perfectly cold eat with sugar and cream. This is palatable to nearly every one and most digestible.

Arrowroot jelly has been a standby in illness in my own family for at least three generations and is a firm dependence in all sickness.

The above recipes have been for dishes which can be taken in almost any case of serious illness.

How shall the diet be varied for the convalescent? Here are a few suggestions:

Broiling Chicken in Oven.

OVEN BROILED CHICKEN.—Cut from a broiler the leg or the wing and breast, as the patient prefers dark meat or light. Lay it in a clean, hot dripping pan, and cook in a moderately hot oven, turning the chicken several times and rubbing it with butter as you do so. This method of broiling the chicken preserves the juices better than ordinary broiling. If you are not sure of its tenderness lay it covered over a pan of boiling water, on a gridiron or toaster, for half an hour before it goes into the oven.

MINCED CHICKEN ON TOAST.—Cut the meat from the bones of stewed or roast or broiled chicken and divide it into inch cubes. Make a white sauce by cooking together a half tablespoonful of flour and one of butter until they bubble, pour on them a half cup of milk, stir to a smooth sauce, and put the chicken in this. Season to taste with salt or celery salt. Or if you prefer you may use the broth in which the chicken was cooked instead of the milk. Serve on slices of toast, buttering these lightly.

BROILED TENDERLOIN OR CHOPS.—If you are cooking the beef, have a piece of the tenderloin cut nearly an inch thick and broil this or the chop for about ten minutes, turning often. If the patient likes rare beef, cook it less time than for the one whose preference is for meat well done. Dress with butter and a little salt and pepper and let it stand covered for two minutes before serving.

To Prepare Pan Roast Oysters.

PAN ROAST OYSTERS.—Moisten a thin slice of toast in oyster liquor and lay it in the bottom of a good sized nappy with straight sides. Lay three or four oysters on this, divide a teaspoonful of butter into small pieces and lay on the oysters, dust with salt and set in the oven, covered, until the oysters grow plump and the edges crimp. Serve at once.

Be sure always to have the food served daintily, with fresh papery, dainty china, and attractive garnishing, with perhaps a flower laid by the plate.

STEWED OYSTERS.—Heat the liquor from half a pint of oysters and drop the oysters into this when it is scalding hot. Cook until the oyster frills begin to curl, add two teaspoonfuls of butter, half a cup of hot milk, salt to taste, and take at once from the fire. If you let them stew longer than this they will toughen.

Never discourage an invalid's appetite by offering him a large portion. It is better he should ask for more than turn in disgust from too big a supply.

CREAM TOAST.—This is another sick-room "institution" in our family, and I can commend it for the invalid of all degrees and stages of convalescence.

Trim the crust from a couple of inch thick rounds of bread, toast a delicate brown, and butter lightly. Lay in a deep bowl and pour over it enough milk to cover it, making this more than half cream if possible, or if not, enriching the milk by the addition of a teaspoonful—heaping—of butter. Set the bowl in the oven, covered, and let the contents bake for ten minutes, uncover long enough to crisp on top, and serve in the dish in which it was cooked. If you like you may sprinkle a little salt over each layer, but usually the butter supplies enough salt.

When properly made it is delicious, nutritious, and digestible, and a different thing from the ordinary milk toast.

"One of the Branches of Cookery Least Understood Is That of Providing Food for a Sick Person."

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND

IMPORTANT NOTICE

BECAUSE of the enormous number of letters sent to the department I must ask contributors to limit their communications to 100 words, except in cases of formulas or recipes which require greater space. I want all my correspondents to have a showing in the Corner, and if my request in this respect is complied with it will be possible to print many more letters.

Attention is called to the fact that Marion Harland cannot receive money for patterns, as she has no connection with any department that sells them. Marion Harland.

"I HAVE been on the lookout for a long time for a recipe for tomato wine. Unless I mistake, it is your your own. I have seen it somewhere, I know.

"If it is not too much trouble and you can conveniently grant the favor, will you have printed in the Helping Hand the following recipes?

"1. Tomato wine.

"2. Rhubarb sauce. With the pieces left whole after they are steamed or cooked. Please say if water is added to the sauce and, if so, how much.

"3. Chinese chop suey (not chicken).

"4. Plain omelet, without water or milk, and is it called 'French' or 'English'?

"Mrs. W. T. C."

Are you sure that I have ever given a recipe for tomato wine? A long search through books and manuscripts fails to produce the formula. I am therefore constrained to refer the request to the constituency. I have a vague recollection of having heard of the beverage. I do not think that I ever had the recipe. I am positively certain that I never tasted it. Will the housemother who knows how to make it clear the fog from my senses and oblige our correspondent?

Recipe for Rhubarb Sauce.

RHUBARB SAUCE.—Scrape the stalks carefully. Do not peel them. The color and flavor are improved by leaving on the inner skin. With a sharp knife cut the stalks into pieces an inch long and leave in iced water for an hour. Weigh the fruit and allow half a pound of sugar to each pound of rhubarb. Put into the inner vessel of a double boiler, scattering the sugar between the layers of dripping wet pieces. Add no other water. Cover, and set in the boiler of warm (not hot) water and bring slowly to the boil. Cook until the rhubarb is tender and clear, but not broken. Take from the fire and let it cool in the covered inner vessel.

Eat cold. You may seal this sauce while it is hot, in glass fruit cans, wrap in thick paper, and keep the year around.

Rhubarb prepared in this way is a different conserve from the "common garden variety" seen upon most tables.

"I regret to say that I have no recipe for chop suey except such as has chicken as the main ingredient. Our housemother may help us out here, too. The Chinese dish bearing the name, obtained from a Chinese cook, is a fricassee of chicken and mushrooms. I thought it the only dish known by this title. Again I appeal to our wiser cooks.

AN ENGLISH OMELET.—Break six eggs, the whites and yolks into separate bowls. Beat the yolks thick and smooth. Add a saltspoonful of salt to the whites and whip to a standing froth. With a few quick strokes fold the whites into the yolks. Have a tablespoonful of butter hissing hot, but not scorched, in a frying pan. Turn the beaten eggs into this. Keep the omelet from sticking to the sides of the pan by running a knife blade around it now and then. As the omelet thickens shake the pan gently from side to side to keep it clear of the bottom. There is a knack in doing this you would do well to learn.

When the omelet is "set" fold it over upon itself with a broad spatula; turn upon a hot dish and sprinkle lightly with salt and pepper. Serve at once.

This is your plain English omelet. You may vary it by sifting grated cheese over it before folding, and upon the surface after it is dished. It is nice with stewed and strained tomato sauce poured between the sides and about it as it lies in the dish. Or it may be converted into a sweet course for luncheon by substituting jelly or jam for the tomato.

Dress Patterns Wanted.

"I am a seamstress by profession and my charges are so low I can hardly afford to buy my patterns. Yet I must have them. They make my work ever so much easier than it would otherwise be. I see that a dressmaker offers patterns for which she has no use. Could I have some of them? I should like to get patterns for ladies' waists and skirts of the styles of 1911 and 1912.

"If the member who has them to spare will grant my request I shall be more than grateful.

"Here is a hint that may interest and help some of those who make their own gowns, especially cotton dresses for housework. If they will make two waists for each skirt, buttoning skirt and waist together at the waist line, or even basta them together and conceal the 'join' with a belt, they will be well repaid. One skirt outwears two waists and one may make herself decent in a few minutes when her waist is soiled by slipping it off and putting on another. I have done this with my house dresses for years, and find it a saving in many ways. M. P."

I am sorry that the dressmaker who put patterns at our disposal has no more to give away. All have been called for. I pass your request down the line, keeping your address.

The suggestion concerning the two waists is good. Many women who cannot afford to have entire evening and dinner dresses made every season have two waists apiece for silk, satin, and velvet gowns—a high necked for afternoon "functions"—luncheon and the like—and one cut lower in the neck for dinner and evening parties. In this way one has not the mortification always of appearing in the same costume whenever one is invited out.

* *

Three Requests for Help.

"1. Will you please print for nursery use suggestions how to treat children when they are suddenly attacked with croup, or how to manage a child which has whooping cough?

"2. Menus for formal and informal dinners, teas, and luncheons published in the Helping Hand now and then would be highly appreciated by all of us. Is the word 'dinner' used now more generally than 'supper' when applied to a meal served at 6 o'clock?

"3. Some hints on the best way of serving formal meals would be helpful. For example, are cocktails eaten with a fork or spoon? M. A. G."

First and foremost in your list stands a request I must negative. The rules of this department emphatically forbid the publication of medical prescriptions of any kind and for any malady whatsoever. The wisdom of this prohibition, which has come to me from headquarters, is obvious. No physician of repute is willing to prescribe for a patient he has not seen, and no two people have constitutions exactly alike or live in precisely the same circumstances. Were I to tell one mother what to do for her croupy child, the regimen might help that particular baby, possibly, and be fatal to the child of her neighbor. It is not safe to meddle with human health and life. Beyond advising obedience to general health laws applicable to every man, woman, and child, I do not presume to dictate treatment of any of the ills to which mortal flesh is heir.

I am thus explicit in setting before my family the true state of the case because of the multiplicity of requests for information as to what one should do who would get rid of warts, rheumatism, smallpox, diphtheria, locomotor ataxia, and a host of other major and minor maladies. Sometimes I am sharply berated for not publishing letters recommending patent medicines which have "cured incurables" in the writer's own family. One woman withdrew her subscription because I would not relate how she cured ringing in the ears by pouring upon the ear drum a powerful acid that "produced intense pain."

Surely in the publication of what will bring the greatest good to the greatest number of constituents something must be left to the discretion of a well meaning editor.

No Space fo. "Functions."

If correspondents will write to me for any particular menu it will be supplied with pleasure through the Helping Hand. I have not room for haphazard directions for "functions" that may not be at all what is wanted by the rank and file of readers.

You may call the 4 or 7 o'clock meal by either name as best suits the character of the repast. A dinner presupposes soup and the regular progress of courses, the table being cleared for each before the next is set on. The form of the meal varies from the family dinner—consisting of soup, meat, two or three vegetables, and a dessert, with perhaps a cup of black coffee as a "settler"—to the dinner party caterers call a "course dinner." This is prefaced by an "appetizer" in the shape of a cocktail of some kind or grapefruit, grapes, or other fruit served in fanciful style; or perhaps caviare, raw oysters, clams, mushrooms, or other delicacy; fish, entrées, Roman punch, vegetables of the season, one served with each course in which they appear; hors d'œuvres (celery, olives, and the like), a salad, ices, crackers and cheese, and finally black coffee with perhaps a glass of liqueur to wind up with.

I make room here for a modest dinner party menu which is within the compass of the housewifely ability of a hostess of moderate means.

MENU FOR SMALL DINNER PARTY.

Raw Oysters.
[If in season; if not Fruit Cocktails.]
Cream of Asparagus Soup.
Smelts with Lemon Sauce.
Potatoes à la Parisienne. Fish.
Crown Roast of Lamb. Mint Sauce.
Green Peas served with Lamb. Currant Jelly.
Lettuce Salad. French Dressing.
Thin Slices Brown Bread passed with Salad.
Ice Cream. Cake.
Crackers. Cheese.
[De Brie, Roquefort, or Camembert.]
Black Coffee.
[Usually served in drawing room.]

This may serve not as a model but as a general guide in getting up the late dinner to which several guests whom the hostess desires to honor have been invited. Of course our correspondent does not wish a menu for the long drawn out affair of ten or twelve courses, punctuated by four or five kinds of wine and made memorable by the introduction of costly dainties unknown to most of us even by name, such entertainments as figure in "society notes by our special correspondent."

3. Fruit cocktails are eaten with a spoon: oyster and clam cocktails with a fork; cocktails compounded of various liquors—vermouth, gin, etc.—are sipped from the glass.

To Clean Tan Dress.

"I had the misfortune to soil badly the bottom of a light tan dress. I cleaned it with chloroform, and, while it removed the spots, still the dress really looks worse than before, as the chloroform left an irregular streak or water mark wherever I touched it to the cloth.

"Can you suggest some way to remove this, or do you think it will be necessary to send the garment to the cleaners? Any advice you can give will be appreciated.

"H. M. K."

My advice is not to touch the dress in the hope of bettering it. If it were silk I might suggest a possible means of removing the streaks. As it is, send the injured garment to a responsible cleaner. I am afraid it may have to be dyed. But try the cleaner first.

Plea of Stamp Collector.

"Seeing how letters upon almost every imaginable phase of human need are answered in your exchange, I venture to put in a petition for stamps and scraps.

"I should like to get stamps, used or unused, foreign and domestic. I want particularly revenue stamps. I am a fanatic collector.

"As to scraps, I should like pictures bits left from home dressmaking and large squares for patchwork, crazy quilts, and the like.

"My parents do not allow me to go in the evening with boys and girls unless we have a chaperon. That is my freedom—and then only when I am acquainted with my companions.

"If I had a few pretty cast-off satin, or velvet I could make many little trifles and ornaments to wear coming summer, and enjoy the making as much as if I were out roaming the city or country with wild young people. I am fond of my needle and of fancy work, but where to get the materials for my work is the puzzle. I am almost 14 years old.

"Miss B. H."

Again a prospective housewife after my own heart! Who would fit herself for the office of wife by training her needle.

She has a taste for collecting stamps. In appreciation of the commendable quality displayed in her request for parental views upon the subject of playing in the streets and lanes after dark, we advise her to see that both her requests are granted, and promptly. She is in training for membership in our ranks of needle workers.

* *

Recipe for Cookies.

"I contribute a recipe for cookies especially convenient for the use of small children. The cakes are wholesome and generally liked by the little folks.

"OATMEAL DROP CAKES.—Two cups of sugar, scant cup of butter, cup of raisins, one cup of sour milk, teaspoonful each of soda, cinnamon, nutmeg, three cups of oatmeal, one cup flour.

"Cream the butter and sugar, add eggs, then add the milk, the soda, dissolved in a little hot water, and the spices, the oatmeal and flour, well mixed last. Drop in 'batches' upon a well greased pan and bake. Schoolboys are said to be fond of these cakes.

"I have a plain go-cart robe, a bonnet pattern and material for both of the same which I shall be happy to send to some needy mother who will use them.

"Do you suppose that any of the members has tucked away in a corner or out of the way place a pair of cast-off boots that her laddie has outgrown, which he would be willing to send to some other little fellow who could make good use of them? He is 6 years old and wears a No. 11 shoe. It would be a great relief to his mother if he could do so, and a delight to him.

THE popularity of French knots is still undiminished, and I gladly offer today a pretty blouse design that is planned for a transparent yoke of net, silkover valenciennes or insertion whipped together in rows. This, by the way, may be basted on the back of the material, and when the scallops are embroidered, the stitches may be made through the lace. Afterward the lawn or cotton goods may be cut away and the raw edges overcast. If you prefer adjustable guimpes, it were well to strengthen the bias line of scallops by a straight cotton tape or fold of the goods. Apply this to the underside after working the scallops.

If you transfer the pattern, let me entreat you not to forget the back of your blouse. Continue the scallops in either a shallow curved line, following the curve of the neck line, or in a pointed effect that is not so deep. Yokes should never be quite so deep in back as in front.

After transferring the graceful design use soft mercerized cotton and make the blossoms with French knots, that may be either of one size or of a smaller size toward the outer groups.

Work the slender leaves at the base in solid stitch. Use outline stitches for the stem, or very fine stem stitches. The former can be given a cordlike effect by whipping the overlapped stitches together with a second treatment.

In working the leaves a slight padding only is necessary. Work solid, as they are slender, and I think that solid work is required on this design to relieve the French knots.

Pad the scallops and work in buttonhole stitches; if you wish to make assurance doubly sure, buttonhole the edges a second time. This prevents fraying.

A part of the spray should decorate the back. Arrange it so that the stem begins at the shoulder seam, sweeping downward toward the hem at the center of the back.

Many colored effects are being shown this year. White combined with pale green in stem and leaves is lovely. The green tone can be repeated by piping the collar of the lace yoke with silk or running a double chain stitch along the

OLD-FASHIONED TRIM

A FEATURE of the newest summer frocks is the old-fashioned trimmings that recall those quaint pictures published in the "fashion plates" of nearly half a century ago.

Our mothers and grandmothers took particular delight in putting all sorts of curious stitchery on their "best dresses." Housekeeping was laid aside when the dressmaker made her semiannual visit to their homes, for the amount of work required on a single costume occupied the time for an entire week. Although women of today have less time to spend on needlework, there are many dainty trimmings that can easily be made at home and are fascinating pick-up—or porch work. Frills, ruffles and quillings require handwork. The taffeta gown must have yards of quaint adornment.

For the popular scalloped ruffles, cut the silk on the bias the desired width, lay it flat on a table and, having previously cut a pattern of the scallops from stiff cardboard on which a saucer or small plate has been laid to mark the curved edge, then cut scallops evenly on the taffeta.

Turn the edge back one inch and stitch on the machine, or finish with a narrow cord on the edge.

Run two drawthreads through the top of the ruffle, one-half inch apart and one inch from the edge. This is a very effective trimming.

Another pretty way to finish scalloped edges is to turn the material back one-half inch and buttonhole the edge with a contrasting color of silk, using the "blanket" stitch. If the material is sheer, work a small coinspot in each scallop.

"Ruche" quilling is made of stripe of silk cut on the straight of the material and having each edge pinked. Double box plaits are then laid close together, having the edge of each top plait tacked together in the center.

A box-plaited ruche differs slightly from ruche quilling, in that the material has the under portion turned, while single box plaits are caught together in the center.

"Shell" trimming is made of two-inch wide ribbon, or hemmed edges.

Run a dark thread through the ribbon, forming a true bias. When the shells fit length trimming is ob

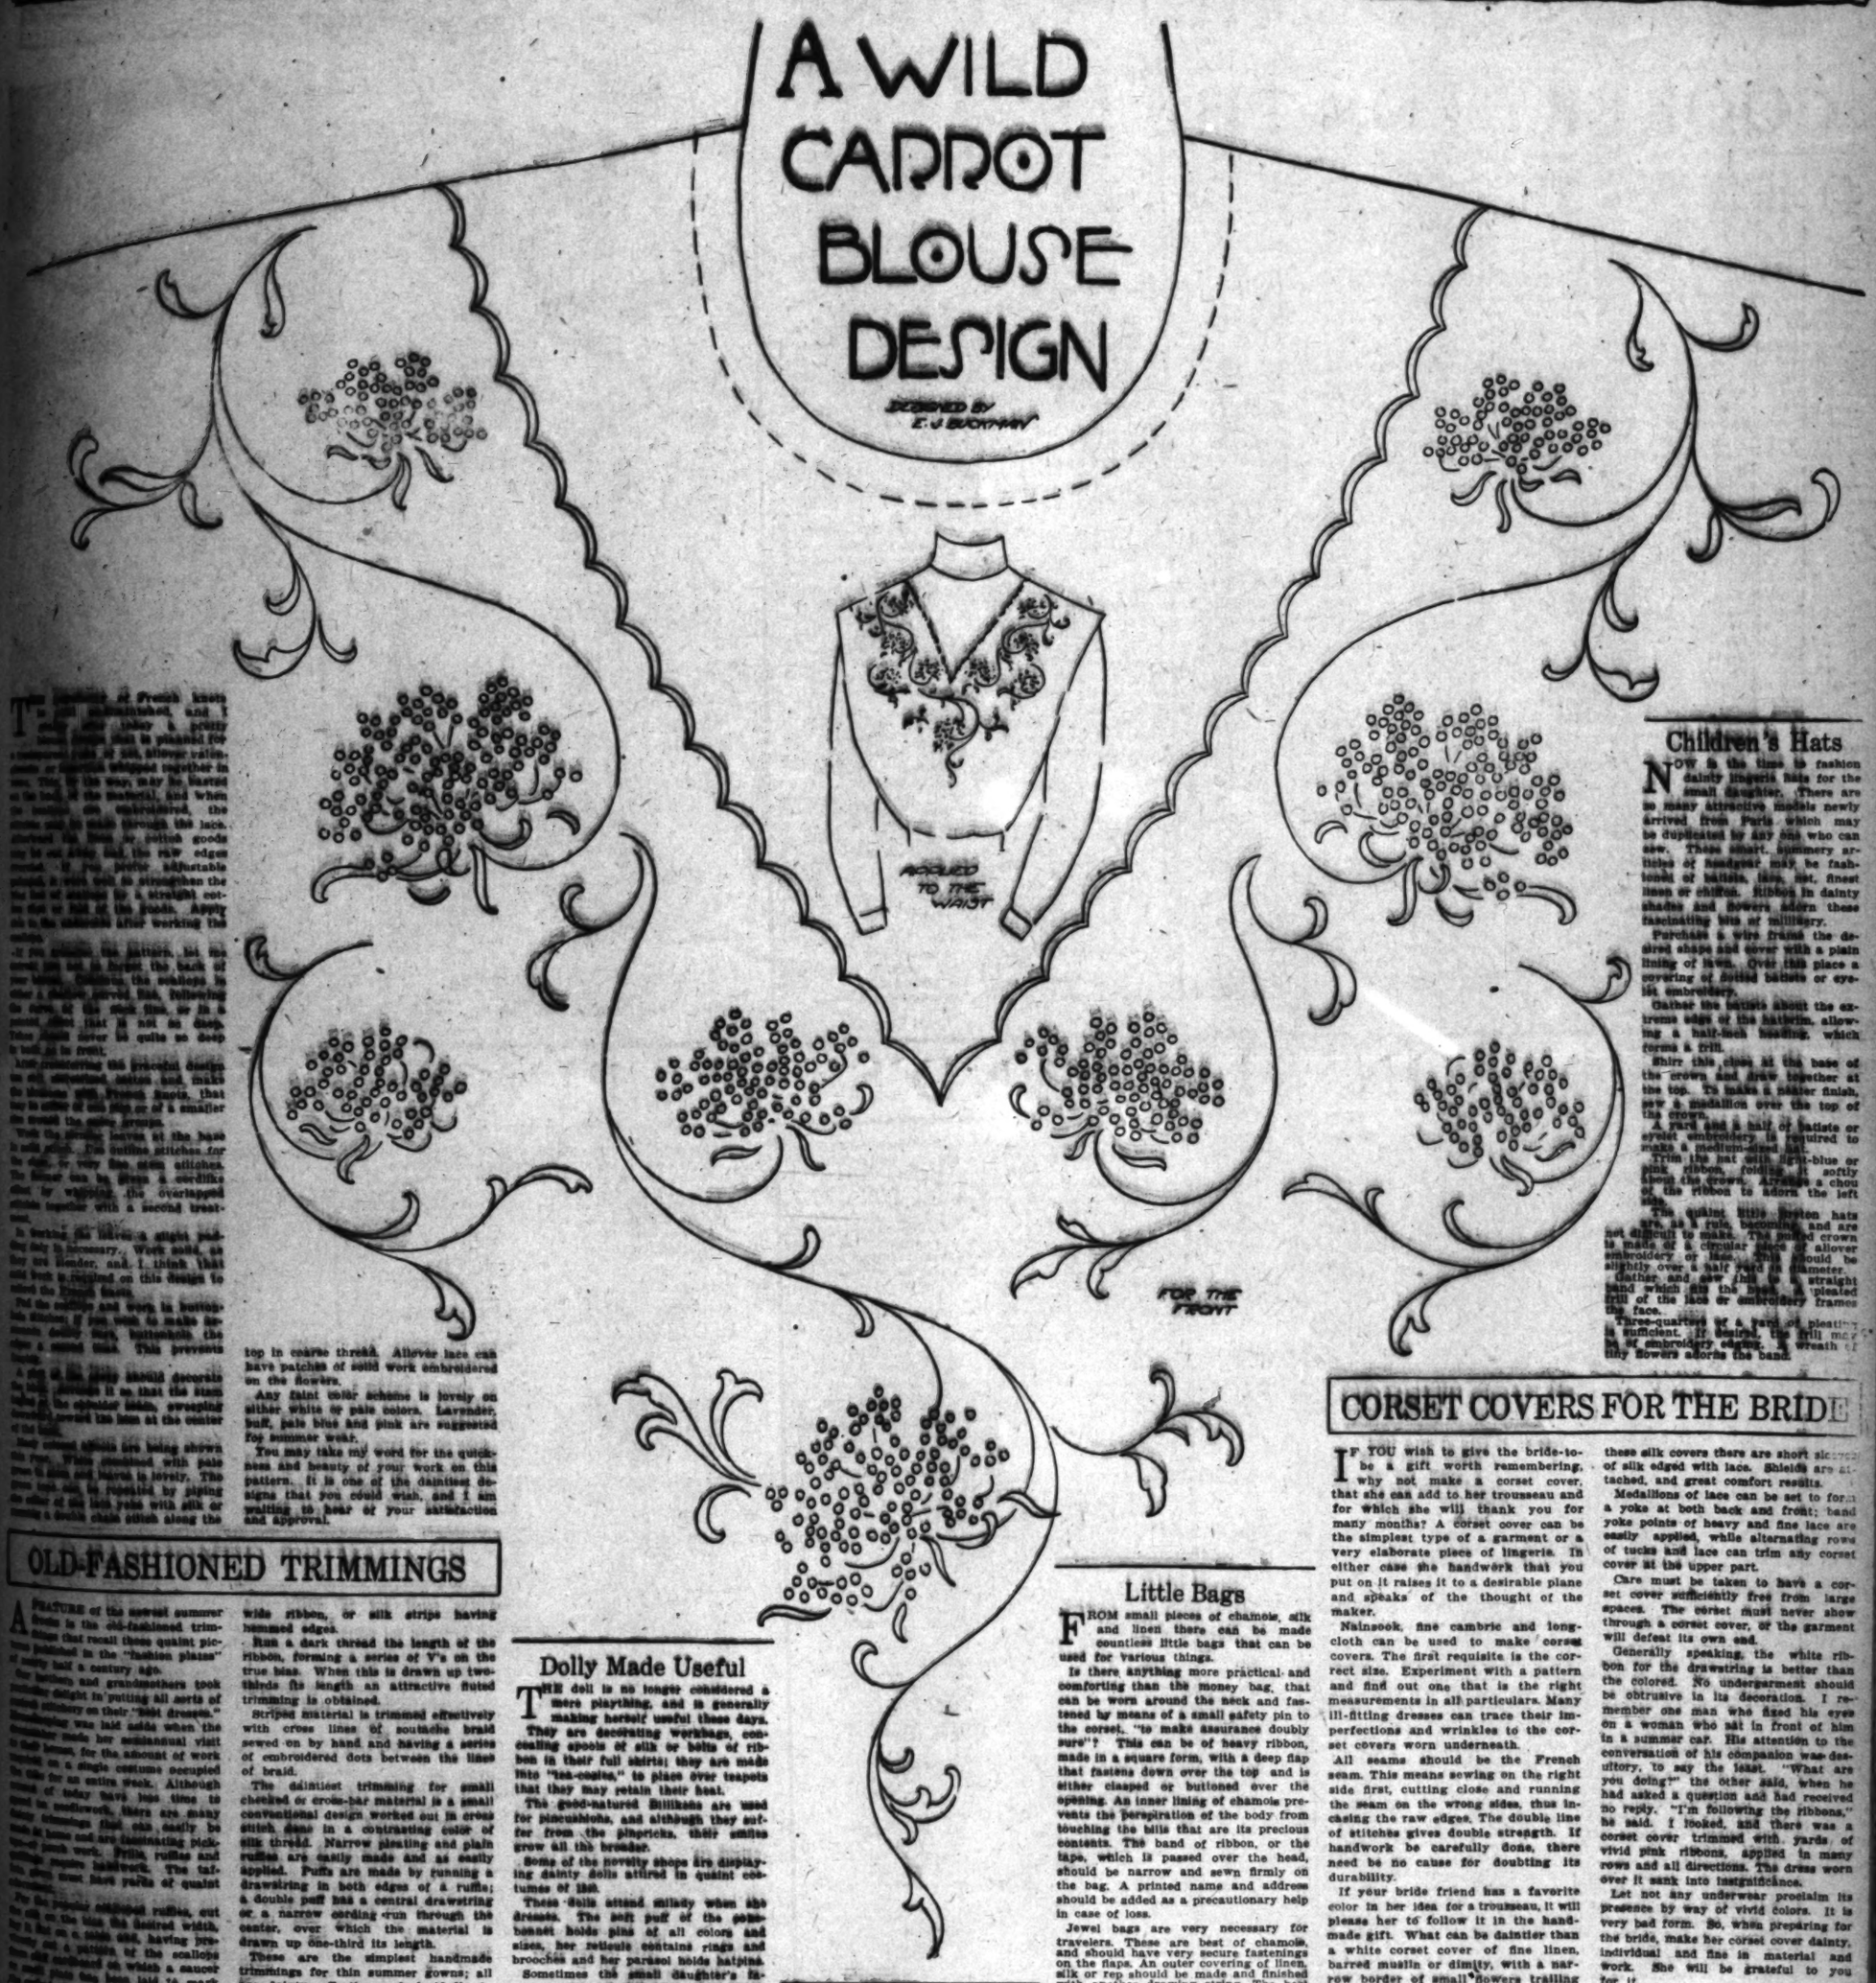
For the INDUSTRIOUS NEEDLEWOMAN

By ADELAIDE BYRD



The combination of French knots is still maintained, and I really must admit a pretty blouse design that is planned for a contrasting yoke of net, allover valenciennes or filmy whipped together in one. This, by the way, may be basted on the back of the material, and when the needlework, the embroidered, the seam will be made through the lace. Started the lining of cotton goods may be cut likely that the raw edges round. If you prefer adjustable petticoat, a cord will be strengthen the top line of neckline by a straight cotton tape or fold of the goods. Apply this to the underside after working the collar.

If you consider the pattern, let me caution you not to forget the back of your blouse. Outline the scallops in color a shade darker than, following to curve of the stock line, or in a pointed effect just as not so deep. Take stitch never be quite so deep in back as in front.

Now concerning the French design in all embroidered cotton and, make the thickness with French knots, that way to either of the two or of a smaller the result the entire arrange.

Work the circular leaves at the base in satin stitch. Use outline stitches for the stem, or very fine stem stitches. The flower can be given a cordlike effect by whipping the overlapped stitches together with a second treatment.

In working the leaves a slight padding duty is necessary. Work solid, as they are slender, and I think that solid work is required on this design to relieve the French knots.

Pad the scallops and work in buttonhole stitches. If you wish to make the scallops daintier work, buttonhole the edge a second time. This prevents fraying.

A row of the picot should decorate the lower edge of the blouse, set so that the stem comes to the opposite point, sweeping upward and down at the center of the back.

Many colored effects are being shown this year. White combined with pale green or pink and mauve is lovely. The green used can be repeated by piping the collar of the lace yoke with silk or running a double chain stitch along the top in coarse thread. Allover lace can have patches of solid work embroidered on the flowers.

Any faint color scheme is lovely on either white or pale colors. Lavender, buff, pale blue and pink are suggested for summer wear.

You may take my word for the quickness and beauty of your work on this pattern. It is one of the daintiest designs that you could wish, and I am waiting to hear of your satisfaction and approval.

OLD-FASHIONED TRIMMINGS

A FEATURE of the newest summer frocks is the old-fashioned trimmings that recall those quaint pictures published in the "fashion plates" of nearly half a century ago.

Our mothers and grandmothers took peculiar delight in putting all sorts of ruffled millinery on their "best dresses." Remembrance was laid aside when the dressmaker made her semiannual visit to their home, for the amount of work required on a single costume occupied the time for an entire week. Although many of today have less time to spend in needlework, there are many fancy trimmings that can easily be made at home and are fascinating pickings for punch work. Frills, ruffles and puffings require handiwork. The taffeta gowns must have yards of quaint decoration.

For the popular ruffled, cut the silk on the bias the desired width, hem it flat on a table end, having previously cut a pattern of the scallops from stiff cardboard on which a saucer or small plate may been laid to mark the curved edge, then cut scallops evenly on the edges.

Turn the edge back one inch and catch in the position, or finish with a narrow hem.

Run gathering threads through the center of the ruffle, one-half inch apart and one inch from the edge. This is a very effective trimming.

Another pretty way to finish scalloped edges is to turn the material back one inch and buttonhole the edge with floss or silk, using the color of silk. If the material is thick, such a small scallop in each scallop.

Shirred ruffling is made of strips of the material cut on the straight of the material and having each edge pinked. Together, having the edge of each top and bottom in the center. Three ruffles drawn slightly full make a dainty trimming. In this the material is cut in strips, while double box plaiting is made of two-inch wide ribbon, or silk strips having hemmed edges.

Run a dark thread the length of the ribbon, forming a series of V's on the true bias. When this is drawn up two-thirds its length an attractive fluted trimming is obtained.

Striped material is trimmed effectively with cross lines of soutache braid sewed on by hand and having a series of embroidered dots between the lines of braid.

The daintiest trimming for small checked or cross-bar material is a small conventional design worked out in cross stitch done in a contrasting color of silk thread. Narrow pleating and plain ruffles are easily made and as easily applied. Puffs are made by running a drawstring in both edges of a ruffle; a double puff has a central drawstring or a narrow cording run through the center, over which the material is drawn up one-third its length.

These are the simplest handmade trimmings for thin summer gowns; all are dainty, effective and decidedly in mode.

How to Transfer

HERE are suggestions for transferring the pattern before you to any material before working.

Perhaps the easiest way is the "window-pane" method. This is successful when the material is thin, like linen, batiste, etc. Pin the sheet of paper and the material together and hold them up against the glass of a window. With a sharp pencil draw on the material the design, which can be easily seen through the goods. If one-half of the design only be given, unpin the paper and turn the other side to the fabric. The strong light behind will make it plain.

If you have carbon paper, you should place the sheet between your fabric and the newspaper. This latter is on top. With a sharp pencil go over the outline of the design. The impression will be left in fine lines and will last until worked. This method is successful on heavy material.

Dolly Made Useful

THE doll is no longer considered a mere plaything, and is generally making herself useful these days. They are decorating workbags, concealing spools of silk or bolts of ribbon in their full skirts; they are made into "tea-cosies," to place over teapots that they may retain their heat.

The good-natured Billikens are used for pincushions, and although they suffer from the pinpricks, their smiles grow all the broader.

Some of the novelty shops are displaying dainty dolls attired in quaint costumes of 1830.

These dolls attend milady when she dresses. The soft puff of the poke bonnet holds pins of all colors and sizes, her reticule contains rings and brooches and her parasol holds hatpins.

Sometimes the small daughter's favorite doll meets with an accident which leaves nothing intact but the head. Make one of these attractive doilies in the following manner:

Cut a cone-shaped framework of buckram or cardboard. This is formed of a semicircle, with an opening in which to fit the doll's head.

Make a paper pattern first, so that the size may be exact. Fasten the sides together and sew the doll into her stiff skirt.

Sew leaden weights at the bottom of the frame, so that she may stand firmly.

To attractively dress dolly, use scraps of silk, ribbon, lace or figured dimity.

One lovely doll wore a frock of cream silk dotted with pink roses.

The skirt should be very full and the bodice short-waisted. Over this make a tiny kerchief of white muslin.

The bonnet should be pink silk and the reticule of the same material, opening and closing with a drawstring of ribbon.

The parasol, also pink, should be pleated silk attached to a "crooked" handle of wire wound with ribbon.

A large muff may be substituted for the parasol if desired.

This fascinating little maid is a delightful addition to the dresser, and at the same time performs a mission in life.

Detachable Flounces

WITH the advent of the thin summer frock comes the demand for the lingerie petticoat. Detachable flounces are a practical article to have, especially when traveling.

A strip of linen four yards long and a half yard wide is necessary to make a flounce. This may be tucked in groups of five tucks with strips of lace insertion between, or it may be plain, with strips of the lace placed every three inches.

The bottom of the flounce should be finished by an edging of the lace. Gather this strip and sew it to a strip of material. This may be buttoned or basted to the skirt, if desired.

The one-piece slips often have flounces of silk; these may be removed when the slip is laundered.

Flounces formed of narrow pleatings of silk and mull are extremely dainty. The narrow pleatings are sewn to a wide flounce of plain lawn.

Little Bags

FROM small pieces of chamois, silk and linen there can be made countless little bags that can be used for various things.

Is there anything more practical and comforting than the money bag, that can be worn around the neck and fastened by means of a small safety pin to the corset, "to make assurance doubly sure"? This can be of heavy ribbon, made in a square form, with a deep flap that fastens down over the top and is either clasped or buttoned over the opening. An inner lining of chamois prevents the perspiration of the body from touching the bills that are its precious contents. The band of ribbon, or the tape, which is passed over the head, should be narrow and sewn firmly on the bag. A printed name and address should be added as a precautionary help in case of loss.

Jewel bags are very necessary for travelers. These are best of chamois, and should have very secure fastenings on the flaps. An outer covering of linen, silk or rep should be made and finished with another drawing string. The best and safest method of carrying is around the neck.

Dainty littlie sachet bags can be made of pieces of ribbon that are usually thrown away. Tiny bags, one inch long, can be filled with cotton perfumed with sachet and attached to silk cord or narrow ribbon. These can be added to a coathanger, a hatstand or to a hat, inside the lining. Some of the made-to-order dresses have their allowance of tiny scented bags attached to bodice and skirt on the under surfaces. You can add this individual touch to any of your own garments.

The crefonne bag for carrying the washcloth is a joy to the week-end guest or the traveler. This can be of linen or rep if crefonne be too stiff. A lining of rubber or oilskin is necessary. The outer and inner materials should be basted and bound with ribbon or tape. Patent clasps are best for this type of bag.

For the powder leaves or puff, a tiny bag that can protect the outfit and be tucked away in the handbag can be made of dresden silk. The addition of a small reducing mirror in the bottom of the bag is worth while.

This is not mentioning the larger bags for slippers, opera glasses, handkerchiefs, etc., that occupy such an important place in the realm of accessories.

Children's Hats

NOW is the time to fashion dainty lingerie hats for the small daughter. There are so many attractive models newly arrived from Paris which may be duplicated by any one who can sew. These smart, summery articles of headwear may be fashioned of batiste, lawn, net, finest linen or chiffon. Ribbon in dainty shades and flowers adorn these fascinating bits of millinery.

Purchase a wire frame the desired shape and cover with a plain lining of lawn. Over this place a covering of dotted batiste or eyelet embroidery.

Gather the batiste about the extreme edge of the hatbrim, allowing a half-inch heading, which forms a frill.

Shirr this close at the base of the crown and draw together at the top. To make a neater finish, sew a medallion over the top of the crown.

A yard and a half of batiste or eyelet embroidery is required to make a medium-sized hat.

Trim the hat with light-blue or pink ribbon, folding it softly about the crown. Arrange a chou of the ribbon to adorn the left side.

The quaint little Dutch hats are, as a rule, becoming, and are not difficult to make. The puffed crown is made of a circular piece of allover embroidery or lace. This should be slightly over a half yard in diameter.

Gather and sew this to a straight band which fits the head. A pleated frill of the lace or embroidery frames the face.

Three-quarters of a yard of pleating is sufficient, if finished the frill may be of embroidery edging. A wreath of tiny flowers adorns the band.

CORSET COVERS FOR THE BRIDE

IF YOU wish to give the bride-to-be a gift worth remembering, why not make a corset cover, that she can add to her trousseau and for which she will thank you for many months? A corset cover can be the simplest type of a garment or a very elaborate piece of lingerie. In either case the handwork that you put on it raises it to a desirable plane and speaks of the thought of the maker.

Nainsook, fine cambric and longcloth can be used to make corset covers. The first requisite is the correct size. Experiment with a pattern and find out one that is the right measurements in all particulars. Many ill-fitting dresses can trace their imperfections and wrinkles to the corset covers worn underneath.

All seams should be the French seam. This means sewing on the right side first, cutting close and running the seam on the wrong sides, thus incasing the raw edges. The double line of stitches gives double strength. If handwork be carefully done, there need be no cause for doubting its durability.

If your bride friend has a favorite color in her idea for a trousseau, it will please her to follow it in the handmade gift. What can be daintier than a white corset cover of fine linen, barred muslin or dimity, with a narrow border of small flowers trailing around the top? This flower idea is especially easy if the happy woman be named Rose, Violet, Lillian, etc. Her name flower should be used, and dainty colors combined with white in the decoration.

If the flower border be not to your liking, work a pretty wreath in which the monogram or initial of the bride could be marked.

Perfectly plain corset covers can be headed with a casing and a narrow edge of picot, torchon or cluny. The armholes should be similarly treated, and if there be a shallow circular peplum, edge this in the same way. Work buttonholes and attach washable crochet buttons to the front fastening, placing them about two inches apart. There is nothing so annoying as gaping underwear.

If your friend has shown you an exquisite white silk petticoat, why not make a corset cover to match? In this way you will complete the underslip of silk to be worn by her with lingerie frocks of open design. In some of these silk covers there are short sleeves of silk edged with lace. Shields are attached, and great comfort results.

Medallions of lace can be set to form a yoke at both back and front; band yoke points of heavy and fine lace are easily applied, while alternating rows of tucks and lace can trim any corset cover at the upper part.

Care must be taken to have a corset cover sufficiently free from large spaces. The corset must never show through a corset cover, or the garment will defeat its own end.

Generally speaking, the white ribbon for the drawstring is better than the colored. No undergarment should be obtrusive in its decoration. I remember one man who fixed his eyes on a woman who sat in front of him in a summer car. His attention to the conversation of his companion was desultory, to say the least. "What are you doing?" the other said, when he had asked a question and had received no reply. "I'm following the ribbons," he said. I looked, and there was a corset cover trimmed with yards of vivid pink ribbons, applied in many rows and all directions. The dress worn over it sank into insignificance.

Let not any underwear proclaim its presence by way of vivid colors. It is very bad form. So, when preparing for the bride, make her corset cover dainty, individual and fine in material and work. She will be grateful to you for it.

To Adorn a Hat

A MOST attractive trimming worn upon a hat of burnt straw by a lady whose good taste is undisputed was fashioned in this manner:

A pattern for a large petal was cut and used as a guide to fashion petals from tan-colored corded silk.

Two thicknesses of silk were used for each petal; these were stitched together by the machine, turned and stitched again, a quarter inch from the extreme edge.

Twelve of these were sewn to a small disk of buckram to form a flower.

In the center of this was a chou of narrow silk fringe of tan. The center of the fringe was formed by a disk of gold cord adorned by two small tassels.

A cord of the silk finished by a row of fringe trimmed the base of the crown.

This makes an altogether smart hat. A yard of silk, five yards of fringe and two yards of gold cord are required.

The Violet Hunt

DEAR MADGE:

I am sitting at my desk with a huge bunch of violets before me and another bowl of the blossoms on the table. We went off yesterday on a violet hunt, and it was most successful.

The very sensible one of our party, Jane Baird, wore a stunning white norfolk suit of coarse linen. A red leather belt gave a touch of color to the costume, and the note was repeated in a bright-red sailor hat with a black patent-leather band. There was a yoke effect on the jacket that gave a good, smooth line at the top.

I must confess that the rest were dressed in different types of suits and frocks. Mabel Reed wore a pinkish lavender gingham dress trimmed with black and white striped bands. These were on the sleeves and in a curved band on the skirt. A slightly raised waist line was outlined by a cord.

Her sister Annabel wore a blue ratine tailored suit, with a very attractively slashed peplum on the little French coat. A high line was defined by a broad curved stitched strap that ended at the front under buttons. Black satin trimmed the pointed collar. The skirt was slashed at the side over black and trimmed with buttons and buttonholes. Stitching gave a tailored finish to the costume.

I put on my yellow linen for our trip. It had a bolero jacket with curved lower line, showing the lingerie blouse beneath. A frill of ecru net headed the top and one large linen button fastened the jacket. The sleeves had fullness at the armhole and were bell-shaped below over lace frills.

To the tune of the birds was the murmur of a brook, and I may add that no one fell in and that our pretty frocks were none the worse for their trip to the woods.

Write to me, my busy one. Are you still entertaining Bob's cousin? With love, ELEANOR.
